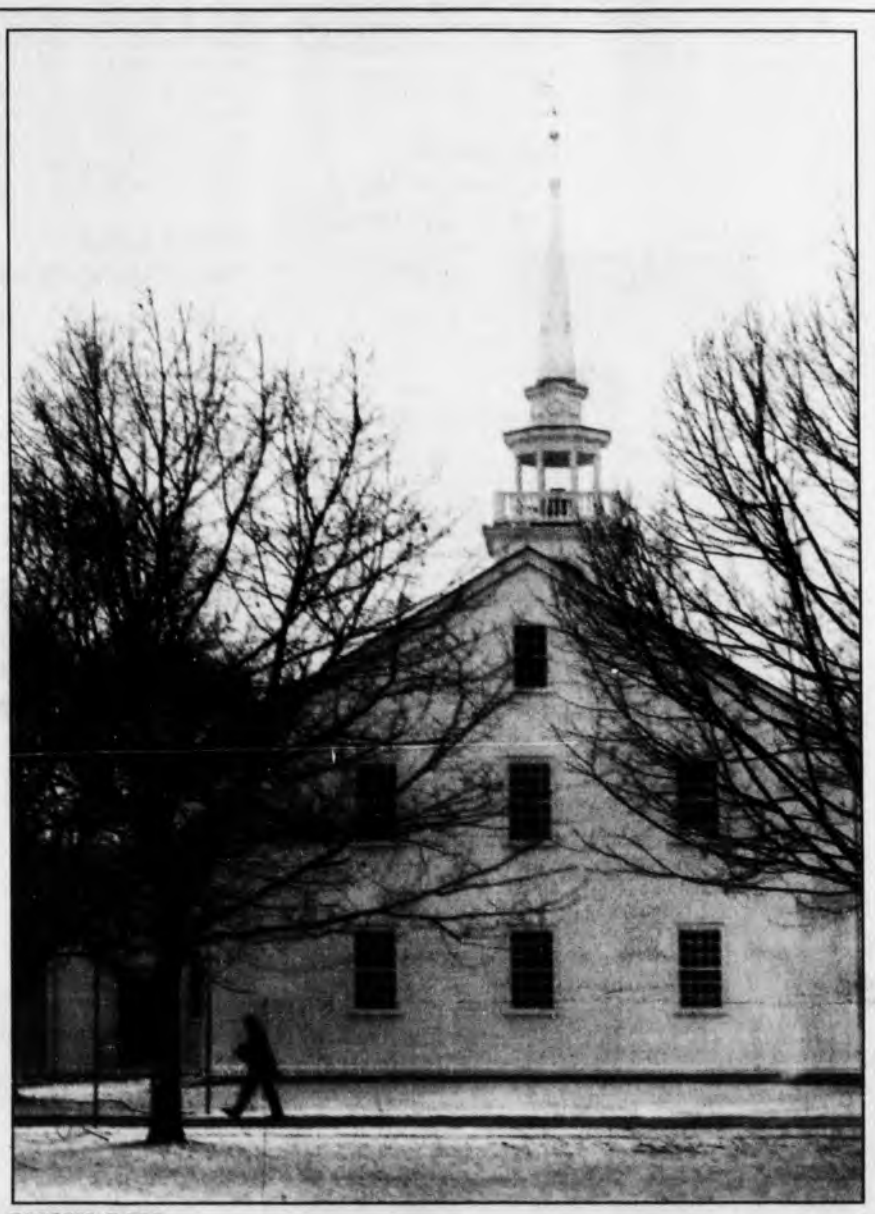
Election season to start

Selectmen unsure about another run

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The race is on and current board members up for re-election are announcing their intentions to either defend their post, or let someone else take over the reins.



There are 15 positions up for grabs this spring, which include openings on the Board of Selectmen, School Committee, Planning Board, Sewer Commission, Water Commission, Board of Health, Cohasset Housing Authority, Recreation Commission, Paul Pratt Memorial Library Trustees, and replacement for the Town Clerk and Moderator.

The Board of Selectmen and School Committee often provide exciting election contests. By press time incumbent Selectmen Fred Koed and Ronnie McMorris were still undecided about seeking reelection.

School Committee Chairman Rick Shea says he will not seek reelection.

Nomination papers became available Monday, Jan. 3, and the last day to take out papers will be Thursday, Feb. 17. Residents are not considered running for office until papers have been taken out and the Board of Registrars certifies the signatures. Only registered voters are eligible to hold an elected office, and those looking to take on a new post this year will have to compete against a good number of incumbents who would like to continue their service to the town.

Good news for Greenbush

But AfTA to appeal Army Corps permit

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

With all the train construction going on — ranging from Hingham's downtown tunnel to the layover station area in Scituate — it may surprise residents in Greenbush towns that the rail spur did not officially get the proverbial "green light" until Monday when the Army Corps of Engineers issued a permit for the $500 million project.

The Army Corps permit that was roughly 10 years in the making allows the filling in of wetlands and waterways throughout the 17.7-mile corridor that stretches from Braintree to Scituate including replacing bridges, relocating Town Brook in Hingham Square and work around Smelt Brook in Weymouth.

Proponents herald the news as the final hurdle for the always controversial and oft beleaguered project that would restore commuter rail service on the Greenbush line that was abandoned in 1959 about the time the Southeast Expressway came into existence.

"We're very happy," said Jon Carlisle, spokesman for state Transportation Sec. Daniel A. Grabauskas. "It's the final hurdle and we're pleased to have cleared it." The line is expected

Red flag raised on water quality

Should not affect sale to Hingham

By Samantha Brown and Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset is in violation of a water quality standard that could have residents purchasing water filters as a precautionary measure.

The Cohasset Water Department announced this week that tests revealed Cohasset water exceeded the maximum contaminant level for drinking water for Total Trihalomethanes or TTHMs of 80 parts per billion.

Cohasset's average over the past year is roughly 100 parts per billion.

Although there is no immediate risk from drinking water with elevated levels of TTHMs, it is a known carcinogen that if ingested over many years can cause damage to the liver, kidneys, and central nervous system, and may increase the risk of cancer. TTHMs are formed when chlorine mixes with organic matter. All water systems use chlorine to disinfect their water.

WWII Navy veteran's sacrifice remembered

By Samantha Brown

Robert E. Jason

Jan. 6, 1944 was a cold and stormy night in Cohasset. As waves crashed along the dark and rocky shoreline, Civilian Coast Watch warden Herb Jason, out on his rounds, stopped along the Jerusalem Road coast and remembers thinking, "what a terrible night to be on the ocean."

Standing alone looking out at the tumultuous seas, Herb had no idea his cousin, Robert E. Jason, an MM1c (Machinist's Mate First Class) on the Naval ship the USS St. Augustine was fighting for his life in the waters off Cape May, NJ. It was a routine trip that ended in disaster, as he and 115 other brave crew members serving during World War II lost their lives that night. Today marks the sixty-first anniversary of his date of sacrifice.

Robert, who was known around town as Bobby, grew up at 49 Cushing Road. He attended Cohasset schools, and his cousin, Betty Maree remembers Bobby's childhood pet, a talking parrot of which he was very proud.

In 1934, Bobby graduated from Cohasset High School, and six years later on Nov. 6, 1940, the handsome and strapping 6-foot-6-inch tall Bobby enlisted in the Navy at the age of 22. In April 1941, he was assigned to the USS St Augustine, a patrol boat performing convoy duty from the north Atlantic to the west Indies.

The St. Augustine, a 272-foot long patrol gunboat, was originally built in 1929 for heiress to the FW Woolworth fortune Barbara Hutton. It was built at

Straits Pond through the years and seasons

The Straits Pond Watershed Association (SPWA) is putting a call out to individuals and/or community groups seeking video footage, digital photos, or regular photos of scenes of Straits Pond. They are seeking scenes from Straits Pond through the years. They are also looking for photos taken over the coming year showing Straits Pond through the four seasons.

The association hopes to over the course of the year, to gather enough material from different views around the Pond to put together a photo collage/video of "Straits Pond Through the Years and Seasons."

Video tapes or disks with digital images or hardcopy photos may be mailed to Mr. Lawry Reid, ATTN.: SPWA - Video Project, 31 Richards Road, Hull MA 02045.

Digital photos or scanned images can be emailed to Lawry Reid at viaspeech@comcast.net

Whether mailing items or emailing them, clearly state either on the label or in your email message: the year or season; where the pictures were taken from and/or what the image is of; who took the photo/video, and for electronic photos the format they are saved in. Recommended formats are .tif, gif, .ps, or eps.

Strategic planning volunteers sought

The school department has sent out materials on the strategic planning initiative for the district, which outlines various goals for the future. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said it is critical to have community input moving forward, especially as the fiscal year 2006 budget process gets underway, and anyone interested in being part of the process is encouraged to contact the superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111.

No overnight on-street parking

Winter parking regulations are in effect through April 1, 2005.

There's no overnight on-street parking allowed during winter parking regulations.

Violators will be subject to a fine of $25.

Town Counsel RFP

The appointment of Deutsch Williams as Town Counsel will expire in July, and the Board of Selectmen has decided to put out a Request for Proposals , to see if any other law firms are interested in representing the town. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said even if the town chooses to stay with Deutsch Williams, it is good business practice to put contracts out to bid. "If you haven't done one every three years, you should," he said.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he thinks it is important to get new Town Manager Bill Griffin's input when appointing Town Counsel, and putting out an RFP will allow him to decide who he will feel comfortable working with.

"I think it's healthy for the town to be doing this in every department," said Selectman Ronnie McMorris, and she suggested the board ask for documentation of all costs that deal with retainer items. "We should review the services we've been getting," she said.

Annual spring Town Meeting date set

The Annual Town Meeting has been set for Saturday, April 2 at 10 a.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium. Articles should be submitted to the office of the Board of Selectmen no later than Thursday, Jan. 13 at 4:30 p.m.

When submitting an article that requires an appropriation, it shall include the purpose for which the funds will be expended, the anticipated funding source(s), the sponsor of the article, and the best estimate of the amounts required. As has been the board's policy in the past, requests to save a space in the Warrant will not be honored.

For more information, please contact the Board of Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Selectmen seeking committee members

There are a number of committees which will be starting up with the new year or are in need of new appointments, and the Board of Selectmen is looking for interested candidates to participate.

• In light of recent changes with the Comcast cable service in town, the Selectmen would like to reinstate the Cable Committee, which will be responsible for keeping residents informed of any changes in cable service.

• Selectmen are also looking for candidates interested in participating in a committee to review the School Committee budget process. Town Meeting voted to have TROIKA appoint the committee to take a close up look at why the school budget is over-budget. Town Moderator George Marlette will soon call a meeting to appoint interested residents.

• A Sewer Study Committee will also be formed to tackle some of the wastewater issues in town. Representatives from pertinent town boards will be on the committee, and the Selectmen are looking for three residents to participate. A charge for the committee will be drafted after the first of the year, to ensure it is not taking on the same role as the Wastewater Committee.

• A committee will need to be formed to discuss the options the town has in terms of leaving the turntable in the municipal lot uncovered permanently. The appropriate historical boards in town will be part of the discussion, as well as the Village Revitalization Committee, but Selectmen are also looking for residents to participate. The turntable project discussion will go hand-in-hand with discussion of improvements to the parking lot and the MBTA crossing at Pleasant St.

• A Beechwood Ball Park committee will be formed to help finalize plans for improvements to the area. Members of the DPW, Recreation Commission and other sports related groups will be involved as well as residents.

Residents interested in participating in any committee are encouraged to contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Cedarmere gets DEP permit

On-site system gets go-ahead

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It will be a very happy new year for Cedarmere developers, who have been granted a groundwater discharge permit from the Department of Environmental Protection, giving the go-ahead to begin construction on the site.

"We plan on breaking ground in February or March," said David Calhoun, 2 Sheldon Road, who is developing the site with his wife Kelli and their business partner Tom Ragno, of Lexington. Calhoun added if the weather cooperates, excavation on the site could take place sooner rather than later, adding "It will be late winter or early spring," he said.

However, even with an on-site permit Calhoun said, "We're maintaining our sewer application and position because that's the preferred method," of wastewater disposal for the project. Cedarmere developers still hold firm that there is capacity at the Elm Street wastewater treatment plant for the project, and they plan to continue their quest for a sewer connection.

Developments which will generate more than 10,000 gallons of wastewater per day are required to obtain a groundwater discharge permit from the DEP or a municipal sewer connection before construction can begin. Since the proposed 105-unit senior housing development was introduced to the town in early summer 2003, developers have been pursuing both options. It is anticipated Cedarmere will generate roughly 14,000 gallons of wastewater per day.

Sewer Commissioners denied the project's application for a municipal sewer connection in November 2003, and developers have appealed that decision with the courts. However, in an effort to keep the project on track, developers began working with the DEP to find an on-site wastewater solution. Originally, developers had been looking at an evaporation system for the site, but plans have changed and a reuse system has been approved, giving the project the groundwater permit it needs.

Alan Slater, Chief of Groundwater Permitting for the DEP, said the system which has been approved for Cedarmere will collect all the wastewater produced on the property and send it to a central wastewater treatment point on site. "It will be treated to a very high level," he said, adding wastewater will pass through a membrane filtration system, carbon filters, and ultimately an ultra-violet filter. He said the system is very similar to that used by the town's Elm Street wastewater treatment facility.

"The effluent limits are very strict," Slater said, because it will be a reuse system, meaning the treated wastewater will be reused for irrigation throughout the property.

With the topography of the site, there was not one single area deemed suitable for handling all the anticipated wastewater. Therefore, drip pipes will be situated at a depth of roughly 6 to 12 inches underground throughout various areas of the 41-acre site. "They will act as a means of disposal and will irrigate the green areas, which will save on water," he said.

DEP Public Affairs Director Ed Coletta said with on-site systems, the department likes to see as much reuse of water as possible as well as systems which try to be as environmentally green as possible. "Reuse of groundwater is always an important aspect," of on-site plans, he said, adding the new on-site system at Gillette Stadium in Foxboro has a reuse system which is similar to the Cedarmere system, but on a much larger scale.

'Smart growth'

While the state monitors conservation efforts of new developments through the DEP, the Department of Housing and Community Development measures smart growth aspects of a project. Cedarmere developers say there are many smart growth points their project encompasses, which the state has been glad to see, including:

- Location between two new Greenbush stations (North Scituate and Cohasset).
- Fairness to town — project is developed with the town's own senior bylaw and Master Plan.
- Open space preserved — less than 25 percent of the site is covered by impervious materials.
- Density — town bylaw allows for up to 12.5 units per acre or 512 units. Cedarmere is 105 units , 45 of which are in located in just two buildings.
- Respect for the town's character — project's shingle-style design in keeping with the town's character.
- Expand housing opportunities — 25 percent of the development is affordable housing.
- Provides transportation options — located within walking distance to shops, churches, town center. Close proximity to commuter rail stations as well as Hingham Commuter Boat. Direct access to Route 3A.
- Restore and enhance the environment — bridges and wetland restoration work designed to maximize wetland preservation and increase the quality and quantity of the natural resources.
- Creating energy-efficient homes designed to minimize maintenance, heating, cooling, electrical, water and wastewater demands.
- Development of a project which enables Cohasset to improve tax revenues without additional burdens to the existing infrastructure. The project is scheduled to contribute more than $700,000 in tax revenues with little or n o services required from the town or state.
- The project allows Cohasset to retain one of its most valued resources — its senior citizens.

Cedarmere developers brought forth plans to build their proposed senior housing project roughly 1-1/2 years ago. At that point, the town began seeking out feedback from various town boards and their consultants, as well as abutters to the property, to see what the town would like the project to include. The project is slated for the former Hayes Estate off Beechwood Street on the east side of 3A, and is planned to consist of a mix of 105-units of affordable and market rate apartments and condominiums for seniors 55 and older. "A tremendous amount of people have approached us from Cohasset that would like to live here," said Calhoun.

The project was the first to file under the town's Senior Multi-Family Overlay District bylaw, and under that bylaw, the plans become subject to review by many town boards. The town adopted the overlay bylaw at the Nov. 22 Special Town Meeting, as a way to get out from under the threat of 40B projects. Under 40B, developers can come into a town and build senior housing complexes which provide affordable housing options, but skirt around local zoning regulations. The state ultimately has the final say on what is built.

For projects built under the Senior Overlay bylaw, a 25 percent affordability requirement stands firm. Affordability regulations are written so that those residents earning less than 50 percent of the area median household income qualify as low income, those earning between 50 and 80 percent qualify as moderate income, and those earning between 80 percent and 120 percent qualify as median income. In Boston, the area median household income is $50,100 for a family of two. Affordable units must remain affordable for a minimum of 30 years.

Since Cedarmere filed its application for a special permit with the Planning Board to build under the town's overlay bylaw, a second senior housing project has surfaced, slated to be built on Sohier Street on the Cook Estate. The project has not yet submitted an application for a special permit from the Planning Board, and is searching for a wastewater solution. It had been thought the property's soils would be able to accommodate the wastewater the development will generate, but additional soil tests confirmed the site cannot. The Cook project has been temporarily put on hold as it searches for a wastewater solution, and construction cannot begin until a solution is found. Once built, the Cook Estate will consist of 95 units of senior housing.

Two train liaisons on table

Each would bring different expertise

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Three interested candidates have been interviewed to serve as the town's liaison with the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority during Greenbush construction, and two of those candidates may work together to ensure the town is fully represented.

A liaison search committee conducted interviews last week with three "very qualified" Cohasset residents. The committee, which is comprised of Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer and Fred Koed, Tax Collector/Treasurer Joe DiVito — who has been serving as Acting Special Assistant to the Town Manager for MBTA affairs — and resident Jody Butman, has concluded both Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan working together with the MBTA would be the best solution for the town.

"Tom has the best historical knowledge and he has the overwhelming support of the town," said Dormitzer. He added, "Mark has enormous field work experience," and could be very helpful in terms of going to the construction sites to ensure what is on the plans is being carried out properly. Dormitzer said it is the committee's intention that Gruber would serve as the lead contact with Brennan working under him.

Koed said it will be important to come up with a way to divide the responsibilities up to ensure if the public has a concern, they know which person they should contact. "This is the biggest project to come through here since the train originally came through," he said, and the town needs to take every precaution to protect its interests. "We can't nickel and dime it," he said. Koed said he too was very impressed with Brennan's history, as he at one point in his career supervised 1 million kilometers of trenching for cable in the United Kingdom.

> "I think it's a great idea."
> — Selectman Rob Spofford

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she thinks it is extremely important to have a clear delineation between the two jobs, and added it has to be made clear that being an advocate for residents does not mean the mitigation agreements which have been agreed upon can be changed, and new deals can be made. She said being an advocate does not mean it is appropriate to take on the role of an attorney. "We have to be clear there is some oversight," as both men will report directly to the Town Manager, who will have the ultimate say in any decisions.

Spofford echoed McMorris' sentiments and said he also wants to make it clear the liaisons represent the town as a whole, and not special interests.

Koed said both men understand the Town Manager has the ultimate authority and will decide which way they're going. "It's not going to be a tug-of-war," he said.

Spofford then said as long as the roles are clearly defined, "I think it's a great idea," adding hopefully, the two will agree to work together on the project. "I think we've seen the way public works programs have gone and if they (contractors) can cut corners, they will," he said. He added the town needs someone to be readily available to go on site and make sure if the contractors say there will be 2 inches of gravel, the town gets 2 inches, not 1-1/2. Dormitzer said Brennan is retired and would have the time to spend overseeing work on site.

With positions such as these, the Town Manager makes the appointment and the Selectmen have 15 days to reject it. Town Manager Michael Buckley said he wants to sit down with both men and make sure both are willing to serve side-by-side, and then work out the contracts and outline the responsibilities each will have to ensure everyone knows what their role is. In addition, Buckley said he would also like both men to travel down to Bourne to meet with new Town Manager William Griffin who will come on board in Cohasset Jan. 31. Buckley said he will come back before the board next Tuesday, Jan. 11 to inform them of his appointment, and at that point the board will make a decision as to whether it agrees with Buckley's decision.

Until Oct. 2, the town had a contract with the Waterfield Design Group to supply a liaison for the town during Greenbush construction. While the contract was still in effect, some residents questioned why the town had chosen to sign a $120,000 contract with the Winchester firm, rather than one of the roughly 14 residents who applied for the position when it was originally advertised. When the contract expired, everyone agreed it would be in the town's best interest to hire someone local. There has been no decision made on the money for the contracts for the new liaisons.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said after an appointment is made, it will be very beneficial to have the liaisons come in to provide a report to the board every month. Dormitzer agreed and said he would like to see the two appointed sooner rather than later. "The Spring Street plans are in, and I'd love to have them take a look," he said.

Dear Cohasset Resident:

In 2004, the Cohasset Water Department exceeded the standard for Total Trihalomethanes (TTHMs) in drinking water. We had a level of 100 parts per billion (ppb), which is higher than the Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL) of 80 ppb. 2004 was the first year that this TTHM regulation applied to Cohasset.

Please find inside the Notice that we are required to issue to the public. Also enclosed is a Q&A document which further explains the steps we have taken so far to reduce TTHMs and the steps we are planning to take to further reduce TTHM levels.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), it is not necessary to use an alternative water supply, such as bottled water. DEP advises that this exceedance is not an immediate risk, but that "some people who drink water containing trihalomethanes in excess of the MCL over many years may experience problems with their liver, kidneys, or central nervous system, and may have an increased risk of getting cancer" and that if you have any questions please consult with your doctor.

Please be assured that we are working diligently to resolve this issue by reducing TTHM levels as we continue our long-term capital improvement program for the Cohasset Water System. For more information, please view our web page at www.cohassetwater.org. If you have any questions please contact the Water Department at 383-0057.

Sincerely,
COHASSET WATER COMMISSION

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR DRINKING WATER

The Cohasset Water Department Has Levels of Total Trihalomethanes (TTHMs) Above Drinking Water Standards

The Cohasset Water Department recently violated a drinking water standard. Although this is not an emergency, as our customers, you have a right to know what happened, what you should do, and what we are doing to correct this situation.

We routinely monitor for the presence of contaminants in drinking water. The latest test results we received on December 29, 2004 show that our system exceeded the standard, called the maximum contaminant level (MCL), for Total Trihalomethanes (TTHMs) in 2004. The standard for TTHMs is 80 parts per billion (ppb) as a Running Annual Average (RAA) of samples taken quarterly throughout the year. With the December 29 sample our Running Annual Average of Total Trihalomethanes (TTHM) for 2004 was 100 ppb.

What should I do?

You do not need to use an alternative (e.g., bottled) water supply. However, after reading this Notice, if you have specific health concerns, consult your doctor.

What does this mean?

This is not an immediate risk. If it had been, you would have been notified immediately. However, some people who drink the water containing trihalomethanes in excess of the MCL over many years may experience problems with their liver, kidneys, or central nervous system, and may have an increased risk of getting cancer.

What happened? What is being done? When will the problem be corrected?

TTHMs are formed by the interaction of chlorine, added as a disinfectant, and organic matter in the water. The Water Commission has been working since early 2003 to meet the 80 ppb MCL, but the improvements we have made so far to the Lily Pond Treatment Plant – which have resulted in reductions in TTHMs – did not take effect soon enough to reduce the RAA for 2004. Our 2004 levels were: 1st Quarter (104 ppb), 2nd Quarter (130 ppb), 3rd Quarter (70 ppb), 4th Quarter (96 ppb). Based on these four quarterly samples, the RAA for 2004 is 100 ppb. To reduce TTHMs we have reduced chlorine by adding it later in the treatment process, and added enhanced coagulation and potassium permanganate to enhance the removal of organic matter. We believe we are on the right course to reduce TTHMs so we will be in compliance in the future. In 2005 we plan to move the pre-chlorination point again and to install baffles in the clearwell, both of which should further reduce TTHMs, and to install mixers in the water storage tanks to reduce the time for chlorine to interact with organic matter in the distribution system, which should also further reduce TTHMs – and to continue taking action to reduce TTHMs.

Please share this information with all the other people who drink this water, especially those who may not have received this notice directly (for example, people in apartments, nursing homes, schools, and businesses). You can do this by posting this notice in a public place or distributing copies by hand or mail.

About Cohasset's TTHM Violation - Questions & Answers

About our TTHM violation

In 2004, the Cohasset Water Department exceeded the EPA and Massachusetts

Department of Environmental Protection Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL) for Total Trihalomethanes (TTHMs) levels in drinking water of 80 parts per billion (ppb) -- measured as the Running Annual Average (RAA) of samples taken quarterly over the year.

Our 2004 TTHM levels were: 1st quarter (104 ppb), 2nd Quarter (130 ppb), 3rd Quarter (70 ppb), and 4th Quarter (96 ppb). This provides a RAA of 100 ppb for 2004.

What are TTHMs and How Are They Caused?

TTHMs are caused by the interaction of chlorine, added to water as a disinfectant, with organic matter present in water. Most water systems in the United States disinfect their water with chlorine in order to kill pathogens that cause disease.

What does this mean?

DEP advises that this exceedance does not mean that you have to use an alternative water supply, but suggests that if you have any health concerns you should consult your doctor.

DEP says that "This is not an immediate risk, if it had been, you would have been notified immediately. However, some people who drink water containing trihalomethanes in excess of the MCL over many years may experience problems with their liver, kidneys, or central nervous system, and may have an increased risk of getting cancer."

TTHMs are considered by the U.S. EPA and Massachusetts DEP to present a potential health threat from long-term exposure over many years, which is why compliance with the TTHM standard is based on the Running Annual Average and not on any individual sample.

The Cohasset Water Commission has provided notification to the public of the potential health risks from TTHMs, and the TTHM levels, in the Department's annual Water Quality Reports since those Reports were first issued in 1999, and in bill stuffers.

What Do I Need to Do?

You do not have to avoid using the water. If you wish to take further precautions, however, you can boil the water (believed to reduce TTHMs) or use filters certified to remove TTHMs (this includes most faucet-mounted, free-standing, or under-counter reverse osmosis filters). Leaving an open container of water in the refrigerator for a few hours also is effective in reducing the amount of TTHMs.

Why add Chlorine to the Water?

The public health benefits of chlorine disinfection practices are significant and well-recognized. One hundred years ago, typhoid and cholera were common throughout American cities, and chlorine disinfection was a major factor in reducing these epidemics. Yet, chlorine disinfection poses risks of its own.

For this reason, one of the most complex questions facing water supply professionals is exactly how to reduce risks from disinfectants and TTHMs while still adding sufficient chlorine to provide the necessary protection against microbial contaminants that can cause acute waterborne disease.

What has Been Done So Far to Address TTHMs in the Cohasset Water System?

- The Cohasset Water Commission has been actively working on reducing TTHMs since 2002. We have kept the Massachusetts DEP informed throughout the year and have received their approval for the measures we have taken so far to address this problem:
- Since 2002 Weston & Sampson and American Water, who operate and maintain the water system under contract with the Water Commission and the Town, have been closely examining the treatment process in the Lily Pond Treatment Plant in an ongoing study to identify options for reducing TTHMs.
- We have been conducting regular flushing of the distribution system and replacement of undersized pipes, which removes organic matter and reduces TTHM formation from interaction with chlorine.
- On December 23, 2003, after extensive study and approval from DEP, we moved the pre-chlorination point to just before filtration to reduce formation of TTHMs in the treatment process by reducing the amount of chlorine. Unfortunately, that was not enough to reduce TTHM levels in 2004, so we have continued to work on the problem.
- In mid-February 2004, we initiated enhanced coagulation to reduce the amount of organic matter leading to TTHM formation during the treatment process. Combined moving the pre-chlorination point, this appeared to have reduce TTHMs.
- In September 2004 we added a chemical feed to add Potassium Permanganate -- an oxidant which further reduces organic matter in the water (as well as improves the taste and odor of treated water.)
- In December 2004 we added Polyaluminum Chloride (PAC) to the treatment process, which will further enhance coagulation and take organic matter out of the water to reduce TTHMs.

What Does the Water Commission Plan to Do In the Future to Further Reduce TTHMs?

- We are expediting putting the Ellms Meadow wellfield back on line. The estimated 1000,000 gallons per day we could get from these wells are expected to improve the overall water quality of your tap water and are expected to lower TTHM levels.
- We are planning to change the chlorination method from the use of free chlorine to chloramines, which most water systems in the United States find effective in lowering TTHMs.
- In March 2005 (the earliest we can accomplish this) we plan to move the pre-chlorination point again so it will add chlorine after filtration, which should further reduce the formation of TTHM precursors in the water as it is being treated.
- In February/March we plan to install baffles in the Clearwell (which is the storage tank in the Treatment Plant where water is stored prior to being pumped to the distribution system). These baffles should allow us to further reduce the amount of chlorine added, to further reduce TTHM formation while still having enough chlorine to effectively disinfect the water to prevent disease.
- After the baffles are installed we plan to install mixers in the Bear Hill and Scituate Hill Water Storage Tanks. These mixers will constantly move the water through the tanks and reduce water age, which should reduce TTHM formation in the distribution system.
- Later in 2005 we plan to initiate pilot studies to test the effectiveness of other treatment methods on reducing TTHMs – such as microfiltration, ozonization, MIEX, and granulated activated carbon (GAC). We then plan to implement those systems which show the greatest positive impact during the pilot period.
- Continued flushing of the distribution system and replacement of undersized water mains.

What Does the Water Dept. Plan to Do To Monitor TTHMs and Inform the Public in 2005?

- We are increasing the frequency of testing for TTHMs from quarterly to monthly.
- We will issue regular press releases, communications in our bill stuffers, as well as information on our web page (www.cohassetwater.org) to inform the public of the TTHM levels found, the actions we have taken, and the status of our compliance with the 80 ppb TTHM standard.
- We expect, however, that we will continue to see an RAA for TTHM's in excess of 80 ppb through the first half of 2005 as we continue to work to lower TTHM levels of the Cohasset Water Commission, is optimistic the problem can be corrected soon. "The Cohasset Water Department is working very diligently to solve this problem and expects to be able to bring the Water Department into compliance no later than July," he said.

Testing for TTHMs is a regulation that did not apply to the town prior to 2004. McNabb said previously, only large cities with a population of more than 10,000 residents were required to test. "It's been on our radar screen," he said, adding the department has been aware of the chemical since he came on the board in 1997, but at that point, the testing regulations did not apply.

Compliance with the TTHM standard is based on the average of four quarterly samples. McNabb said levels were consistently high in various areas of town, meaning no one area is being affected more or less than any others. Tests were conducted at various points in town, including Whitehead Road, the Cohasset Harbor Resort, the Osgood School, and the Scituate Tennis Club.

Cohasset's water supply includes the Aaron River Reservoir and Lily Pond, and the Water Department has been working since early 2003 to meet the 80 ppb standard. However, improvements to its treatment plant did not take effect soon enough in 2004 to reduce the "running annual average," said McNabb.

"Our problem with TTHMs is the high level of organic growth in Lily Pond," he said.

McNabb said Cohasset will take more steps such as changing the chlorination method, and installing baffles in the storage tank at the treatment plant and mixers in the two standpipes to lower TTHMs levels. A baffle is a barrier in the clearwell (or tank) that can effect a maze for the water to follow. This ensures when the chlorine is injected at a certain point, it will have time to dissolve in all the water, he said. The Water Department will also expedite putting the Ellms Meadow wellfield back on line, whose 100,000 gallons per day is expected to improve the overall water quality of tap water and lower TTHMs levels in Cohasset.

The state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) is requiring the Cohasset Water Department to notify its users of the elevated levels of TTHMs, Joe Ferson, DEP spokesman said. He explained that there is no immediate health risk but people who drink water with elevated levels of the chemical over many years can experience health problems. The DEP will be working with Cohasset to resolve the problem, which is not uncommon. Ferson said last year Danvers experienced a similar problem.

"The Cohasset Water Department is working very diligently to solve this problem and expects to be able to bring the Water Department into compliance no later than July."
— John K. McNabb Jr., Water Commission

Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said he was informed of the water quality situation this week, and said in his experience, he has heard nothing but conflicting reports regarding TTHMs because it was only discovered in 1975. He said some studies show there is an increased risk of problems in laboratory animals who experience prolonged exposure to TTHMs, but that does not necessarily mean there will be the same effect on humans. He said any granular activated carbon filter should be effective in removing TTHMs from water, but it is best to check the label to be sure the filters say they can successfully remove the chemical.

In addition, McNabb said leaving open containers of water in the refrigerator for a couple of hours has also been shown to reduce the amount of TTHMs in water.

Effect on Hingham

This fall, a three-party interconnection agreement with Aquarion in Hingham, the Cohasset Water Department and Erickson Retirement Communities is slated to go into effect. Under the 20-year agreement, Erickson can purchase up to 300,000 gallons per day from Cohasset for Linden Ponds, the 2,000-unit retirement community being built off Whiting Street (Rte. 53) in Hingham.

Initially Erickson will purchase roughly 15,000 gallons per day reaching the 300,000 in May 2013 when Linden Ponds is expected to be fully built. The 15,000 gallons equates to less than 1 percent of the average daily demand in the Aquarion system that serves Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset, according to Larry Bingaman, senior vice president of operations at Aquarion.

Bingaman doesn't think the interconnection agreement will be affected because the Cohasset Water Department is working hard to correct the problem.

"They have kept in close touch with us about this particular issue," Bingaman said. "And we are in close contact with them.

"I think Cohasset has been very proactive in trying to resolve the issue in 2004 and once other actions are taken in 2005, it seems as though in due course the problem will be corrected."

To get water to Linden Ponds, Cohasset water will enter the northern part of the Hingham system off Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Rte. 3A); Aquarion provides a like amount of water to Linden Ponds in the southern part of the system. "It's not a direct supply," Bingaman said.

Bingaman explained Aquarion essentially acts as the transportation system for the water being purchased by Erickson. "We get a wheeling fee," he said.

The Cohasset water will be mixed with Hingham water at the Turkey Hill tank. Once Linden Ponds is fully built out, the 300,000 gallons would make up roughly 8-1/2 percent of the average daily demand in the Hingham system, Bingaman said.

Bingaman said if the problem is not corrected, the interconnection agreement will be delayed. He also explained that if tests reveal a problem at any time after the interconnection starts, the connection with Cohasset can be turned off.

Residents will receive a mailing from the Cohasset Water Department this week outlining the water quality problem. Anyone with questions is urged to visit the Water Department Web site at www.cohassetwater.org, or contact the Water Department at (781) 383-6202.

Searching for Gulf War vets

The Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee is looking to find Cohasset residents who served in the Armed Forces during the Persian Gulf War. The recently updated Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site has posted honor rolls for every war dating back to the Civil War, as well as hero profiles and information about Gold Star mothers. Currently, the committee has an honor roll page for the Persian Gulf War on its Web site, with 21 names on the list, and is looking to ensure all who served in the war are included. In addition, the committee is always looking to update its lists for other wars, and residents are asked to send along the names of any veterans who have not been included to date.

Anyone with names of any Cohasset veterans is asked to pass them along to Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt via e-mail at gpratt@suburbancompanies.com. For more information, please visit the committee's Web site at cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Congratulations to all the winners of this year's Holiday Calendar Raffle and a Happy New Year from the Cohasset Varsity Hockey Team and the Hockey Boosters!

SPEAKER SERIES

The Cohasset Diversity Committee is sponsoring a Speaker Series starting with "A Moving Event" one event in our series of international topics with the Second Annual U.N. Day Wednesday, Jan. 12. The event is being held at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church from 7:30-9 p.m. Admission is free and light refreshments will be served. A forum to discuss how different customs affect the way we relate to one another, how easy or difficult it is for someone to move into Cohasset and feel valued — and what we can do to create a welcoming environment is the topic. Speakers include panelists from Haiti, Pakistan, Russia, China and the METCO Program.

MUSICAL EVENING

The CHS Music Department will be presenting an evening of musical treats sure to warm your heart on Thursday, Jan. 13, at the Atlantica restaurant. The dessert buffet' will have a treat for every taste as will the music. The cost is $10 and proceeds will benefit the performing arts at CHS.

MLK DAY BREAKFAST

A Martin Luther King Day Breakfast is being held on Monday, Jan. 17 at the First Parish Unitarian Universalist(Parish House) from 9-11 am. The cost is $5 per person or $15 per family. Please join the Cohasset Clergy and the Diversity Committee in honoring the memory and achievements of Dr. Martin Luther King at Cohasset's third annual Martin Luther King Day Breakfast. A pancake breakfast will be served from 9 – 10 a.m. followed by a program honoring the memory of Dr. King. The Parish House is located at 23 North Main St. For more information please call Connie Afshar at 781 383 6006.

Whitehead project largest of home site plan reviews

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

H. MacKenzie Freeman, a noted eye specialist, sold this brick, Georgian colonial at 100 Whitehead Road for $7.3 million in a private sale last June. The new owner is going to raze the old house and build a new one at the site.

Large Home Site Plan reviews do not normally draw a crowd at Planning Board meetings, but when the renovation of the home in question is a project akin to a commercial development, neighbors take notice.

John Cavanaro of John Cavanaro Consulting came before the Planning Board Wednesday to present what is quite possibly the largest Large Home Site Plan Review the board will ever see. A large brick dilapidated Georgian-style home, located on Whitehead Island (at the end of Whitehead road off Atlantic Avenue), will be razed and a new shingle-style home will be constructed in its place, which developers say is much more in keeping with the character of Cohasset. This June, H. MacKenzie Freeman, a noted eye specialist, sold the 15-room house for $7.3 million in a private sale.

The house, built in 1908, sits on an island promontory at the mouth of Cohasset Harbor and possesses the most spectacular 360-degree vistas including an unfettered view of Minot Ledge Light. Tom Hamilton, president of Dean and Hamilton Realtors on Elm Street, sold the home to Freeman some 26 years ago for about $500,000. At the time it was the largest residential sale for an individual home on a lot in New England.

Cavanaro, along Jay Graham who is acting on behalf of the owner Whitehead Road Limited realty trust, architect Jeannie Vanecko or Vanecko Ltd., and landscape architect Dan Solien of Horuchi & Solien, presented the board with plans to raze the current 6,590 square foot structure, and replace it with 13,768 square feet of living space with a new landscape design. In addition, the owner would like to rebuild the bridge which provides access to the island, restoring it to its original stone arch. To reconstruct the bridge, a permit from the Army Corps of Engineers will be required, as any work done below the mean water line requires a special permit.

The home will have the same width and orientation as it currently has, but the position of the house will change slightly, as it will be drawn closer to the center of the island. Cavanaro said the owner – whose name has not been made public — has small children, and would like to be able to have a large backyard for them to play in. Once the home is repositioned, the yard will be flattened out in certain areas and retaining walls will be added.

The home is situated on 2.3 acres of land, which is the measurement from the mean high water line. Under the Large House Site Plan bylaw, the home itself cannot exceed 20 percent lot coverage, and the house together with other impervious surfaces cannot exceed 30 percent lot coverage. When construction is complete, the home and all impervious surfaces together will cover 23 percent of the property.

Vanecko said because the home is the centerpiece for those entering Cohasset harbor, every effort was made to design the home with cascading rooflines and architectural features which help minimize its massiveness. She said the home was designed to "give it a lot of interest."

Solien said in terms of landscaping, "What we do there will be more beautiful that ever existed," adding the yard has not been kept up. He said plans include removing very few trees from the site, and those that can be replanted will be relocated on site. He said with the harsh ocean weather the island receives, plantings have to be very carefully considered, and hearty varieties that can thrive in a seashore setting will be planted. Only in the more sheltered areas will ornamental plantings be considered.

In addition to plantings, the site will see a revamped swimming pool, a new spa, and at some point after the home is constructed, a new dock.

Members of the development team said they understand with a project of this size and nature, neighbors will have many concerns. In fact, many abutters came to voice their initial concerns, such as what construction will be like for them, as there will surely be many large trucks and equipment traveling up and down the street, which can only accommodate one car at a time. Developers said they will hire someone to direct traffic during all construction and all neighbors will be notified each step of the way of what construction will bring.

"Our commitment is to try to make this work for you, as well as us," said Vanecko. She added if large trucks are needed to bring in equipment and supplies, if need be, they will park the vehicles in a nearby parking lot and bring supplies in on a few smaller trucks to help keep disruption to a minimum. Smaller trucks will also become a necessity as larger ones may not be able to cross the 12-foot wide bridge to the property. In addition, Vanecko said the development team will be considering whether it makes sense to bring in some supplies by barge.

Developers said they will meet with neighbors on a monthly basis to ensure every concern is mitigated as much as possible, and abutters in attendance said they were willing to work together. Construction is slated to begin this spring, as the owner has a birthday he would like to celebrate in his new home a year from this June. Vanecko said at that point, construction will not be entirely complete, but construction will be at a point where there will be a habitable portion of the home.

The Planning Board kept the hearing open for the project and will take the matter up again at its Jan. 19 meeting. The board is holding an open meeting at the site this Saturday at noon, during which time it will be given a tour. Members of the public are welcome to attend.

Christmas tree pickup is offered

Project Safeguard, the Cohasset community initiative that offers information to local youth and their parents around the issues of adolescent-related health and well-being, announces its annual Christmas tree pickup fundraiser.

Tired of strained backs, scratched car roofs and cleaning up pine needles and tree sap? Why deal with the hassle? Call Project Safeguard and it will have a representative pick up your tree at your home after the holidays. For a small donation, it will make sure your tree is transported to the transfer station. It's as easy as that and you'll be helping to support an important local service organization in the process.

The pickup date is Saturday, Jan. 8. The fee is $15 per tree and $25 for two trees. The fee for seniors is $10 per tree. All checks should be made payable to "Project Safeguard." To schedule a pickup, call the Info Line at "The Garage" at 781-383-2492. Leave your name, address and phone number, and any unusual instructions. On pickup day, leave your tree by your driveway by 8 a.m. and tape your check (in an envelope) to your door. If you'd like to leave the check in a different location, you should indicate this on your Info Line message.

If you have any questions, call Sally Sisson (781-383-6190) or Coleman Nee (781-383-6958), Project Safeguard community reps.

Also, volunteers are needed to help with this year's pickup. If you own a pickup truck and can spare a couple of hours on either or both pickup dates, your help would be appreciated. Give them a call.

Thanks for speaking up

Before 2005 gets too far along, we still have some important 2004 business to attend to.

Some of the following names may be familiar to you, others may not be. But the people attached to these names all have one thing in common: they wrote at least one letter-to-the-editor or penned a commentary to the Cohasset Mariner in 2004.

A few wrote thank you notes to the people of Cohasset or organizations for their help or support; others complained about a decision or lobbied to have their views considered; while still others educated us about programs, problems or activities.

But no matter what the subject, putting pen to paper to share your views with your fellow citizens is important. The First Amendment is close to our hearts here in the newspaper business and at no time do we appreciate it more than when ordinary citizens, like those listed here, take advantage of their Freedom of Speech. And what better vehicle is there than your local paper?

So here at the Mariner, we salute the following citizens:

The editorial pages of the Cohasset Mariner belong to you. It's where you can speak out or just say thank you to a citizen or group that went beyond the call of duty.

Sometimes it takes a good dose of courage to let your voice be heard, but we think it's worth it. Often one voice is all the inspiration needed to propel others to action.

Last year, the Cohasset Mariner received 229 letters from 168 different people, groups or organizations.

To those of you that have thought about writing and haven't, please reconsider. To those whom we hear from on a regular basis, keep writing!

There are lots of weeks to go in the New Year - which will be filled with events, decisions, happenings and controversy. Let us hear what you think in 2005.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Questioning assessments

TO THE EDITOR:

If I were smart, I wouldn't write this letter because it is common wisdom that you never question a Board of Assessors openly. Disagreements should be addressed very discretely.

Unfortunately, I'm not very smart; so here goes.

Until Mark Haddad arrived, the Town used to do "efficiency audits" of different Town departments each year. The audits were not necessarily to identify malfeasance, but were more in the nature of "policy compliance audits" and to assess whether any organizational/procedural improvements should be implemented.

I acknowledge that I have always been concerned about conflicts of interest on the Board of Assessors; things such as family members working in the office and having elected relatives on the Board or having a real estate appraiser on the Board who is aggressively advertising his/her services while setting policy and approving assessments.

One thing lost in the turmoil of the past 18 months was a noteworthy item on the table to eliminate an elected board of assessors. If this option is legal; it has merit. About 10years ago, than Selectman Merle Brown assured me that the Board of Assessors was in-line for such an audit. It never happened. I don't know why because these audits are not expensive since they only focus on one department per year. Normally, the recommendations lead to efficiency improvements that provide a multi-fold return on investment(ROI) in the first year.

Three years ago, I went to Mark Haddad to express concern that tri-annual assessments resulted in wild evaluation fluctuations even in the same neighborhoods and on the same streets. The fluctuations cut both ways, inexplicable upwards and downwards deviations for certain properties not explained by major renovations or additions. This means that some people were either paying much higher or lower taxes than fair.

For example, on our street of 21 properties, assessments varied by increases of +19 percent to +44 percent and there were no major changes to the particular properties during the past three years. For example, sixteen land assessments went up by +58percent while the other five increased by 63/66/76/86 & 86percent or an average of +63percent for all 21 properties! It's ridiculous to think that 76 percent of the properties on Windy Hill Road increased in value by exactly the same percent(58percent). That could only happen if Windy Hill Road was a "cookie-cutter" development. This situation is not unique to Windy Hill Road.

The Board of Assessors uses standardized formulas for most revaluations. The range of house valuation changes was more consistent with maximum increase of +6percent and a maximum decrease of -7percent; or, an average of -1percent (despite many additions/renovations/ landscaping improvements). I know they're not making land anymore, but +63percent versus -1percent seems rather extreme.

On our street, the combined land/house tri-annual revaluations equated to +25percent. At the time, Cheryl Pooler, the full-time assessor was leaving or had just left and Mark Haddad promised that "the Town" would do a 100percent on-site re-evaluation before the next tri-annual valuation. It was a promise not kept.

I wasn't surprised, because a 100percent on-site re-valuation would be expensive and no budget provision was made. I had always suggested to Merle Brown that the 100percent on-site re-valuation be done cyclically(10percent/ year over a 10-year period) so that the Town would only have to do about 350 properties per year rather than 3,500 properties in one to three years.

This year's tri-annual assessment results are no exception. To put things in perspective; the tax rate was reduced by 12.2 percent while residential assessments increased an average of 18.9percent. My property tax increased by 14.9percent versus last year. Nothing meaningful has been done to either the land or house in the past 15 years. The cut-off for sales impacting valuations was Dec. 31, 2003. I accept the fact that properties near the oceanfront appreciate faster than those inland.

So, here is where we stand. Some people will file appeals this month. The Board of Assessors will offer a few minor concessions to correct obvious errors but primarily to stave-off appeals. It is only natural that the Board that set the valuations is going to have "pride of authorship" and be reluctant to approve many significant appeals. For most residents, the only sensible recourse will be to take the Cohasset Board of Assessors response and appeal it to The Commonwealth of Massachusetts Appellate Tax Board.

Positive solution to sewering possible

TO THE EDITOR:

In his recent letter to the Cohasset Mariner (Dec. 31, 2004) Murray Campbell advocated pro-actively increasing waste treatment capacity in Cohasset. This is a prudent approach to meeting Cohasset's need for more sewering. We have an opportunity to implement this approach if developers and the Town were to cooperate and work together to develop increased waste treatment capacity. Combining the resources of the developers and the Town in a coordinated, integrated effort would be much more productive than the current approach of demand, deny, litigate, and appeal. In this way, the developers could be satisfied and additional new capacity made available to the Town's residents.

The Town should consider initiating an effort to bring all parties together and develop a plan in which the Town and the developers are both best served.

We should think at a higher, more innovative level where developers and the Town work as a team rather than as adversaries and where the wants of the developers are satisfied, not by taking capacity away from existing Town residents, but by developing new capacity for themselves and for residents as well. It could produce a win-win solution for all.

TO THE EDITOR:

In regards to the article written by Steve Bobo on Health Notes Get a move on - at the Community Center I thought it was wonderful. I would like to clarify one paragraph. I realize Steve was referring to the Counsel of Elder Affairs when he mentioned that many of the Center's activities are sponsored by State funding, however, I am not sure everyone understands that. The South Shore Community Center receives no Federal or State funding. We are two separate entities. Many people get this confused because we are both located in the same building.

Devastation hits close to home

Family rushes to aid tsunami victims

By Kathy Bulpett
KBULPETT@CNC.COM

As news of the tsunami disaster unfolded, Sanji Fernando and his family moved into action. Fernando's mother and father, both natives of Sri Lanka, knew it was a bad situation that was worsening by the minute.

Although details were sketchy at first, the family quickly realized the extensive damage of their homeland after speaking with relatives and friends still living in the area, long before the pictures and videos were broadcast.

"I don't think any of us initially knew the scope of it all."
— Sanji Fernando

"I don't think any of us initially knew the scope of it all," said Fernando, who lives on North Main Street in Cohasset.

The tsunami, which struck south Asia on Dec. 26, has killed more than 139,000 people, with the death toll continuing to rise daily. An estimated 94,000 people are dead in Indonesia, and more than 30,000 have lost their lives in Sri Lanka, the two countries hardest hit by the tsunami, which was caused by an earthquake in the Indian Ocean.

Fernando, visiting his in-laws for Christmas in Colorado, made contact with the rest of his family celebrating Christmas in California. The extended family quickly formulated a plan, even though they were all miles apart from one another, and from their respective homes.

Dr. Kumu Fernando, Sanji's mother and a physician in Woodbridge, Conn., wanted to organize a large shipment of badly needed items to the hardest hit areas of Sri Lanka. Her idea was to ship 500 care packages for victims of the tsunami, putting them directly into the hands of who need it most.

"As the numbers grew and clearly there was a need, she wanted to do something that would get items directly to the people," said Fernando. He says his mother wanted to avoid bureaucratic red tape of the sometimes corrupt government agencies in Sri Lanka.

After consulting with family friend Ravi Perera of Queens, N.Y., who owns an import and export company of Sri Lakan goods, the group decided to lease a container. Perera offered to help, seeing the container through the maze of customs and legal issues by accompanying the container to Sri Lanka. She contacted family and friends still living in the area to meet the container, arranging for it to be shipped directly to Hambontota, an area especially hard hit.

The large shipping container is scheduled to arrive on a flat bed to Fernando's family's home in Connecticut, with a two-hour window to pack it full. "That isn't too much time, we will have to work quickly and have everything ready," says Fernando.

The container is scheduled to leave New York City by boat on Saturday (Jan. 8), arriving in Sri Lanka the last week of January.

Sanji Fernando's North Main Street home has been turned into a collection center for clothing and materials to be donated to tsunami victims in Sri Lanka, where Fernando's family has many relatives and friends.

With the details in place to pack and ship the container, the call went out via e-mail, phone to friends and relatives in the United States to donate used tropical weight clothes; toiletries, towels and basic foods.

People have responded.

"The extended communities through friends and family has generated a lot of support and donations," said Fernando. A former coworker of Fernando's drove down from the North Shore to drop off many bags of clothing, while corporations such as Gillette have stepped up, offering to donate toiletries items such as razors for the relief effort.

Yvon Chouinard and Vishal Vasishth offered to donate T-shirts, shorts, and Capilene from Patagonia, a clothing company.

Friends Graham and Julia Schelter brought donations collected from the Boston and Brookline area.

Recently arriving at Fernando's house was 35 bags of lightweight used clothing, and 15 boxes of miscellaneous items courtesy of Jim and Laura Campbell and their Boy Scout troop from Norwell. There are also donations from the Cape area. "I'm overwhelmed. The response has been great," said Fernando.

In Fernando's Cohasset home, the dining room has turned into the relief center, with boxes, filled trash bags, and suitcases piled high full of clothing and toiletries to be packed and shipped to Sri Lanka.

Each care package contains clothing, toiletries, food, and utensils for six to eight people. Dal, a Sri Lankan lentil staple, and rice are the only food items going at this time. "We are packing for large family groups. Many families live together across generations in Sri Lanka; grandparents, parents, kids," said Fernando.

Fernando said although he is the first generation born in America, his parents and their families all emigrated from Sri Lanka in the 1970s and 80s. Having the strong ties of friends and relatives in Sri Lanka endure this tragedy has been hard on his family, as well as many other families that have immigrated to the United States. "It's very hard to think of the scale of the magnitude and implications the disaster has had on my mother's generation," said Fernando.

Fernando, who has lived in Cohasset for about a year and a half, said he really hasn't "plugged in" to many neighbors yet, so he is surprised at the level of support from people living in the South Shore town.

For his family, doing something on a personal level was the best solution, but he is quick to point out that larger organizations such as Oxfam, Red Cross are the best at responding to these types of tragedies on a larger scale.

Fernando said there is a possibility of another large container being shipped, but the family wants to make sure the first one arrives without incident. Fernando, along with other family members, is planning to return to Sri Lanka to aid in the rebuilding of homes and helping out where they are needed.

"The need isn't going to go away," said Fernando. "People of Sri Lanka will need help for a long time."

Fernando, who has taken time off from work to help organize the effort, is renting a truck to haul the donated goods to Connecticut. Combined with donations generated from friends and relatives in his hometown and across the United States; he said their efforts will make a difference.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The more things change, the more they remain the same, as we shall see in 2005.

January – In his inaugural address, President Bush tells young Americans to "read my lips. No new draft!" Defense Secretary Rumsfeld announces that the enlistments of National Guardsmen have been extended another year so that adequate forces can be kept in Iraq.

February – Hingham man is arrested for interstate transport of a protected species of fish for trying to bring a rare snail darter to his hometown to plant in the Weir River. "Down with Greenbush!" he cries as he is led off to jail. Britney Spears gets married.

March – Martha Stewart, fresh out of federal prison, hosts a TV special in which she shows how to blend stripes into a gorgeous evening gown, how to make chopped sirloin taste like filet mignon and how to make license plates in your living room. Show draws the highest number ever in the Nielsen Ratings. Britney Spears get divorced.

April – Dan Quirk buys the old South Weymouth Naval Air Station property and turns it into the largest used car lot east of the Mississippi. "C'mon up!" he tells former customers of Ernie Boch. Britney Spears gets married.

May – Massachusetts Supreme Court finds an obscure phrase in the State Constitution that enables a man to marry his dog. Governor Romney says it's okay with him as long as the dog is female. President Bush prepares to file an amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

June – Red Sox lose a series to the Yankees and fan complaints are heard that they've only won one World Series in the last 87 years. Globe sportswriter Dan Shaunessy's latest book, "The Curse of Pedro Martinez," hits No. 1 on most best seller lists.

July – Osama bin Laden is discovered during a roundup of illegal aliens living in Cambridge. "When do I get my Social Security card and driver's license?" asks the world's second most wanted fugitive after Whitey Bulger. Britney Spears gets divorced.

August – U.S. Senate committee views the Big Dig from dockside in the Liberty Tunnel. "I think we ought to fill it in and start all over again," says Senator McCain. "Me, too," says the CPA from Bechtel. Britney Spears gets married or divorced or whatever.

September – The price of tomatoes hits $50 a pound and 54 Italian restaurants go out of business, 39 turn to beets and a Russian cuisine featuring borscht and another 21 turn to rice and become Chinese restaurants. Britney Spear gets divorced or married. Even she can't remember which.

October – Toy makers expect that the hottest gift at Christmastime will be a game called "Tsunami," in which giant waves destroy seacoast villages. Score is kept by multiplying the distance a wave travels by its height times the number of casualties. "A great way for kids to learn arithmetic," say the promos.

November – "Whitewater Veterans for Truth," a 507 group headed by Kenneth Starr, is formed just in case Hillary should run for president in 2008. Jeb Bush, the Republican front-runner for 2008, says he has no knowledge of the organization and he is sure Hillary acted heroically in Whitewater, whatever that is.

December – ACLU backs suit to ban painting of Pilgrims walking through the snow from the schools in Plymouth. Atheist father who filed suit says his daughter was traumatized when she asked her teacher where they were going and the teacher answered, "To church."

HEALTH NOTES

List of water filters available

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset Water Commission announced this week the Water Department exceeded the standard for Total Trihalomethanes (TTHMs) in drinking water. They reported a level of 100 parts per billion (ppb), which is higher than the Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL) (established by the EPA) of 80 ppb.

2004 was the first year that this TTHMs regulation applied to Cohasset.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), it is not necessary to use an alternative water supply, such as bottled water. DEP advises that this is not an immediate risk, but that "some people who drink water containing trihalomethanes in excess of the MCL over many years may experience problems with their liver, kidneys, or central nervous system, and may have an increased risk of getting cancer".

The EPA's web page states that "Since the discovery of chlorinating byproducts in drinking water in 1974, numerous toxicological studies (studies on the health effects from exposure to high dosages contaminants usually involving animals in a lab) have been conducted. These studies have shown several disinfection byproducts to be carcinogenic in laboratory animals (e.g., including bromate, certain trihalomethanes and haloacetic acids). Some disinfection byproducts have also been shown to cause adverse reproductive or developmental effects in laboratory animals (e.g., chlorite and certain trihalomethanes and haloacetic acids). However, there is too great an uncertainty involving the results of high-dose, toxicological studies of some byproducts occurring in disinfected drinking water to estimate the risk to humans from chronic exposure to low doses of these and other byproducts.

The EPA concluded: "that while the agency cannot conclude there is a causal link between exposure to chlorinated surface water and cancer, these studies have suggested an association, albeit small, between bladder, rectal, and colon cancer and exposure to chlorinated surface water."

A copy of this sheet may be obtained from the Board of Health, the Water Department or from the web at: www.waterfiltercomparisons.net.

Many people have complained about drinking "pond water" and some complain of the bad taste. While there are studies that argue both sides of this debate, the most recent and most credible studies show that drinking naturally balanced water with its natural trace minerals is healthier than drinking demineralized water.

So what do we do? John McNabb, Chairman of the Water Commission, at Tuesday's Selectmen's meeting described a very creditable program by the Water Department designed to reduce or eliminate TTHMs from the water supply. They have been at this since they became aware of the problem several years ago and they are making considerable progress. At the Selectmen's meeting John suggested, in response to the Chairman's question about filters, that some domestic water filters are available which could treat TTHMs at the tap. The Board of Health has prepared a listing of such filters from a comparison chart derived from each manufacturer's "certified" performance data sheet . A copy of this sheet may be obtained from the Board of Health, the Water Department or from the web at: www.waterfiltercomparisons.net. For any other questions regarding TTHMs contact the Board of Health.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Board of Health.

SENIOR SCENE

Starting in February, the CEA will provide transportation to Stop and Shop Supermarket every first and third Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. The CEA will continue to provide transportation down town every Thursday at 9:30.

Due to a low interest in around town transportation on Monday mornings, the CEA will discontinue that trip. All other scheduled transportation will remain the same. As always this schedule can be modified to meet changing needs.

Seniors, have you been to the Derby Street Shops in Hingham? Would you have an interest in going? If yes, call the CEA no later than the day before you need transportation for regularly scheduled trips. If there is no one in the office to take your message, leave a message in the "general mail box," after you have dialed 781-383-9112. The information you give the CEA will help then it prepares the transportation list for it's volunteer driver.

The Hingham Journal welcomes letters to the Editor.

POLITICAL NOTES

Democrats to hold caucus

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus on Saturday, Jan. 29 at 10 a.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, to elect five delegates and five alternates to the 2005 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. Delegates will be divided equally between men and women. The convention will be held on Saturday, May 14 at the Paul E. Tsongas Arena in Lowell. At that time, Democrats from across the state will gather to review and approve the Party Platform, which will serve as the official political agenda of the Massachusetts Democratic Party.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats of Cohasset. All candidates for delegate and alternate must consent to nomination in writing and may make a two minute statement and distribute materials on their behalf. All ballots will be written and secret.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 10 Granite St., Quincy, MA 02169 no later than ten days after the caucus date.

For more information, please log onto www.cohassetdems.org or www.massdems.org or contact Agnes McCann, Chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee at 781-383-0222, or the Democratic State Committee at 617-472-0637.

Election season to get under way

Moderator George Marlette has held his post for the past 12 years, and has run unopposed every time. This year, it is likely he will again run uncontested for fourth time in a row. While he jokes he's not sure anyone else would want the job, underneath it all he said he has always been drawn to the post because, "I really believe in the process," of town government, which is exactly why he said he will run again. "This was a very exciting year," he said, adding he hopes to have the opportunity to be able to serve the town for the next three.

Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt's term has also expired, and he said he has every intention of running to retain his seat. This year will be the third time he has run for the position. "I was appointed to an unexpired term in 2000, and had to run for the one year remaining on that term in 2001, and then run for my own three year term in 2002," he said.

With six years of serving on the Board of Health under his belt, Robin Lawrence said "Yes, I will run again." Lawrence has already taken out papers for the position.

Sewer Commission Chairman Raymond Kasperowicz said although he is very busy with his business, he will also be running to retain his position on the board. "I need this like I need a hole in the head," he joked, but added he will gladly take on another three years. "The perks are great," he quipped. Kasperowicz has served on the Sewer Commission for the past 6 years and has waded through many difficult issues, which will surely continue into the future. Kasperowicz said if elected, "I expect this will be my last term."

Although Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey said he has heard rumors floating around town regarding the position he will run for this spring, he said he will in fact be looking to keep his seat on the Planning Board. There is "no truth to the frequent rumor that I intend to run for the Board of Selectmen," he said, adding he pulled papers Tuesday with the intention of retaining his current position.

But on the flip side, School Committee Chairman Shea will not run again for his position because of the commitment he has to his job at Momenta Pharmaceuticals in Cambridge. "My company went public in June, and it's growing quite rapidly," he said, adding he has increasingly had many time commitment conflicts.

Shea served on the School Committee from1996-1999. He was appointed to take over for Jane Pescatore when she stepped down from her seat in August of 2003 to accept employment with the school department. Selectmen and the remaining members of the School Committee, in a majority vote, appointed Shea to fill Pescatore's seat until the Town Election. Shea then ran to fill the one-year commitment left over from Pescatore's term, and won. The seat which will need filling upon his departure will be a three-year seat.

Looking forward, Shea said he wouldn't rule out another term on the school board. "I'm open to it. I'd like to do it again in the future — if I get time," he said.

But there are still those who remain undecided, and Selectman Koed said he will take one more week to decide whether he will run again to keep his seat on the board. "I'm weighing the pros and cons and talking to people to see what they think and getting a feel for whether people think I'm making a difference, or whether someone else should have a turn," he said. Koed said ultimately, his decision will be made by weighing what is best for him personally, versus what he can do for the town.

Koed has served in various capacities of town government for the past 19 years, including the Board of Selectmen since 1999, a three-year term on the Water Commission, serving as Chairman during part of his term, two three-year terms on the Housing Authority, for which he was appointed by the Governor, and one three-year term on the Fair Housing Committee. He was also on the Advisory Committee, where he was also Chairman for a time. He is also the town's Board of Selectmen representative for the Norfolk County Advisory Board.

McMorris said with the holidays and her girls home from college, "I haven't really thought about it," but added once the dust settles, she will make her decision. "I've really enjoyed being a selectman," she said, "It's certainly been fun," but she will need some time to discuss it with her family, as it is a big commitment. However, regardless of whether she or someone else fills her post, she said Cohasset is off to a great start this year and she is very excited about new Town Manager Bill Griffin coming on board Jan. 31.

Friday March, 11 is the last day to register to vote at the Annual Town Meeting to be held on Saturday, April 2, and for the Annual Town Election to be held Saturday, April 9.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Administrators faulted for using poor judgment

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing to voice my concerns regarding the extremely poor judgment and obvious incompetence that was displayed on Monday morning, Dec. 20, by Superintendent Denise Walsh and Principal DeLorenzo

As you are aware, the decision to continue with the Middle School field trip to Boston, after numerous warnings all weekend long forecasting severe temperature drop, extreme icing conditions and continuous light snow fall for Monday ended with two Cohasset bus accidents and numerous injured to our children, thankfully none of the injuries were life threatening. Also be informed that the Town of Scituate canceled their trip that day due to extremely poor weather conditions. My child was one of the children taken off the bus in a stretcher along with another young girl who had smashed her teeth through her bottom lip requiring stitches in her face area. Fifteen students, shaken and traumatize, were all taken to local hospitals.

Can anyone tell me what our superintendent and high school principal were thinking of? Did either of them drive themselves to school that morning to observe the icy conditions. Did either of them listen to radio or T.V. weather forecast that morning?

When my son informed me Friday evening that he was going on a field trip to Boston Monday, I informed him that he shouldn't plan on it because of the forecast I had seen and heard during that day regarding Monday's weather. When Monday morning arrived, I informed my son that there certainly wouldn't be any trips to Boston that day, with the icy, snowy conditions, my wife, a Weymouth school teacher, also agreed.

Several hours later, I was informed by a Boston hospital that my child was in fact one of the children injured in an accident and that I should immediately come on to Boston to be with him.

Can you imagine how I felt? How all the other parents felt when they got the word? Why, because of extreme poor judgment incompetence and poor planning that was displayed Monday morning, it is unacceptable!

Furthermore, DeLorenzo informed the Mariner that he was told at the scene that weather did not play a role in the accident. By who was he told? That's simply a self serving statement to cover his negligence in allowing the field trip to continue in dangerous weather conditions. I spoke to the state police and they informed me that the weather conditions were a direct cause of the accident and that there were numerous other accidents also caused by the poor weather conditions.

If these individuals in charge plan on being employed and having a future with our school system, then I strongly suggest they make a concerted effort to take the proper time to make conscientious, safe thought through decisions, when it concerns the lives of our children.

When Principal DeLorenzo appeared on T.V. and so bluntly stated that if the children were a little older and bigger, no one would have been injured because older children can hold on tighter than small students. Well, Mr. DeLorenzo to that comment, I replay "If you weren't principal, maybe no one would have been injured at all because another, more rational thinking, principal surely would have canceled the field trip under such poor weather conditions." The parents, residents and taxpayers of Cohasset don't deserve incompetence on this level when it comes down to making consequential safety decisions for our children.

Hopefully, a blunder of this magnitude will not occur again and the individuals responsible will take situations more serious in the future.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senators' votes on two roll calls from prior sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

BOSTON MUNICIPAL COURT MERGER (S 2400)

Senate 17-21, rejected an amendment merging the Boston Municipal Court (BMC) into the district court system. Amendment supporters said that it is irresponsible for the politically-wired, patronage laden and overstaffed BMC to be a separate entity while the other 69 district courts are underfunded and understaffed under one entity. They argued that the amendment would save $1 million by consolidating the administrative functions of the BMC with all the other district courts and eliminating waste and duplication. Some amendment opponents questioned the $1 million savings and argued that the BMC is a unique and well-run court with a large caseload that requires its own independent administrative system. Others said that this type of sweeping change should not be attached to a budget as an outside section but rather should be filed as a separate bill so that public hearings can be held. (A "Yea" vote is for merging the BMC into the district court system. A "Nay" vote is against the merger).

IN-STATE TUITION RATES FOR ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS (S 2400)

Senate 39-0, approved an amendment allowing illegal immigrant students to pay the in-state tuition rates and fees at Massachusetts colleges and universities if the students have attended a high school in Massachusetts for at least three years and have graduated or received the equivalent of a diploma. The amendment includes a provision prohibiting these illegal immigrants from receiving the in-state rate if doing so would deny the in-state rate to a Massachusetts citizen or to a legal immigrant resident. Some amendment supporters said that these hardworking illegal immigrant students are currently required to pay out-of-state tuition rates that are up to five times higher than the in-state rate. They noted that many of these students are unable to afford the higher tuition and end up skipping college and working in low-pay, low-skilled jobs. They noted that the amendment protects Massachusetts citizens and legal immigrants by prohibiting them from being displaced by an illegal immigrant student. Although the vote in favor of the amendment was unanimous, some senators indicated that they are opposed to giving this tuition break to illegal immigrants but reluctantly voted for the amendment because Senate rules and the procedure leading up to the vote on this amendment resulted in it being the lesser of two evils. They noted that if they voted against this amendment, an original budget provision allowing illegal immigrants to pay the in-state tuition rates and fees, without the section protecting Massachusetts residents and legal immigrants from being displaced, would have remained in the budget. They noted that both the original, "eviler" budget provision and this amendment are inappropriate because they would offer the in-state tuition rates to illegal immigrants. They said it is unfair to offer these reduced rates to illegal immigrants under any circumstances and particularly while the Senate is cutting other important programs. Gov. Romney later vetoed the amendment and the Legislature has not acted on the veto. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment allowing illegal immigrant students to pay the in-state tuition rates and fees at Massachusetts colleges and universities if the students have attended a high school in the state for at least three years and have graduated or received the equivalent of a diploma and prohibiting these illegal immigrants from receiving the in-state rate if doing so would deny the in-state rate to a Massachusetts citizen or to a legal immigrant resident).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

STUDENTS WITH DIABETES (S 2231)- The House and Senate gave final approval to and sent to Gov. Romney a bill allowing students with diabetes to give themselves insulin shots and perform glucose monitoring tests without the assistance of a school nurse or other personnel. Currently only students with asthma and cystic fibrosis are permitted to self-administer their medication. Supporters said that many students with diabetes are capable of performing these functions and should be allowed to do so instead of spending time in the school nurse's office and missing classes or time with their friends.

WHEELCHAIRS (H 2650)- The House gave near final approval to and sent to the Senate legislation requiring that a wheelchair face forward when any vehicle is transporting a person sitting in a wheelchair. Supporters said that crash tests prove that a person is less prone to injury when his or her wheelchair faces forward.

AGE OF POLICE OFFICERS (H 4218) The House and Senate gave final approval to and sent to Gov. Romney a bill raising from 19 to 21 the minimum age at which as person is eligible to be a local, state or MBTA police officer. Supporters said that 19-year-olds are barely out of high school and often do not have the maturity or life experience to become a police officer. They also noted that current state law is inconsistent because it prohibits citizens under 21 from having a handgun but allows 19 and 20-year-old police officers to do so. Opponents said that many current police officers were 19 or 20 when they joined the force and are doing an excellent job. They also noted that 18-year-olds are allowed to enlist in the U.S. military and 17-year-olds are permitted to do so with parental consent.

FISH ADVISORIES (H 4518)- The House Ways and Means Committee has approved a bill requiring restaurants and retailers that sell fish to post warnings to its customers. The warnings would include specific information warning consumers that some fish contain high levels of mercury that can harm the developing nervous system of a fetus and young child if eaten regularly. Some restaurants and retailers voluntarily provide this type of information to consumers but there is no state law mandating it.

What you may not know about the Greenbush train

While construction is underway, it can be hard to imagine that trains are expected to be rolling through Hingham in less than two years. The following information is provided by the MBTA to update residents, property owners, and other interested parties about the project:

Greenbush rail service is scheduled to start in mid-2006. The line is being built as mitigation for the Central Artery/Tunnel Project in downtown Boston. The basic purpose is to reduce automobile traffic on the congested highways leading into downtown Boston by diverting South Shore commuter traffic from automobiles to public transit.

- There will be 12 trips each way on weekdays. Trains will operate between approximately 5:45 a.m. and 11 p.m.
- More than 4,200 passengers are expected to ride the Greenbush Line each way by the year 2010 every weekday.
- Weekend service will be offered on a reduced schedule similar to other commuter rail lines, with eight round trips planned for Saturdays and Sundays.
- A one-way trip from Greenbush in Scituate to Boston's South Station will take about an hour.
- The estimated cost is $479 million.
- More than 3,000 parking spaces are being constructed at the seven Greenbush Line stations, including 500 at Nantasket Junction (the former Hingham Lumber site) and 200 in West Hingham on Fort Hill Street near the South Shore Country Club.
- All the trains and stations will be handicapped accessible.
- There will be a charge for parking at Greenbush Line stations.
- Each station platform will have a lighted shelter with benches and passenger information displays. There will be no attendants or enclosed waiting rooms.
- All Greenbush trains will stop at the Quincy Center Red Line station.
- There are no changes planned in commuter boat service as part of the Greenbush project. (Hingham commuter boat improvements are planned in conjunction with the revitalization of the Hingham Shipyard.)
- The Greenbush Line is being designed to qualify as a "Quiet Zone," which means train whistles will not be routinely sounded at grade crossings.
- The MBTA and local police will work together to enforce parking restrictions around commuter parking lots to keep commuters from parking on side streets and business parking lots.
- The trains will operate at speeds up to 60 mph. Trains will travel slower around station stops and sharp curves.
- The trains will typically have five or six coaches using a mix of single- and double-level cars. The line is designed to accommodate trains with up to nine cars.
- Station lights will be timed to shut off after the last train of the evening (about 11:30 p.m.).
- The MBTA does not operate freight service. While freight service could potentially be expanded east of East Braintree, where local rail freight service currently operates, it is unlikely due to a lack of potential freight customers along the line.
- Herbicides are sprayed along the railroad tracks as required to control vegetation growth. Spraying is generally done annually in the summer and uses only herbicides approved by the Pesticide Bureau of the Massachusetts Department of Agricultural Resources. Spraying is restricted in wetland areas, around drinking water wells and reservoirs, and in windy conditions.
- The MBTA participates in the national Operation Lifesaver railroad safety education program, which provides information to schools and community groups through municipal police departments.
- There will be 25 public and three private grade crossings on the Greenbush Line. Fifteen that were in the original plan will be eliminated through construction underpasses in Hingham Square, Weymouth Landing, and Weymouth Heights, an overpass at Rocky Lane in Cohasset, and the closure or avoidance of seven other crossings.
- The MBTA is committed to providing safe grade crossings, equipping all of them with warning systems consisting of flashing red lights, bells, and gates. Because the Greenbush line will be a "Quiet Zone," additional safety measures such as median strips or four-quadrant gates will be installed at most crossings. MBTA personnel will inspect and maintain the crossing warning systems on a regular basis to ensure that they are kept in good working order.
- Four-quadrant gates block both lanes in each direction, while two-quadrant gates block only the right lanes and are often combined with median barriers to prevent motorists from cutting around the gate.
- There will be fencing in all inhabited and public areas, or along about 85 percent of the line. In most cases, six-foot high, heavy-duty chain link fencing will be placed along the railroad property lines.

to be up and running sometime in 2006, Carlisle said.

John Bewick, train critic and president of AfTA (Advocates for Transportation Alternatives), said while disappointed, AfTA is not going to abandon the fight for lower cost, more efficient service including expanded commuter boats, greater access to the Plymouth Line of the Old Colony Railroad and greater use of the Red Line. He said AfTA will appeal the Army Corps permit in federal court. Appeals must be launched within 30 days, Bewick explained.

"The facts are unchanged," said Bewick, a former state Secretary of Environmental Affairs. "Greenbush is fiscally irresponsible. The project will cost $360,000 per car removed during rush hour during a time when the MBTA is cutting back on bus and ferry service.

"The rail project is going to add a tremendous about to the T's operating deficit and capital budget repayments when there are alternatives that are less costly, less environmentally damaging and more efficient."

Bewick explained AfTA's grounds for the appeal include the fact the Army Corps did not do a full Environmental Impact Statement (EIS), but issued a Finding of No Significant Impact, dubbed a FONSI, instead.

"That's absurd on a $500 million project," he said, adding the Environmental Protection Agency back in 1999 asked for a full EIS on the project.

"We have solid grounds for appeal in court," Bewick said, adding there are major issues surrounding the train's impact on Scituate's water supply.

Ted Lento of the Army Corps of Engineers said as a result of the FONSI, the corps conducted an Environmental Assessment, which is roughly 60 pages. "Our conclusion was there was not significant impact to the environment under the Corps' authority (including aquatic and historic impacts) so no EIS was done," he explained. An EIS is also a lengthy process, taking years and costing millions of dollars, Lento said.

The federal permit means wetlands work can get underway in Weymouth, Braintree and Hingham but not Cohasset and Scituate where appeals to the state Department of Environmental wetlands variance issued for the project are still pending. Lento said the federal permit cannot supercede the need for the local variance.

The Army Corps, as the closest federal agency to the project, also required the project comply with other federal statutes such as the Historic Preservation Act. Thus the Army Corps helped work out agreements with the five towns (dubbed programmatic agreements), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the MBTA detailing mitigation for noise, vibration and visual impacts along the corridor which runs through several historic districts and dozens of historic properties.

The historic impacts and the controversial nature of Greenbush that was put on hold and subsequently restarted by a series of Massachusetts governors, has made the permitting process a time-consuming one, Lento explained.

The federal Army Corps permit has 15 conditions; there's also a water quality certificate that involves issues such a erosion control, vernal pools and storm-water management issued by the DEP with 100 conditions that is part of the Army Corps permit, Lento said.

One of the federal permit conditions requires the MBTA to implement the programmatic agreement signed with the five towns including resolving issues involving fencing, the final design of the Scituate roundabout, and the ventilation structures and communication tower for the Hingham tunnel. Other examples of conditions include wetlands mitigation and requiring the MBTA to hire a full-time, independent environmental monitor who reports to the DEP and Army Corps to watch over t he project.

Lento said the Army Corps will stay involved in the project. He said a technical advisory committee is meeting every month or two to review construction and compliance with the permit conditions. The committee includes the Army Corps, DEP, local conservation commissions, the environmental monitor, and the MBTA

Greenbush's two sister lines, Plymouth and Middleboro also required a federal wetlands permit. The MBTA broke Greenbush off as a separate project back in the early 1990s, which also meant a separate Army Corps permit would be required.

Local legislators and Greenbush opponents, state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, and state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, are both disappointed but not surprised by the Army Corps issuing the permit.

'It's very discouraging to those of us who oppose the project," Bradley said. " I do think the project is going to be a burden to the community and the taxpayers."

Hedlund said he is upset by comments from the Grabauskas' office that AfTA's lawsuits, which have caused delays, are driving up the cost of the project.

"The costs have been increasing all along," he said. Hedlund also said Greenbush will eat up money that could be used for other badly needed capital projects, such as Green Line and Blue Line extensions.

Carlisle, Grabauskas' spokesman, pointed out the Transportation Office is batting nearly 1,000. "There have been 10 legal actions and eight have been resolved or dropped (in our favor) so far," he said.

But Bewick said no one should count AfTA out. "We're like the Red Sox in the series with the Yankees after game three," he said.

Local Republicans know how to party

The first annual Christmas Gala of the recently formed Plymouth-Norfolk District Republican Town Committees coalition (GOP 8) was held at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy, Wednesday evening, Dec. 29.

The festive dinner event was attended by more than 100 of the party faithful from Hingham, Weymouth, Scituate, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hull, Norwell and Marshfield and included GOP dignitaries such as Plymouth County Sheriff-elected Joseph McDonald, Plymouth County District Attorney Timothy Cruz and Sen. Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) as well as recent Weymouth GOP State Rep. candidate Doug Veeder and his wife Stephanie.

John P. Cafferty of Hingham and Polly Logan of Cohasset represented the Republican State Committee.

Ann P. Collins, chairwoman of the Hingham Republican Town Committee, organized this year's successful inaugural dinner/dance gala.

Blanche Hanson Clark and her Swinging Seniors Band provided '40s music. The Happy Hoofers, a dance and tambourine group headed by Elaine Dowgos, provided entertainment with a musical skit.

Clark then gave a rendition of "When You're Good to Mama" from "Chicago," the musical, and one of the five bandsmen sang Tony Bennett's "I Left My Heart in San Francisco." All brought a lot of laughter and enjoyment to the many attendees.

The gala was well received and there is talk of the GOP 8 getting together on a quarterly or possibly a monthly schedule with a charitable or community service theme. Plymouth-Norfolk District Republican State Committeeman Cafferty has been working since his election to put together what seems to be a very cohesive partnership and camaraderie by and of the GOP 8 town committees.

Six CHS wrestlers place in Marshfield holiday tournament

Casey, Littauer take first; Kehoe finishes second

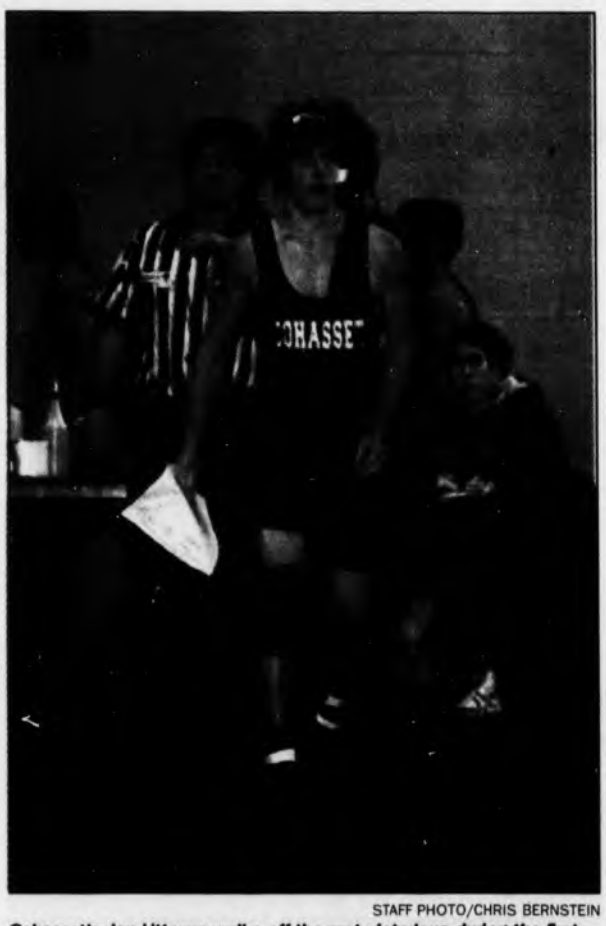
By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Cohasset wrestling once again served notice last week that they are a viable contender for a state championship.

Led by senior co-captains Matt Casey and Jon Littauer, who both won the tournament in their individual weight classes, the Skippers placed third overall in the 24-team Marshfield tournament at Marshfield High School last week.

Casey dominated the competition from the beginning, not allowing a single point until his semifinal win over Marshfield's Mike Pronk. He defeated another strong opponent, North Attleboro's Matt Cziria, in the championship match of the 171-pound weight class.

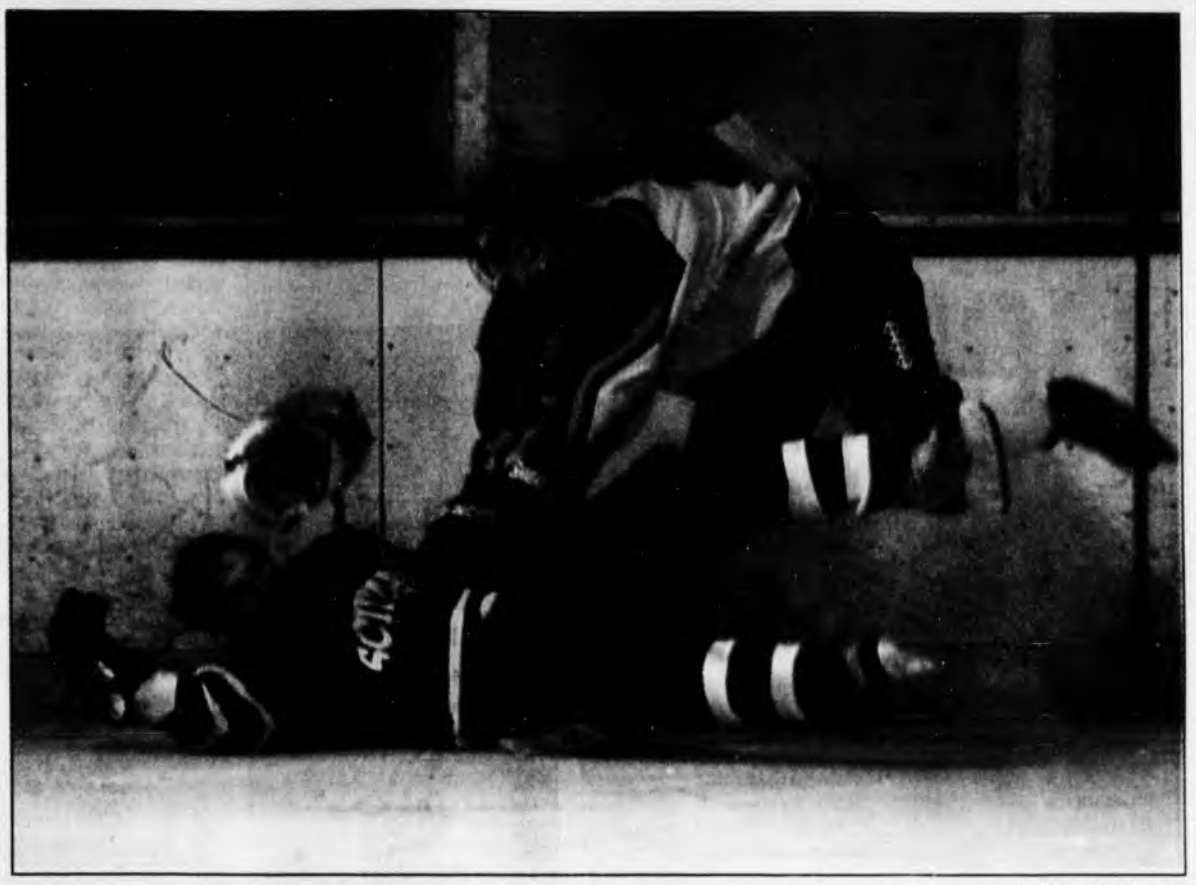
Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney said Casey's success is the result of a lot hard work and overall improvement in his wrestling skills.



"Matt has definitely improved his technique," Sweeney said. "He's developed a couple different takedowns from the neutral position, and some pinning combinations from the top position. I think those have been the biggest keys for him."

Joining Casey in the victory parade was Littauer in the 119-pound class. Much like his classmate, Littauer dominated the competition, highlighted by two first-period pins in his first two matches.

The performance bodes well for a potential run in the state tournament for Littauer.



"He's certainly in the mix," Sweeney said. "Of course, you have to have a lot of things go

Cohasset's T.J. Kennedy knocks the helmet off of Scituate's Chris Travis during last Friday's 5-1 loss to the Sailors.

The going gets tough

Two quick strikes lead to skaters' 5-1 loss to Scituate

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

All it takes is one goal to change the outlook and momentum of a hockey game.

Unfortunately for the Cohasset High hockey team last Friday, there were two against them.

The Skippers were less than 40 seconds away from going into the second intermission trailing Patriot League power Scituate by just one goal. Up to that point, down a couple of key players, this was a feat for which the CHS skaters could hold their heads high.

That's when the roof caved in.

A pair of goals 17 seconds apart enabled the Sailors to take a 3-0 lead into the third period, and was seen as the turning point in the 5-1 win.

"That was a tough thing to overcome," said Skippers head coach Ben Virga. "I probably should have had my top line out there for the last minute, though, so I'll take the blame for that."

With 35 seconds to go in the middle frame, Scituate leading scorer Chris Travis (goal, three assists) was able to get himself open by the right post to redirect a pretty Owen Kirkbride feed from the left corner past diving Cohasset goalie Stefan Parnell (33 saves).

Travis then won the ensuing face-off to Kirkbride, who hit the third member of that line, Garrett Callahan, in stride with a step on the Cohasset defense. The speedy Scituate senior was able to get Parnell to bite on a backhand fake as he broke in, then roofed it over his catcher to make it a 3-0 game with 18.3 seconds showing.

Up until that point, Parnell had been keeping his mates in the game with one big save after the other, but the junior simply had no chance on either of these tallies.

"I think (Parnell) might be the best goalie in Div. 3," said veteran Scituate coach Mike Breen. "He really had our guys shaking their heads for a while."

Needless to say, those two quick hitters right before the break loosened things up considerably in the Scituate locker room prior to the third period.

This was actually a scoreless game through a period and a half, but Kirkbride broke the ice at 7:54 of the middle frame when he somehow buried a bad angle shot from the right corner on the power play.

Scituate's top trio would also put the final nail in the coffin in this one, as Travis took a pass from Kirkbride coming out from the left corner, beat his man with a nifty crossover move and got a shot on to force Parnell down. Callahan was camped out by the far post for the easy put back. These three players all picked up their fourth points of the game on this tally with 6:13 to play, closing out the scoring at 5-1.

Cohasset had a ray of hope delivered at 5:28 of the third period when captain Tim Pilczak buried a slap shot from the left point, making it a 3-1 game.

It took the Sailors less than a minute to get that back, however, as Brendan Laffin poked home a rebound during a flurry in front of Parnell.

Also playing well in the loss for the Skippers were captains Ted Straughn, Pilczak and Joe Durkin, forced recently by personnel losses to move from forward to defense.

Virga, who saw his undermanned squad fall to 1-2, had little to say after the loss. The CHS skaters were coming off a 7-1 decision on the road two days earlier to perennial Central Mass. Power East Longmeadow.

Snowed out

The CHS skaters were scheduled to kick off their South Shore League schedule on Wednesday against Norwell at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham. The game was postponed, however, due to the day's inclement weather.

There was no word as of press time as to when that game might be made up.

Instead, Cohasset will kick off their SSL campaign when they host Abington/East Bridgewater (Saturday, 5:40 p.m.), with Hull (Wednesday, 5:40 p.m.) to follow.

Boys prep for league foes

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

After more than a week of practice, the Cohasset boys hoops team is ready for the games that matter most.

With undefeated Abington coming to town tonight, the Skippers kick off their South Shore League schedule.

The Green Wave, led by one of the league's best players in point guard Bill Carey, figure to pose a tough challenge for Dorian Bryant's team.

The coach is hopeful, however, that what his players have been working on in practice will lead to proper execution in tonight's game.

"Abington is a team that likes to get up and down the floor," Bryant said. "We've been working on rotating our kids back on defense, defending the fast break, and then finding the shooters.

"We need to make Carey and their other top players work for everything, for every single shot."

Cohasset will face a different kind of team Tuesday night when they travel to Carver. The Crusaders are a team that runs a more controlled, half-court style, mainly because of their great size. Carver starts three 6-foot-3 kids across their frontline.

Frontcourt players like Justin Alexander and Chris Bryan will play a large role in determining how the blue and white fare against Carver.

With undefeated Abington coming to town tonight, the Skippers kick off their South Shore League schedule.

"They really attack the boards with those three big guys," Bryant said of his team's Jan. 11 opponents. "The way we play defense and rebound the ball is going to be key. That's where the game is going to be won."

The coach says his main goal the last several days of practice has been to work on the fundamental aspects of the game.

"We've been working a lot on our conditioning and our overall basketball skills," Bryant said. "It's been a lot of fundamental work.

"We've also been starting to really focus on our defense. You have to start scheming for things when you get into league play."

There has also been a lot of positional work, as players have often been split in two groups: the point guards and swing men, and the big guys up front.

Bryant lauded his team, and in particular junior captain Trevor Brady, Alexander, Jon McCarthy and Pat McCarthy for improving both physically and mentally.

"Little by little, these guys are starting to pick things up now," Bryant said. "I think [last week's] win versus Sacred Heart was huge for us at that point in time. They're learning that our plays work, and the system works."

After Abington and Carver, the 1-4 Skippers travel to another league town, Harwich, next Friday night.

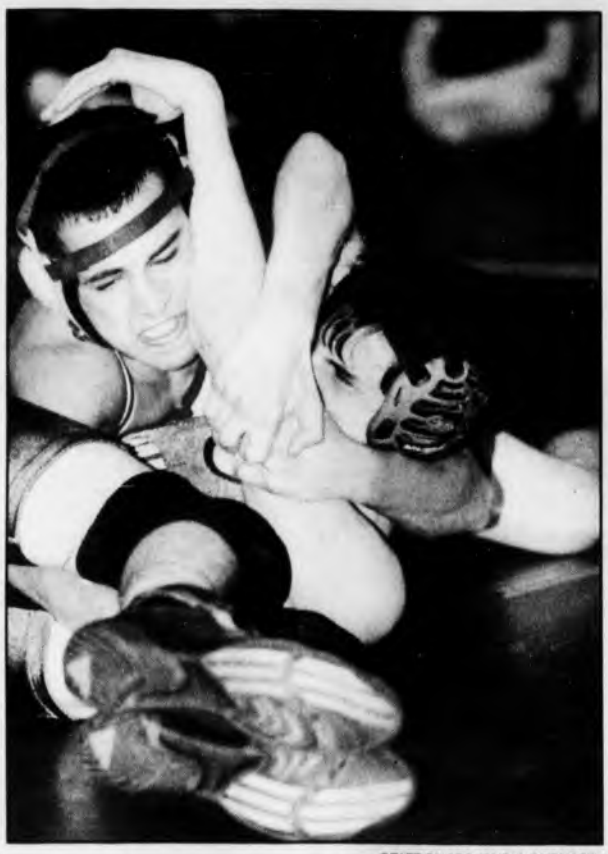
your way, and you have to be healthy. But he's certainly put himself in a good position."

Defending state champ Joe Kehoe was the runner-up in the 152-pound class. He lost to one of the best wrestlers in the state in Middleboro's Nick Kelly in the finals, but beat another first-class grappler in Somerset's Matt Dube in the semifinal via a 14-2 decision.

Three more CHS wrestlers placed in the top six at Marshfield. In the 140 weight division, junior Shane Dorian finished fifth. Perhaps most encouraging about Dorian's performance was the fact that in the fifth-place match he defeated an athlete, Sandwich's Chris Lescarbeau, to whom he had lost earlier in the tournament.

"The first time around, I think he just got tired and [Lescarbeau] caught him and pinned him," Sweeney said of Dorian. "He just wrestled a little better and didn't get caught the second time."

Senior Kevin Dinsmore also finished fifth in the 130-pound division. Dinsmore lost to eventual second-place finisher Eric Tso of North Quincy on the first day of the tournament, but performed well on Thursday.



"Kevin did a nice job of coming back from losing the first day to go 2-1 on the second day," Sweeney said.

Rounding out the top performers for Cohasset was junior Jake Watts, who finished sixth in the 103-pound division.

The Skippers will try their hand once again in tournament competition this weekend, when they participate in Saturday's North Quincy tournament. The hosts figure to join Cohasset among the top finishers, along with B.C. High, Xaverian and Milton, according to Sweeney.

After that, the Skippers return to dual meet action when they host Norwell Jan. 12. Cohasset is 9-0 on the year in dual meets, though that record will be tested toward the end of the season, when the Skippers gear up for the state tournament with some tough opponents, including Wayland, Franklin, North Attleboro and New Bedford.

And on the injury front, Sweeney says he is hoping to see defending state champion Matt Baroudi return to action within the next couple weeks, giving him a month to prepare for the state tourney.

O'Grady to receive award for lifetime contributions to golf

By Art Dunphy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Patrick O'Grady of Cohasset, the "father of the modern golf shoe" and developer of the former Etonic PGA Section Education Program, has been named the 14th recipient of the Ernie Sabayrac Award for Lifetime Contributions to the Golf Industry.

O'Grady, 69, a native of Chicago, Ill., will be honored, Jan. 28, 2005, in Orlando, Fla., at The 2004 PGA of America Awards Program. The program, held in conjunction with the 52nd PGA Merchandise Show, begins at 5:00 p.m. at the Orange County Convention Center's Linda W. Chapin Auditorium. A champagne reception begins at 4:30 p.m.

A veteran of the sports equipment industry for more than four decades, O'Grady is credited as a driving force in the golf shoe industry while with the Etonic Company (1985-97). He introduced the first waterproof golf shoe, the first biomechanical sole, better known as the "stabilizer" technology; and was instrumental in the spikeless shoe technological advances.

Spikeless golf shoes became one of the biggest equipment changes in the golf shoe industry, and a movement that affected golf course maintenance and led to more player enjoyment of the game.

"Patrick O'Grady's contributions to the golf industry and Section education are a reflection of his former 'teacher,' Ernie Sabayrac, and testimony to Ernie's legacy in golf," said PGA of America President Roger Warren. "As one of golf's premier sales pioneers, Patrick stands among those leaders in our industry.

"Through his more than 40 years of committing himself to the betterment of the PGA Professional, he has been a positive influence on the livelihood of many men and women PGA Professionals. We are very pleased to present him with the Ernie Sabayrac Award."

O'Grady was introduced to golf while caddying for Anna Mae "Babe" Ahern, owner of the Evergreen Country Club on the south side of Chicago, who continues to operate the club in her 90s.

Following his discharge from the U.S. Army in 1955, O'Grady attended DePaul University briefly before entering the construction business. In 1961, O'Grady dedicated himself to the sports equipment industry, joining Wilson Sporting Goods, and later became national sales manager for the legendary Sabayrac.

When IZOD and FootJoy split in 1979, O'Grady elected to join FootJoy, where he was named vice president of sales, and served worldwide accounts. FootJoy was sold to the Acushnet Company in 1985, and O'Grady moved to Etonic, where he remained until 1997. During his term with Etonic, O'Grady became general manager and began the former Etonic Section Education Program, where sponsorship funds were channeled to improve Section education programs.

Etonic was sold to Spalding Sports Worldwide in 1997, and O'Grady remained with the new owner until 1999, when he founded Golf Product Services of Boston and Newton, a golf accessory import firm. O'Grady continues his industry affiliations today as a private industry consultant.

"I am very pleased and humbled by this award," said O'Grady. "I think back on the years I spent with Ernie Sabayrac, who was a tough taskmaster. I learned so much and was impressed with how dedicated he was to the golf professional learning process. He taught a PGA Professional how to improve his income through merchandising. And, Ernie taught me how to connect with PGA Professionals.

"The experiences that I had calling on PGA Professionals nationwide and to be able to influence their business careers to be better merchants was a lot of fun. I was so happy to have had the opportunity to also contribute to Section education programs. It is tremendous to see how the education program of PGA Professionals has progressed."

O'Grady and his wife, Lynne, live in Cohasset. They are the parents of sons Patrick, 45, and Scott, 42, a daughter, Leslie, 34; and seven grandchildren.

The PGA of America, founded in 1916, is a not-for-profit organization that promotes the game of golf while continuing to enhance the standards of the profession. The Association is comprised of more than 28,000 men and women PGA Professionals who are dedicated to growing participation in the game of golf.

Field hockey all-scholastics

Cohasset's Allison Dean and Katie James have been named as honorable mentions to the Mariner's 2004 field hockey All-Scholastic team.

Below is the entire squad:

Steph DuVal - Senior (Capt.) Forward - Hanover

A two-year starter on the Lady Indians squad, DuVal was the leading point-getter this year for Hanover, tallying 31 points on 15 goals, 16 assists…DuVal's speed and skill was essential to the team's 10-6-2 overall record and 9-4-1 mark in the Patriot League, good for third…Shined bright all season long, but was a standout in a big game against rival Hingham, netting a pair of goals and adding two assists in a 4-0 victory…Also a starting guard on the HHS basketball team this winter…A PL All-star, DuVal plans to attend college in the fall at either Assumption, Bentley, Bryant, Salve Regina or Saint Anselm.

Angela Stearns - Junior Midfield - Hanover

This hard-hitting junior was the main distributor in at center midfield, where she made huge contributions on both offense and defense…The PL All-star was capable of clearing the ball from one end to the other with her hard, flat hits…Was among the team's assists leaders…She was also one of a few targets on corner penalties…A two-year starter on the Lady Indians squad, Stearns' overall play helped the team to a 10-6-2 overall record and 9-4-1 mark in the Patriot League, finishing third behind Duxbury and East Bridgewater…Also a talented softball player at HHS, Stearns will return to the field hockey squad next season.

Mollie Ruben - Senior Midfield - Hingham

A standout midfield/defender on the Hingham squad for several seasons, Ruben is making her first appearance on the All-Scholastic team…Seemingly always in the right spot at the right time, Ruben was one of the main distributors on the Harborwomen team, finishing the season with 14 assists…Two of those assists came in a double-overtime victory over rival Hanover to knock the Lady Indians out of tournament play…She also scored one goal and it was a big one as she drilled a penalty stroke to top Patriot League rival East Bridgewater for the second time in one season…A PL All-star, Ruben was also named team MVP…A three sport athlete at HHS, Ruben also plays basketball and lacrosse.

Colleen McKenna - Senior - Midfielder Silver Lake

Four-year starter earned Patriot League all-star status … Just a tremendous all-around player who saw time at forward, defender, and midfield … Great endurance allows her to play nearly every minute of every game. Like America Express, she's everywhere she needs to be … Coach Marlene Lopes: "She was just an absolute workhorse for us. She played whatever spot we needed her to be in."

Courtney Stuble - Senior Fullback - Silver Lake

Three-year starter was the backbone of the Lakers defense … An incredibly aggressive athlete, she took it as a personal mission to keep the ball moving forward … Tallied several assists … Called upon during penalty corners. Coach Marlene Lopes: "She was tremendous at keeping the ball out of the hot zone."

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse Looking for Coaches

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for volunteer assistant coaches at all levels for its spring season, with a particular emphasis on finding coaches for its girls teams.

Cohasset currently expects to field as many as 12 teams this spring, but the number of participants could push that even higher if there is adequate coaching available to protect and develop the youngsters involved.

In all, Cohasset will field boys teams for players in grades 3 through 8 and girls in grades 5 through 8, plus a 90-minute weekly clinic for girls in grades 3 and 4.

The shortage of coaches is particularly acute for girls, where the current coaching staffs are so limited that roster sizes must be kept small, and where the future of the program could be jeopardized without the emergence of volunteers. A girls coaching clinic is being run Jan. 30 in Plymouth by the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League; Cohasset Youth Lacrosse covers the cost of sending volunteer coaches - for girls or boys - to clinics.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse currently has head coaches at all age levels, but with the probability of roughly 300 children spread throughout the program this year, increasing the size of coaching staffs is essential for player development.

Through its 10-year history, the foundation of the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse coaching staff has been volunteers who do not have children on the teams involved. In seeking additional coaches, the program is hoping to get both community volunteers and parents whose children will play. Experience playing or coaching the game is desired, but not necessary; coaches must be able to throw and catch with a lacrosse stick in order to teach others and facilitate drills.

At all but the youngest age levels, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse holds two practices each week, and has games on Sunday afternoon. The youngest boys have one weekly practice, while the girls clinic program will be one weekly 90-minute session. Assistant coaches are not expected to attend every event, although they should be able to appear often enough to be perceived by the players as a team leader.

In addition to coaches, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is interested in developing referees who can work its games. Interested individuals will be required to take some officiating instruction classes during the winter, and may then be eligible to work games either with a partner or solo in the spring.

For more information or to express your interest in coaching or officiating, call Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of youth lacrosse, at 781-383-9858.

COASTAL STARS

SQUIRT C4

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 team came away with a 3-3 tie verses Pembroke on Dec. 19.

The Stars got the first goal in the first minute of the game when defenseman Jonathan Gardner took a pass from forward James Daley and whistled a shot over the Pembroke netminder's left shoulder.

Andrew Tautkus made it 2-0 Stars when he sailed up the left boards alone, stick-handling around the Pembroke defense, and made a b-line for the net, confidently sliding one in.

Stars defenders Tristan Wiggin, RJ Neuls, Nick Craig and Jonathan Gardner kept Pembroke out of the Stars territory for the first 11 minutes of the first period. Pembroke got there first opportunity to score on a breakaway but were denied by a brilliant save by Stars goalie Max Hemingway.

The Stars struck again when forward Ryan Melia camped outside the crease and redirected a shot on net by teammate James Daley, making it 3-0 Stars at the end of the first period.

Pembroke came alive in the second period, scoring three goals in 10 minutes to tie it up 3-3.

During the scoreless third period, both teams held strong. Stars forwards James Daley, Matt Tautkus, Ryan Melia, Andrew Tautkus, Tommy Coyne, Liam Rose and Michael McPartlin outshot their Pembroke opponents but could not regain their lead. The Pembroke goalie made several outstanding saves, and awed the crowd when he made a stunning glove save off the usually unstoppable Daley wrist shot.

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 team gave their coaches a Christmas present with their best game of the season on Dec. 26. Despite missing their two leading scorers, the Stars squad rallied, playing three periods of very smart hockey.

Stars forward Michael McPartlin shined, getting his first hat trick of the season, helping to propel the Stars to a 7-0 win over Pembroke. The Stars also got a big hand from Coleman Hernon, a member of the C-2 team, who helped the shorthanded C-4 team. Hernon demonstrated great control of the puck in the Stars zone and initiated several of the Stars scoring drives.

The Star's first goal came when right winger Tommy Coyne slid a perfect pass to linemate Matthew Tautkus who pinged it off the inside of the left post, making it 1-0 Stars. The Coyne-Tautkus duo struck again on their next shift, with Coyne feeding Tautkus another perfect pass that Tautkus lifted up over the shoulder of the Pembroke goalie.

The Stars continued their first period rally with Michael McPartlin getting his first of three goals during a Pembroke power play. The shorthanded goal was scored when McPartlin took a pass from linemate Matt Tautkus and beamed it into the back of the net.

The Stars scored their second shorthanded goal when Nick Craig fed forward Ryan Melia a perfect pass that Melia converted into a break-a-way and backhanded into the Pembroke net.

Stars defenders Tristan Wiggin, Nick Craig, Coleman Hernon and Jonathan Gardner shut down the Pembroke offense at the blue line and fed their forwards saucer pass after saucer pass. Goalie max Hemingway earned the shutout by turning aside the few drives Pembroke made into his territory.

The Stars capitalized on a power play during the third period, scoring their fifth goal when Melia fed McPartlin a pass out in front and McPartlin fired one in past the Pembroke netminder. The Stars got on the board once again when Defenseman Jonathan Gardner whistled an unstoppable wrist shot in from the right circle, making it 6-0 Stars.

Savvy teamwork between forwards Liam Rose, Melia and McPartlin resulted in the final goal of the game. Melia stripped the puck from a Pembroke defenseman behind the net and found McPartlin out in front. McPartlin one-timed it, making it 7-0 Stars.

The Stars squad chalked up their 10th win of the season to the "power of passing."

MITE C2

The Coastal Stars Mite C 2 team got off to a strong start in 2005 defeating Pembroke on Sunday, 6-2, at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham. The Stars got strong games from JoJo Carbone, who netted a hat trick, Kyle Bowman, who had two goals and two assists, and goalie Chris Phillips who was outstanding in net.

The Stars got the scoring started in the first period with Shaelyn Tobin scoring a breakaway goal on a feed from Mathew Johnson. JoJo Carbone made the score 2-0 with a goal off the rebound of a Brian Mathews shot. JoJo continued his scoring prowess with his second goal of period assisted by Kyle Bowman giving the Stars a 3-0 lead after one period.

The second period saw some solid up and down hockey; the Stars Red line of Tucker Antico, Shaelyn Tobin, Seamus Ryan, Andrew Kuppens and Mathew Johnson kept the puck in the Pembroke end for most of the period controlling the action in the corners while Kyle Bowman, Brian Mathews and JoJo Carbone had several breakaway chances during the period with JoJo netting his third goal on a wrist shot to the upper corner providing the Stars with a 4-2 lead going into the final period

The third period saw some outstanding play by the Stars blue liners Gunner Mckenzie, Derek Benson, Matts Nelson, and Robert Bothwell. Having kept Pembroke's top line in check for most of the game, the blue line put pressure on Pembroke with solid stick handling by Derek Benson and good a good scoring chance by Gunner McKenzie who hit the post on shot from the corner. Kyle Bowman's two third period breakaway goals finished off the day's scoring solidifying the win.

MITE A

The Coastal Star Mite A's had a busy Christmas vacation playing five games over a six day period. After having Christmas weekend off, the boys participated in the Santa Claus Tournament held at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham.

The team played in four games during the week, losing only one to South Shore Conference rival Norwood in a close 3-1 game on Tuesday. The boys won their final game on Thursday against a tough Newton team by a score of 5-4 to win the Blitzen Flight championship. The Stars returned to league play on New Year's Day in Rockland and dominated the South Shore Eagles team by a score of 13-0.

With some of the team away on vacation, the Stars had only two lines of offense and defense and fill in goaltender Garrett Leahy recorded the shut out. Outstanding defensive play by Patrick Holway, Jeremy Duchini, Sam Topham and Charlie Michalowski helped to keep the number of shots on net to a minimum. Scoring leaders of the game were David Cataldo with four goals and Brendan Crane, who had a hat trick by the end of the first period.

Other goals came from Colin MacDonald, Sam Topham, Kenny Parnell, Martin Buckley, and Tommy O'Brien who had two goals in the third period. After skating together for the past three months and playing in over twenty games (regular season and tournaments combined) the team is really coming together; more passing, follow up shots on rebounds and plenty of backchecking as the season goes on.

The win against the Eagles brings the Coastal Stars Mite A's conference record to 10-1-2 which keeps them tied in second place with Norwood. The Stars next game is the 7 a.m. sunrise game next Sunday in Rockland against Hanover.

SQUIRT A

The Squirt A Coastal Stars ended 2004 on a high note as they captured the Cranberry Tournament Championship at Hobomock Arena. John Ryan led the way with a hat trick in game 1 against Hyde Park. Brandon McPherson was fantastic in net, flashing a quick glove on several saves.

Jonathan Spitz, Jake Durkin, Chris Carpenter, and Neil Conway rounded out the scoring, and Patrick Burchill was a force in the corners as the Stars opened with a rousing 7-1 win. The Stars were brought back to earth in game 2 by a disciplined and hustling Plymouth squad. Plymouth skated freely throughout, earning a 6-1 win over the seemingly overmatched Stars. Mike Carbone notched the lone Stars' goal.

Facing elimination from the championship finale, the Stars rebounded beautifully against Quincy in Friday morning's game 3. Quincy scored first with 10:30 left in the second period, but Neil Conway, with an assist from Mike Carbone, knotted the score a minute later. Jake Durkin, assisted by Jonathan Spitz and Kevin McDougall, scored with four minutes left in the second, but Quincy tied before the period ended. Jonathan Spitz broke the tie midway through the third. Trevor Salmon scored with 1:19 left and assisted Neil Conway on the final tally, and the Stars gained entry into the afternoon final against Plymouth with the 5-2 win.

Having lost to Plymouth two days earlier, the Stars were decided underdogs. But the dogs came to play. The Stars defensive corps was immense. DJ Evans, Dan LeBlanc, Kevin McDougall, and EJ Culhane kept the play in Plymouth's zone with stellar play at the blue line, and protected its net as if it were a junkyard. The Stars forwards hounded the Plymouth attack with consistent forechecking and dogged backchecking. Dan Durkin was razor sharp in net, snaring everything Plymouth fired at him.

The play on the ice was physical, as both teams were called for eight penalties each. Jonathan Spitz potted the game's first goal at 7:16 of the first, and the Stars seemed to sense a chance. John Ryan, with assists from DJ Evans and Chris Carpenter, scored with 4:47 left.

The 2-0 lead held through a scoreless second, with the Stars at one point overcoming a two-man Plymouth advantage. Neil Conway put the Stars up by three at 8:12 of the third on a breakaway goal. Plymouth notched one with 5:47 left, and a comeback murmur was heard in the crowd. But the Stars never gave an inch. John Ryan, assisted by Steven Harrington, tallied the final goal with 1:37 left, and the Stars were tournament champions. Dan Durkin earned the Most Valuable Player award for his excellent play in net.

Youth lacrosse signups

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will close its registration for the spring of 2005 with its second sign-up session on Saturday, Jan. 8 from 9 a.m. to noon at Cohasset High School.

Having opened registration in early November, organizers expect to have full rosters once the Saturday session is complete.

"It currently appears that we will hit or surpass our ideal roster sizes during the registration period," said Chuck Jaffe, director of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "We are committed to accepting all players who sign up by January 8, but there comes a point where having too many players diminishes the experience for everyone. We do not have cuts, and we play equal playing time, so the only way to be fair in managing our roster limits is to turn away latecomers.

"We would prefer for everyone interested to sign up on time, giving us the maximum time to deal with some of the issues that occur when we go beyond our ideal roster sizes."

Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls in the 15 & Under (7th and 8th graders) and 13 & Under (5th and 6th grades) age groups. At the 11 & Under level (grades 3-4), Cohasset will field teams for boys and sponsor a weekly skills-development clinic for girls.

Jaffe noted that registration for the girls teams - but not the clinic - will definitely close on Jan. 8, and that it's entirely possible the boys program will max out on capacity as well.

"If your child is unsure about wanting to play, sign them up now," Jaffe said. "They can back out up to the beginning of March without any charge, and they will open up a space on the waiting list we are almost certain to have."

The registration fee is $145, with discounts for families signing up more than one child. The girls' clinic costs $100 per player. Late registrations, if roster spots are available, will cost $175.

Returning players are encouraged to bring their old jerseys and gear to registration day to donate old uniforms and equipment to the East Fremantle Lacrosse Club, a sister program Cohasset has adopted in Australia. Players who attached a note to their jersey — including their address and e-mail — will be connected with an Australian player as a possible pen-pal.

Parents who can not attend the Jan. 8 registration should contact Jaffe by e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com <mailto:CAJaffe@aol.com> in sufficient time to have registration materials mailed and returned prior to Jan. 8. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered.

For more information, co to www.cohassetlacrosse.com <http://www.cohassetlacrosse.com> or contact Jaffe at 781-383-9858 or CAJaffe@aol.com <mailto:CAJaffe@aol.com>.

WORSHIP NOTES

Media program at St. Stephen's

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is again offering a faith-based program called Via Media starting Wednesday, Jan. 26 from 7-9 p.m.The objective is to create an open and inclusive environment that appeals to people wondering about how the Episcopal Church approaches issues of faith. People are encouraged to bring their ideas and questions, informational resources will be provided and a place to exchange your thoughts and voice your opinions.

Over a period of eight weeks, St. Stephen's invites those seeking a spiritual community to enter both the journey and the conversation. Each week will begin with dinner at 7 p.m. and will be followed by a short video. Small and large group discussions will allow you to share your thoughts, reactions and questions to the topics presented in the video.

Using this combination of learning styles, they will encounter the basic principles of Christianity through the Anglican approach of Scripture, Tradition, and Reason. All people are encouraged to ask questions, and to learn how to answer their questions of faith.

This program is open to the public and is free. They hope you will consider joining for dinner and conversation. To register, call St. Stephen's at 781-383-1083 no later than Jan. 24.

Book discussion at Second Congregational

Two-session discussionseries at Second Congregational Church on the book, "The Gospel of Mary Magdalene." All are welcome, Wednesdays, Jan. 26 and Feb. 2, 7:30 p.m. at the church on Highland Avenue.

OBITUARY

Dorothy M. Ingersoll

A memorial service for Dorothy M. Ingersoll of Cohasset was held Wednesday (Jan. 5) at the Church of the Good Shepheard, Mount Auburn Street, Watertown.

Miss Ingersoll, formerly of Watertown, died last Friday (Dec. 31) at the Cohasset Knoll Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation Facility off Rte. 3A.

She was legally blind and was a student and then a teacher at the Perkins Institute for the Blind in Watertown. Miss Ingersoll was an advocate and lecturer for the blind.

She leaves a sister Mildred Herbert of Groveland, Fla., and many nieces and nephews. Burial will be private.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset, handled the arrangements.

Health care careers are booming

By Charlie Breitrose
NEWS STAFF WRITER

FRAMINGHAM – Those feeling stuck in a dead-end job, or looking for a way to help others can move into a health care profession relatively quickly.

In just a few months, one can earn a certificate in emergency medical training or spend a year taking classes toward a practical nursing degree.

The Framingham campus of Mass Bay Community College serves as headquarters for the school's health, human services and education programs, and offers 16 programs, said Lily Hsu, dean of the program.

The college offers programs in several health fields which qualify graduates to work in a variety of jobs including nursing, X-ray technology, paramedics and physical therapy.

The college gears its programs to people wanting to make a career change or get into the work force fast.

"One of the priorities is for them to complete the program as quickly as possible," Hsu said. "They have families to take care of and financial needs."

There's a big need for workers in health care professions, Hsu said, so graduates of Mass Bay's programs have good job prospects.

"There is a need, particularly in health care, to move people more quickly into the field," Hsu said.

Like many of the health programs at Mass Bay, Hsu said most students in the practical nursing program want to change professions or move up the ladder. About half the students in the practical nursing class have prior experience in the medical field.

After completing the course, students will be licensed practical nurses (LPN), but most want to go on and become registered nurses (RN) or even nurse practitioners.

Franklin resident Jennifer Vozzella works at a doctor's office, but wants to become a nurse.

"I have always been interested in medicine," Vozzella said. "I have never gone on to any higher education."

Besides attending class and doing labs, students in the nursing program get practical experience interning at nursing homes and other medical facilities. The work has been eye-opening, said Millis resident Debra Mitchell.

"So far I have seen a lot of things," Mitchell said. "I have taken care of wounds, worked with respiratory patients and other kinds of patients."

Students work at places like MetroWest Medical Center in Framingham, Cambridge's Youville Hospital & Rehabilitation Center and Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital in Boston.

Cynthia Bechtel, instructor for the practical nursing program, said the people she works with are not the typical college student. The average age is 32, and she only remembers two students who came straight from high school into the program.

"We don't have students just out of high school who have mom at home cooking for them," Bechtel said.

The vast majority of students in the practical nursing program work at the same time they attend school, and many have children. Hollis-ton's Sara Monahan said doing this can be intense.

"It's a lot of work," Monahan said. "Other things get put on hold, like Christmas."

The college offers three kinds of programs, Bechtel said, to meet students' needs. The day program takes a calendar year to complete, Bechtel said. The evening program, where students attend classes in the evening and on the weekends, takes about 20 months to finish.

When they finish the practical nursing program, Bechtel said her students have had great success finding employment.

"One hundred percent of our students are placed," Bechtel said. "There is no problem finding jobs."

Dana Sampson, chairman of the paramedicine department, runs two programs – one to become an emergency medical technician (EMT) and one to become a paramedic. The programs attract all kinds of people.

"Sometimes we get kid right out of high school an sometimes adults mid-caree who want to change profes sion," Sampson said.

To become an EMT onl takes one semester, Sampso said – eight hours a week fc 14 weeks. After becoming a EMT, people can study to be paramedic, Sampson said.

Day and evening program are available for the para medicine program, Sampso said.

Both programs have goo career potential, Sampso said.

"EMT an paramedi-cine hav a lot c use o the ca reer lad-der," Samp-son said "You ca get a foc in critica care or ge into othe health profes sions."

If nursing c emergency med cine is not your thing, the co lege offers a variety of othe programs including massag physical therapy and medica coding.

Some students find tha mixing and matching certif cates can help their jo prospects, Hsu said.

"Many physical therapis assistants and many thera peutic massage students d both so they are able to make themselves more mar ketable," Hsu said.

Flexibility key to success

By James S. Liljestrand, M.D., M.P.H.
NEWS CORRESPONDENT

Health care promises vast and varied employment opportunities well into the future. When the Massachusetts Medical Society's Committee on Medical Education conducts surveys, it sees an increasing need for primary care physicians, a huge statewide shortage of nurses and a serious need for people to serve as laboratory technologists, cytotechnologists (people who study cells) and radiologic technicians.

Before exploring the details of a specific field, it may help to look at the strengths that mature students bring to adult education. Simply put, you've got to be able to assess yourself honestly, evaluate your work against appropriate criteria and then develop ways to do better.

In health care, no matter what the discipline, perpetual learning and the abilities to change and continuously adapt are vital to success. Another feature of the new health care workplace – and working life – is the team concept. Individuals must apply all their skills to working with others in teams that are focused on patients and on adapting to each patient's varied needs.

Have you ever heard someone say, "It's not in my job description"? Today, people who fare best are able to look beyond a narrow scope to help the team problem-solve and innovate. Adult learners must become adept at taking these learning philosophies and applying them to job advancements and new careers.

We're talking about flexibility in learning and the ability to think creatively. Increasingly, we call on both to adapt to a patient's needs and to the complex needs of the health-care team. Thus, people who have learned how to participate and collaborate on teams and projects are the most valued employees.

Whether working in the pharmacy or as an office manager, one's educational degree may be the least important predictor of success. Rather, the person with strong organizational and collaborative abilities will shine through to become a star performer.

MassPRO, the Massachusetts Quality Improvement Organization, a nonprofit organization that collects, interprets and shares data with caregivers to ensure better health for all, finds its professional staff working in many venues: hospitals, nursing homes, home health agencies and physician offices. In all these settings we find an acute need for health-care workers who understand how to be "change agents," who know how to assess systems and who can make the systems and processes they work with better and simpler.

Helping patients is a human activity, but systems can make the work more reliable and safer for patients, and can help humans manage multiple projects and meet deadlines. Skilled professionals are needed to develop, install and maintain these systems.

Let's not forget two important skills that must be acquired and continually honed. The first is computer literacy. Adult learners must be adept at using the computer and know how to navigate and utilize the ever-expanding array of possibilities on the Internet.

The second is oral communication: one must be able to verbalize knowledge – that is, talk about processes, systems and ideas. Why? Because most teaching is done orally and is oriented to patients, co-workers and healthcare teammates.

Due to the increased focus on quality, patient safety and the new financial incentives tied to them, health care is quickly moving toward redesigning and reorganizing health-care services.

Further, sophisticated information technology and improved integration of public health services, such as monitoring for outbreaks of illness like the flu (called biosurveillance), patient registries (to track medications and treatments) and other initiatives, all require cooperation among all health care entities. As a result, there is also a deep need for people trained in public policy, management, informatics (the management of health data) and public health. People trained in several areas will be especially valuable because they will become "bridge communicators" – connecting one discipline to another. Clearly, computers are the roadmap to this new world.

It's not enough to learn a specific skill or discipline such as nursing, technical work, medicine or administration. Instead, the goal must be to become a communicative, lifelong learner who is self motivated and who has the ability to set and achieve personal goals.

If you display energy and aptitude for working with patients or with the teams responsible for their care, this is all to the good. Bravo. People who have discovered work they love often find it easier to uncover that ounce of inspiration needed along with the pounds of perspiration it will take to reshape their work lives. But believe me, the effort is well worth it!

James S. Liljestrand, M.D., M.P.H., is performance improvement advisor at MassPRO and chairperson of the Committee on Medical Education of the Massachusetts Medical Society, the statewide association of physicians.

Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., in Newport News, Va. as the steel-hulled yacht "Viking." It was later sold and renamed "Noparo" before being purchased by the US Navy in December 1940. The ship was then retrofitted and renamed St. Augustine on Jan. 9, 1941, and commissioned USS St. Augustine (PG-54) on Jan. 16, 1941.

The town of Cohasset will never forget the sacrifice Bobby made for his country, and to ensure his memory lives on in the hearts of the town's residents, in 1947, the town renamed and dedicated the road at the south end of the common, Robert E. Jason Road.

The USS St. Augustine got underway from New York on Jan. 6, 1944 leading a convoy of ships bound for Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Late that evening, just southeast of Cape May, NJ, she was struck hard amidships by the merchant tanker Camas Meadows splitting her seams in the collision. In only five minutes, the boat sank into the Atlantic, the rough wintry seas claiming 115 of her crew, including Bobby. Only 30 crew members survived.

Although the accident which claimed Bobby's life took place Jan. 6, he was pronounced deceased on Jan. 7, the day his body was found. Once recovered, the Navy sent his body back home in a casket sealed with a glass cover. Due to his height, the oversized casket could only be brought into the family home for viewing after workmen removed the front parlor window.

Bobby's mother Helen Jason was so distraught with the lack of details the Navy provided her regarding her son's death, that she called upon longtime Cohasset resident and Navy Captain Herbert Grassie to see if he could press the Navy for more details. Friends say Helen was once a vibrant and community-minded woman who nearly went into seclusion at her home for the rest of her life after her son gave his for the country.

Nearly 400 Cohasset men and women answered the country's call during World War II. For eight families like the Jason's, the price of freedom was high. Bobby was the third Cohasset serviceman to die during World War II, and the first of three to die during 1944. Prior to Bobby, Merchant Sailor Allen Buffum and Navy Lt. Perry H. Johnson gave their lives in the name of freedom.

The town of Cohasset will never forget the sacrifice Bobby made for his country, and to ensure his memory lives on in the hearts of the town's residents, in 1947, the town renamed and dedicated the road at the south end of the common, Robert E. Jason Road.

Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt provided the Mariner with the information for this article. For more information on Robert E. Jason or any of the Cohasset veterans who have paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom, please visit the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Fallen servicemen honored around town

Robert E. Jason is one of many veterans who have been honored by the town of Cohasset. The town lost seven other men during World War II, who have all been memorialized with squares, parks, and roads in town including:

- Allen A. Buffum: Square at Beechwood St. & So. Main Street
- Norman Todd: Road intersects with Beechwood St., and a memorial park is located at their intersection.
- William B. Long: Road at the Common
- Howard R. Gleason: Road to Yacht Club from Margin St.
- Perry H. Johnson: Square at Beach St. & Atlantic Ave.
- David H. Parker: Square at King St. & Beechwood St.
- Everett F. Studley: Square at Jerusalem Rd. & Hull St. West's Corner

The mothers of the eight servicemen that gave their lives are memorialized at the Gold Star Mothers Monument at Woodside Cemetery.

Roughly 498 men and women from Cohasset served during World War II from 1941 until the war was declared over in December 1946. Cohasset has memorialized all of its service men and women from the "Greatest Generation" by listing all of their names at Veterans Park at Cohasset Harbor. A book of Cohasset servicemen's names was presented to the National Monuments Commission at the dedication of the WWII Memorial, on May 29, 2004 in Washington, D.C.

LIBRARY CORNER

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

SOUTH B 3

Put focus on workforce

By Mhesh Sharma
NEWS CORRESPONDENT

COMMENTARY

Massachusetts is blessed with first-rate institutions of higher education. Their productivity fuels the engine of innovation and progress. The quality of education, training and professional development provided by these institutions is largely responsible for the new business starts, new product development, new patents, prototypes and ideas.

Research universities and graduate schools have done a tremendous job in producing leaders in medicine, law, science, engineering and arts. But the education and training on the other end – workforce development – cannot claim the same level of success.

Many companies are started, but then leave the commonwealth to other states. One of the reasons is the lack of an appropriate workforce. According to a MassInc report, today almost 1.3 million adults in the commonwealth lack skills to be employed well. In the midst of these world-class institutions, more than one-third of its residents have a high school diploma or less.

America faces four major challenges: becoming competitive in the global economy; reversing the growth of a disfranchised underclass; developing a broad-based workforce possessing information age skills; and using the diversity of our society as an asset. Meeting these challenges successfully depends upon on the effectiveness of our education system and workforce development. Integration of higher education and worker development is the key to this success.

Many working adults, a large number of young people and a significant number of new immigrants, are outside the higher education spectrum and its benefits. These are among the populations that are full of untapped potential and untapped knowledge.

Despite school reform nationwide at the K-12 level and efforts to narrow the achievement gaps between black and white, poor and rich, urban and suburban, it is virtually certain that a significant number of people will reach adulthood under-prepared for the rigors and demands of contemporary life.

We have new pressures to combine new knowledge and understanding of the functioning of new and emerging services for an increasing numbers of individuals. By different accounts, almost two-thirds of all jobs now require at least some level of postsecondary education and that number will increase daily. The demands of most jobs require the convergence of skills from liberal arts and specific technical skills. Yet, our assumptions about higher education and workforce needs of today are still guided by the ideas of the early 20th century.

The notion of access to college needs to be redefined; it should be for access to and mastery of knowledge and training in services.

The traditional content of the liberal arts degree, a phenomenon at least 300 years old, has served a few of our young well. The traditional training for service jobs, without heavy emphasis on critical thinking, problem solving, numeracy and a sense of social responsibility has placed people in narrow and dead-end jobs.

The content and skills needed by a large segment of today's society are quite different. The knowledge about applied technologies, literacy and numeracy at a high level, problem-solving strategies, critical and independent thinking for making decisions, the ability to work with people of diverse backgrounds, competence in communications – written, oral and geographical – and a sense of civic responsibility is required of all workers in all professions.

Higher education in the form of liberal education must become the common experience for nearly all. We need to contemplate redesigning the package and content of the baccalaureate degree. It should prepare people not only to cope with complexity but also to be able to cope with change.

We need to conceptualize undergraduate education and workforce development not as separate entities, but as an integrated whole. Collaborations between institutions of higher education and organizations that educate and train people for vocational services is the answer.

College roles and structures must change for education to spin outward to include individuals, corporations, workplaces and community-based organizations in the delivery of higher education.

Mahesh C. Sharma is president and professor of mathematics at Cambridge College. Internationally known for his groundbreaking work in mathematics education, Sharma is a highly respected author, teacher ana teacher-trainer, researcher, consultant and lecturer.

The return of the Rat Pack

Rockland native co-producing tribute show making area debut

Dick Feeney

In the early 1960s, when Las Vegas was the personal playground of Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis, Jr., and Joey Bishop, Dick Feeney was just a child on the real-life playgrounds of Rockland. Fast forward 40 years and Bishop is the only surviving member of the fabled Rat Pack while a now grown-up Feeney is a co-producer of the long-running Las Vegas production of "A Tribute to Frank, Sammy, Joey and Dean" which has its New England premier next week at the Stoneham Theatre.

"Our show has been playing at the Greek Isles Hotel & Casino since 2002 and our sales numbers are still going through the roof," explained Feeney by telephone from Las Vegas last week. "In the years since Sammy, Dean and Frank have died, there has been a huge resurgence of interest in them. Every night, people who see our show make a point of telling us that what we're presenting is what the real Las Vegas was all about."

"A Tribute to Frank, Sammy, Joey and Dean" opens with the recorded voice of the late comedian Buddy Hackett as God asking the foursome to return to the stage one last time to recreate one of the legendary performances they gave in the Copa Room at the Sands Hotel four decades ago, complete with a 12-piece orchestra. Hackett's own son, Sandy Hackett, opens the show as comic Bishop, followed by music and comedy by the cast which includes Gary Anthony as Sinatra ("All of Me," "Angel Eyes," "Fly Me to the Moon"), Doug Starks performing "What Kind of Fool Am I," "That Old Black Magic," "Me and My Shadow," and "Mr. Bojangles," and Andy DiMino crooning Martin's chart-topping hits like "Ain't That a Kick in the Head," and "That's Amore."

Feeney is currently presenting four shows in Vegas - "Sandy Hackett's Comedy Club," "The World's Greatest Magic Show," and the Rat Pack tribute at the Greek Isles as well as the Strip's longest-running afternoon show, "Viva Las Vegas" at the Stratosphere. Feeney is also owner of "The Flying Elvi" skydiving team first seen in the 1992 feature film "Honeymoon in Vegas." A 1970 graduate of Rockland High School, Feeney first arrived in Las Vegas 20 years ago to co-produce "An Evening at La Cage" and "Crazy Girls" at the Riviera Hotel and Casino. His producing career has taken him everywhere from Japan to Monte Carlo, but Feeney got his show business start locally as a trumpet player and singer.

"After high school, I went to Boston University for a year and then I joined a South Shore band called 'Utopia.' We played places like Surf Nantasket in Hull. From 1971 to 1976, I was with 'The Lewis & Clark Expedition.' After touring for a while, I realized what I really wanted to do was stay closer to home so I formed a group called 'Gemini' to play weddings and local club dates. The group's popularity took off, however, and ended up playing everywhere from Barbados to Caesar's Palace in Atlantic City. It was while on tour in Hawaii in 1976 that I saw my first open-ended showroom production.. Right then, I decided that was what I wanted to do."

Feeney enjoys it, too, especially collaborating with co-producer Hackett."We're the only ones who have secured the rights to all the material we do in our show. This is thanks to Sandy, who grew up next to Joey Bishop's house in Beverly Hills and always thought of him as 'Uncle Joey'. Thanks to his father, Sandy has been around these guys since he was just a child. Buddy passed away on June 30, 2003, but before then he did all kinds of things to help us. The show takes place in the period, but after many requests we have found a way to include later Sinatra classics like 'New York, New York' and 'My Way.' "

("A Tribute to Frank, Sammy, Joey and Dean" will be at the Stoneham Theatre, 395 Main Street, Stoneham, January 12-16. For tickets and information, call 781-279-2200 or visit www.stonehamtheatre.org <http://www.stonehamtheatre.org>.)

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127
GETTING SOME FEEDBACK
The phenomenon known as "feedback" occurs when the amplified sound from a hearing instrument re-enters the instrument and is re-amplified. Typically, what results is a high-pitched whistling tone, the loudness and pitch of which varies. Hearing instruments will often whistle when being inserted into the ear or being turned off. Feedback may also occur when slipping clothing over your head or while you are cupping your hand to your ear. Hearing-instrument users may also experience feedback when hugging another person or laying their heads on their pillows. On the other hand, if feedback occurs with a hearing instrument placed correctly in the ear, as the result of head movement or chewing, a hearing specialist should address the problem.
A hearing instrument that doesn't fit properly or deliver the quality of sound the wearer has a right to expect is probably going to end up unworn at the back of the night table drawer. For comprehensive testing and evaluations, expert hearing aid fittings, as well as follow-up adjustments using innovative, state-of-the-art technology, please call us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 781-337-1144. When it comes to better hearing, you can always count on us being on your side and by your side. We're located at 534 Main St. (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, with a second office in Abington.
P.S. It is natural to hear the noise of the wind in your hearing instrument when you are outdoors on a blustery day.

DESTINATIONS

The Tao of Taos

Cultures mix in New Mexico art and ski enclave

Melanie Young

About an hour's drive north of Santa Fe, this adobe-walled town in the shadow of Taos Mountain has long been a magnet for artists, writers and rebels with vision and imagination.

Whether it's the quality of the light or the spectacular high-desert-and-alpine scenery, Taos has worked its quirky magic on trailblazers from legendary Indian scout Kit Carson to British novelist D. H. Lawrence. Famed for his keen eyesight and frontier expertise, Carson settled down here in the 1820s (his house is now a museum). About a century later, Lawrence arrived and eventually purchased a ranch near town.

But they were not the only ones seduced by this village's offbeat charms.

When a broken wagon wheel forced a couple of accomplished New York artists to cool their heels in Taos in 1898, Bert Geer Phillips and Ernest L. Blumenschein fell in love with its intriguing Southwestern blend of American Indian, Spanish colonial, Mexican and American frontier cultures. Deciding to stick around, the painters founded the Taos Society of Artists in 1912 — the same year New Mexico became a state. By the 1920s, when writers and artists such as Lawrence, Gertrude Stein and Georgia O'Keeffe began showing up, Taos was well on its way to being a renowned art colony.

The town has been dancing to a different drummer ever since. It was no coincidence that Dennis Hopper filmed "Easy Rider," one of the quintessential anti-establishment movies of the 1960s, in Taos.

Nor is it coincidence that pioneering solar architect Michael Reynolds made Taos his home and headquarters of his company, Solar Survival.

If you'd like to see what it's like being "off the grid," check out the solar-powered Dobson House, which might be the nation's only Earthship bed-and-breakfast.

From a distance, Dobson House (rates from $110; 505-776-5738; www.taosnet.com/ dobsonhouse), about 10 miles outside of Taos near the dramatic Rio Grande Gorge, resembles something extraterrestrial. Constructed 12 years ago by John and Joan Dobson from 2,000 old tires, 20,000 recycled aluminum cans and 28,000 pounds of dry concrete mixed by hand, the property has curving outer walls inset with the ends of glass bottles that glitter in the bright winter sun.

Crowning the layered residence, a dome-like room of glass windows provides a 360-degree view of the desert and distant mountains. Guests staying in the two large suites easily can hike to nearby hot springs in the Rio Grande Gorge.

Another Taos resident fascinated by alternative architecture, millionaire and ecologist Tom Worrell decided to combine recycling and "green" design principles with deluxe comfort and high style when he opened El Monte Sagrado Living Resort & Spa in downtown Taos.

A luxurious boutique property with adobe casitas and lavish theme suites decorated with the collaboration of local artists, El Monte Sagrado is about as green as a resort gets these days. Besides a rainwater-collection system, the resort has solar collectors; heating and cooling systems that minimize the use of conventional energy; and an organic system that cleans and recycles all waste water to irrigate the landscaping. Treated water flows into the jungle-like indoor "Biolarium," featuring a waterfall, fishpond and tropical plants near an elegant indoor swimming pool (rates from $345; 800-828-TAOS; www.elmontesagrado.com).

Alternative accommodations and the art scene are just the icing on the cake. Most visitors are drawn here by either skiing or the picturesque Taos Pueblo, or both. The Pueblo, a complex of multistoried adobe dwellings, has been inhabited for more than a thousand years, and looks today much as it did when the first Spanish explorers arrived in 1540. It's open for visitors (ceremonial dances are a particularly big draw).

Art is a constant presence in Taos, even at bed-and-breakfasts such as the American Artists Gallery House B&B, top. Visitors to this New Mexico town can peruse local arts and crafts, left, and enjoy unique accommodations, such as the Egypt Suite at the El Monte Sagrado Living Resort & Spa, right.

The ladders on the Pueblo's sun-baked earthen walls bring to mind the American Indian meaning of Taos, "gateway to heaven." But if heaven means getting closer to Taos' peacock-blue sky, another slice of it is Taos Ski Valley, located just 19 miles from the town of Taos.

A true skier's mountain, and still owned by the same family that founded the resort in 1955, Taos Ski Valley shares in the "Tao" of Taos in that it always has gone its own way, regardless of mainstream pressures. Bucking today's trends, Taos Ski Valley is one of only four ski resorts in the nation that do not permit snowboarding.

Skiing here is a lot like being part of a family. Packages combine lodging, lift tickets and intensive ski instruction in small groups at the same ability level, so that by the end of the week each guest not only skis much better but also has a new group of friends (during the week of Jan. 9-14, the six morning lessons are free with purchase of a six-day lift ticket). Accommodations in European-style small lodges at the base of the slopes add to the camaraderie and family ambience.

Even some of the original staff hired by founder Ernie Blake still work and ski here, such as Jean Mayer, technical director of the Ernie Blake Ski School. Elisabeth Brownell, an owner of the Thunderbird Lodge, came from Munich and was hired as Blake's secretary. In her 70s now, she skis several times a week and still speaks with a pretty German accent. With a mischievous smile she explains, "Ernie told me, 'Don't lose your accent, it's very effective in a ski resort!' "

For more information on Taos Ski Valley and the town of Taos, call 800-347-7414 or go to: www.skitaos.org, www.taosskivalley.com and www.exploretaos.com.

Visitors find plenty to do in the pueblo

Here are some not-to-miss attractions in and around Taos.

1. Taos Plaza: The heart of the original town, Taos Plaza was established in 1796, when the area was a colonial outpost of New Spain. When the first families settled here, the plaza was more like a fortress, with strong gates and no windows in the outer adobe walls of the houses. Besides exploring today's shops and galleries, you can drop into Hotel La Fonda to see nine paintings by D.H. Lawrence that so scandalized his countrymen when they were shown in London in 1929 that Scotland Yard seized them.

2. Governor Bent House Museum: A block north of Taos Plaza on Bent Street, the Governor Bent House Museum was the residence of the first American governor of New Mexico, Charles Bent. A wealthy trader, Bent was killed in the Taos Native American and Hispanic uprising of 1847. Visitors will see period art and artifacts as well as the hole in the wall through which Bent tried to escape.

3. San Francisco de Asis Church: The 1772 church's massive, hand-smoothed adobe walls and buttresses have made the building a favorite subject for artists and photographers, including Georgia O'Keeffe and Ansel Adams. Go inside to see a video presentation and the mysterious 1896 painting of Jesus, which in darkness shows a luminescent cross that is not visible in ordinary light.

4. Van Vechten Lineberry Taos Art Museum: Taos' newest museum displays works of the Taos Society of Artists, whose members captured the town's picturesque life in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The state-of-the-art facility is the creation of Ed Lineberry, an artist who lives next door.

5. Harwood Museum of Art: Housed in a 19th-century adobe compound, the Harwood Foundation Museum displays works by New Mexico artists in a variety of media, as well as a collection of Hispanic art. Seven galleries feature paintings by the Taos Society of Artists.

6. Hacienda de los Martinez: This adobe structure is one of the few remaining Spanish colonial haciendas open to the public. Period furnishings and demonstrations show how the family of merchant and Taos Mayor Don Antonio Severino Martinez lived here from 1804 to 1827.

7. Kit Carson Home & Museum: Built in 1825 with traditional adobe walls, the home's 12 rooms are furnished as they might have been when Carson lived here with his wife, Josefina Jaramillo.

8. Millicent Rogers Museum: A Standard Oil heiress and socialite famed for her beauty and style, Millicent Rogers came to Taos and in 1947 began acquiring a magnificent collection of American Indian arts and crafts, on display here. Featured are Navajo and Pueblo jewelry, Navajo textiles, Pueblo pottery, Hopi and Zuni kachina dolls and basketry by Southwestern tribes.

Distrust leads to resignation

Charles Tebbetts to step down from School Committee

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Two School Committee seats must now be filled during the April 9 Town Election as Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts has decided to resign from her position.

Although she has one year remaining before her term expires, Tebbetts has decided to resign from her post, which will open up a one year seat on the board. Dismayed with the current political climate in Cohasset, Tebbetts said the lack of public support shown to volunteer committees and the distrust of public officials has become disheartening and she feels her time could be better spent in another role.

"If you're serving, you have to have a thick skin, and I think I have one," she said, but added with the extreme negativity around town, it is in her best interest to remove herself from what has become a very stressful situation.

Tebbetts' decision to resign was announced by the Board of Selectmen at its Tuesday meeting, and she made a statement about her intention at yesterday's (Thursday) School Committee

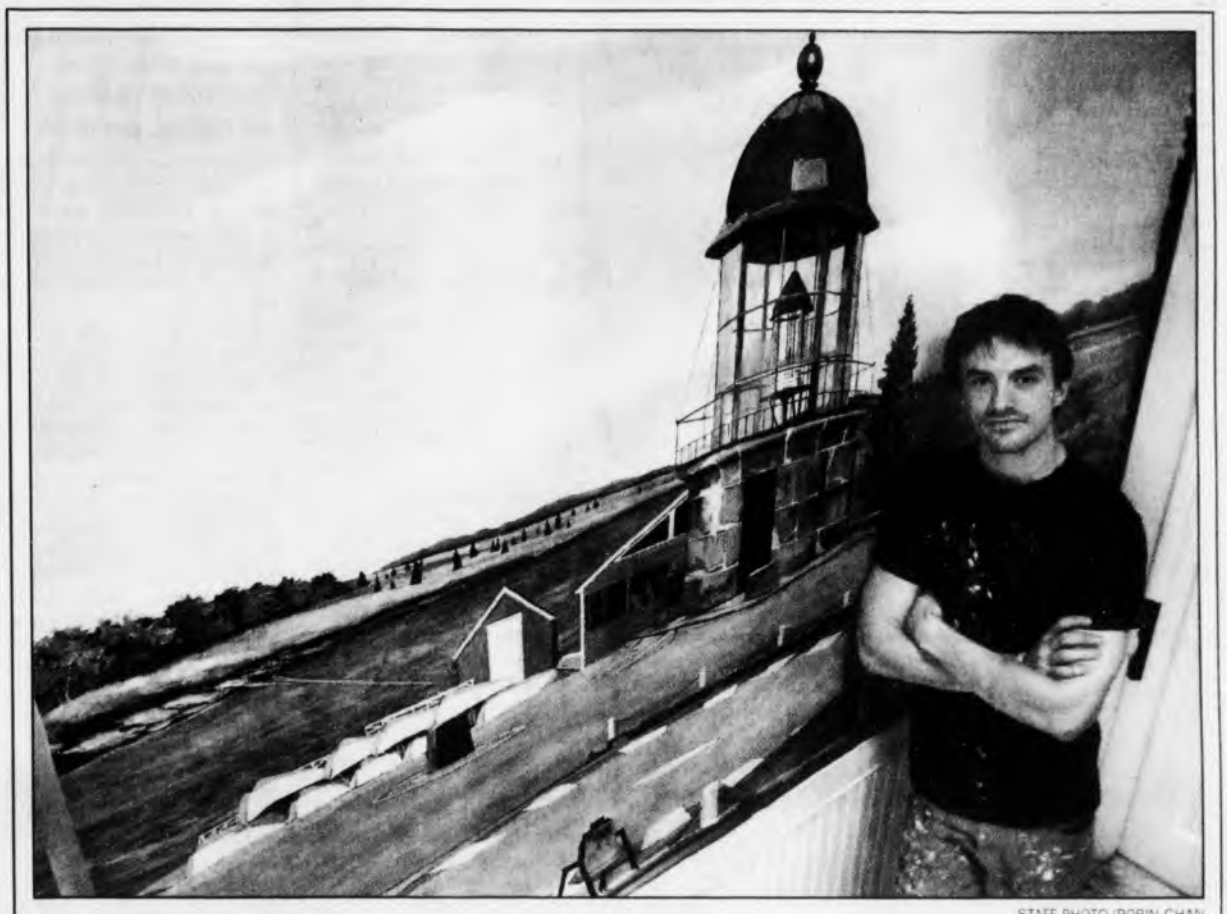
Bartlett pleads guilty to theft

Could face prison time

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Former Administrative Assistant to the Town Manager Nicole N. Bartlett plead guilty Thursday, Jan. 6 of stealing more than $200,000 from her former employer, the Boston Children's Museum, by writing and depositing unauthorized checks.



Bartlett, 44, of Marshfield, pleaded guilty before U.S. District Judge Rya Zobel to nine counts of making, possessing, and uttering forged securities. According to a press release issued by the U.S. Attorney's office, Bartlett's sentencing has been set for Thursday, March 31. She faces up to 10 years imprisonment, to be followed by three years of supervised release, and a $250,000 fine for each of the nine counts.

Bartlett, who was hired by former Town Manager Mark Haddad, had worked in Cohasset since May 12, 2003. She resigned from her position in Cohasset Sept. 27, the same day the U.S. Attorney's office issued a press release outlining the charges against her. The overall scheme involved her manipulating the museum's payroll system, and her fraudulently endorsing and depositing more than 440 unauthorized checks.

Bartlett had worked for the Children's Museum from October 1998 through March 2003. According to the press release, she began forging checks at the museum four days after she was hired.

According to the U.S. Attorney's office, Bartlett's forgery/theft scheme at the museum was executed in at least three different forms. Most commonly, Bartlett made routine requests to Automated Data Processing, or ADP, to generate bogus or duplicate checks made

Stars to shine on Music Circus mural

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

This is one creative way to give something back to the stars who play the South Shore Music Circus. One that even appeals to their artistic tastes.

Starting next season, while the performers, who light up the Music Circus summer schedule are awaiting the call to go onstage in the hospitality building and backstage area, they'll be treated to not only the usual, de rigueur perks of custom catering and such, but also a feast for the eyes — a newly commissioned wall-size mural depicting the scenic Cohasset coastline by noted Cape Cod painter Hans de Castellane.

"We had this empty wall in the backstage area, and an idea for a creative project to fill it."
— Paula Gates, Music Circus

From one wall of the hospitality room, entertainers such as rock, pop, country and jazz singers/musicians, comedians and TV and theatre actors can take home a memorable, colorful image of Cohasset's Government Island looking out over Bassing Beach, with Scituate's Minot Light and the Glades looming across the sailboat-dotted bay in the background. The mural painting was a 2-3 week project started just before Christmas and wrapped up by de Castellane this past Monday.

"We had this empty wall in the backstage area, and an idea for a creative project to fill it," said Paula Gates, Director of Marketing and Public Relations at the Music Circus. "(Music Circus General Manager) Vince (Longo) had seen and been familiar with Hans' (de Castellane's)work throughout Cape Cod, and called on him to ask if he'd like to come up to Cohasset and paint a mural here for us, something with a subject specific to the Cohasset area."

Longo's familiarity with de Castellane's work even includes a previous mural commission for the artist at Longo's sister's house in Brewster. The overall concept for the Music Circus mural

No override for FY05 shortfall

But ballot vote for '06 is possibility

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Passing a Prop. 2-1/2 override is not an option to make up any shortfalls in the fiscal year 2005 School Department budget but one may be necessary to maintain services next year.

Town Manager Michael Buckley said the tax rate has been set and any budgetary shortfalls need to be made up either through cuts in the school department budget or through a supplemental budget, which would need to be voted on at Town Meeting.

A supplemental budget would allow Town Meeting to appropriate money from the town's reserves, such as free cash, the stabilization fund, or any other budgets which have available funds, and transfer it to help cover school expenses. However, Buckley said a supplemental budget, "Makes the problem worse in the long run," because the town has even more to make up the following year.

"The extra money from FY05 needs to be dealt with in April (at the Annual Town Meeting) and we'll probably need an override for FY06," Buckley said.

The school department is predicting a possible shortfall of roughly $500,000 for the FY05 budget, which includes $93,000 for under-budgeted gas costs and $67,000 for unemployment costs. The money to cover both costs is in the reserve fund — Town Meeting approved the transfer to allow the Advisory Committee to dispense the funds when needed. In addition, other areas which were either not budgeted or under-budgeted include transportation, cleaning/custodial services, tuition reimbursements for professional staff, special education tuition, and legal fees, and it is not known at this point where the funds to cover those costs will come from, or how much those costs will total.

However, Town Meeting voters may not be willing to come to the aid of the school department as many feel there has been reckless spending. In fact, the December Special Town Meeting voted to appoint a committee to investigate why the school department budget is consistently in trouble. The committee has not yet been appointed.

Last spring the town passed a $400,000 operating budget override to help balance the school department FY05 budget, but even with the override, the School Committee needed to reduce its budget significantly by cutting teaching and administrative positions, eliminating the middle school athletic program, and not giving salary increases for administrators.

Then, with the override still fresh in the minds of taxpayers, a $93,000 unpaid gas bill surfaced just before the close of the fiscal

Tebbetts, Pierson are guests

If you missed last night's show (Jan. 13), be sure to tune in to Our Town next Thursday (Jan. 20) at 8:30 p.m. on Comcast Channel 10 for special guests Chartis Tebbetts of the School Committee and former TV talk show host Wigmore Pierson. Hosts Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo will talk with Tebbetts and Pierson about the current political landscape for the upcoming election season and expectations for local elected officials.

Flu shots available

The Cohasset Board of Health still has flu shots available for those 50 and older and those who are at high risk. For more information call Public Health Nurse Judith Fitzsimmons at 781-383-2210.

Tsunami warning system

The Scituate Board of Selectmen has sent a letter to Congressman William Delahunt, asking research be done regarding the feasibility of a tsunami warning system for that town. In turn, Town Manager Michael Buckley said he has been contacted by Scituate officials, asking Cohasset to join in the letter writing.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he would like to speak to an expert to determine whether it would worthwhile for coastal towns on the south shore to have such a system in place. Other selectmen agreed it would be a very interesting item to have on a future agenda. Buckley said he would try to contact a local expert on the matter to schedule a meeting in the near future.

Selectmen seeking committee members

There are a number of committees which will be starting up with the new year or are in need of new appointments, and the Board of Selectmen is looking for interested candidates to participate.

• In light of recent changes with the Comcast cable service in town, the Selectmen would like to reinstate the Cable Committee, which will be responsible for keeping residents informed of any changes in cable service.

• Selectmen are also looking for candidates interested in participating in a committee to review the School Committee budget process. Town Meeting voted to have the Troika appoint the committee to take a close up look at why the school budget is over-budget.

• A Sewer Study Committee will also be formed to tackle some of the wastewater issues in town. While originally representatives from pertinent town boards were slated to be on the committee as well as three residents, residents may now instead be working with the Wastewater Committee to build on information it has already collected. Although the final makeup of the committee has not yet been finalized, Selectmen are still looking for residents to participate.

• A Beechwood Ball Park committee will be formed to help finalize plans for improvements to the area. Members of the DPW, Recreation Commission and other sports related groups will be involved as well as residents.

Residents interested in participating in any committee are encouraged to contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Red Sox trophy coming to town?

Selectman Rob Spofford said he has made a request for the Red Sox World Series trophy to visit Cohasset. The trophy, which has been on tour since the team's big win this October, is touring the state as a result of a partnership with the Massachusetts State Lottery. Although the town hasn't received word as of yet, should the trophy stop in Cohasset, the board said the Deer Hill auditorium might be the best place for residents to come take a look and have their picture taken with a piece of Boston's history. Last summer the Stanley Cup made a visit to town.

Change in date to accept TM articles

The Annual Town Meeting has been set for Saturday, April 2 at 10 a.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium. Articles should be submitted to the office of the Board of Selectmen no later than Tuesday, Jan. 18 at 4:30 p.m. The date had previously been set for Thursday, Jan. 13.

When submitting an article that requires an appropriation, it shall include the purpose for which the funds will be expended, the anticipated funding source(s), the sponsor of the article, and the best estimate of the amounts required. As has been the board's policy in the past, requests to save a space in the Warrant will not be honored.

For more information, please contact the Board of Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Drinking water is safe say selectmen

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said in light of all the information being sent to Cohasset residents about the Water Department's violation of TTHM levels, it can be very confusing to understand and digest what is really going on. She said the simplest answer she can give the public is that, "Yes, it is safe to drink and use the water."

People with concerns should call the Water Department at: 781-383-0057. Last week, the Mariner published Commission Chairman John McNabb's home number in error.

Beechwood field could serve as wastewater site

In light of a Town Meeting vote which has approved the funding for improvements to be made to the Beechwood Ball Park, the Board of Health sent a memo to the Board of Selectmen on Jan. 6 warning of the site's potential to serve as a wastewater disposal area. In the letter, the Board of Health states the Wastewater Committee has indicated the field is a "potential disposal site for a satellite wastewater treatment facility for those houses in Zone A of the town's water supply." The Board recommends some soil evaluations be conducted before renovations are made to the field, to determine if it is a potential site for a wastewater disposal area.

ZBA hears Avalon's request for town sewer connection

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Sewer capacity — or the lack thereof — is in the news again. This time AvalonBay, the company slated to build 200 apartments off Rte. 3A, is asking to hook up to the town's sewer treatment plant.

Avalon engineers say the town has sufficient capacity to accommodate estimated wastewater generated by the project. Sewer Commissioners say if any capacity exists, it must be reserved for existing homes.

But after sifting through the evidence on both sides — the Zoning Board of Appeals and not the Sewer Commission – could determine whether Avalon can connect to the town sewer system because Avalon is a 40B project.

Avalon is back before the ZBA seeking a "substantial change" to its comprehensive permit approved roughly 14 months ago, triggering last week's public hearing lasting three hours. The hearing was continued until 4 p.m. Jan. 31.

Under 40B, the state's affordable housing law, a developer can apply directly to the ZBA for a comprehensive permit and doesn't have to obtain permits from other boards. Therefore, the ZBA has sole jurisdiction to grant approval for a sewer connection in lieu of action by the Sewer Commission, Avalon officials said.

They argued the fact Avalon is outside the Central Sewer District is irrelevant because local regulations are superceded by Chapter 40B. Cohasset is vulnerable to 40B projects – which are usually of higher density than local bylaws allow and reserve 25 percent of their units for affordable housing – because the town has so little affordable housing by state standards.

At the crux of the issue is the court order from the state, dubbed the Second Amended Judgment, that requires Cohasset to solve its long-standing wastewater woes. Avalon had been operating with the understanding that under the Judgment, the Little Harbor area had to be sewered first. Avalon said it acted in good faith by pursuing other wastewater options but has subsequently learned through statements made by Town Counsel Paul R. DeRensis of Deutsch Williams at a public forum in November, there is no requirement to sewer Little Harbor under the Judgment.

Avalon officials say they have come to the sewer table "by default" after running into roadblocks while pursuing other wastewater disposal alternatives.

Roughly two years ago, Avalon abandoned pursuing a surface water discharge permit from the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) over objections from the Water Commission about potential contamination of Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply.

Avalon – although it disagreed with the Water Commission about which watershed the flow would head toward — and rather than engage in lengthy litigation, switched over to seeking a ground-water discharge permit, whose requirements are less environmentally stringent than a surface-water permit. In November 2003, the ZBA approved the 200-unit development with an on-site system subject to DEP approval of a ground-water discharge permit.

But the Water Commission appealed the ZBA approval of the comprehensive permit because of the proposed on-site system and that appeal is still pending in land court, according to Scott Dale, vice president of development at Avalon.

"We filed a motion for summary judgement but there has been no decision yet," Dale said. "It is certainly clear to us that the Water Commission opposes the wastewater solution we came up with." Dale said Avalon needed to pursue other options.

To that end Avalon was granted an amendment to its comprehensive permit by the ZBA a year ago that — in lieu of a ground-water permit — Avalon could undertake a connection either to Hull or to the Cohasset municipal sewer system subject to a determination there is adequate capacity.

"Our position is Avalon has approval to connect – the only issue is if there is adequate capacity," Dale said.

He said Avalon's letters to the Sewer Commission presenting evidence there is sufficient capacity went unanswered. Avalon was unsuccessful in its attempt to intervene in a lawsuit launched by Cedarmere, an age-restricted, 55-plus project, that is also seeking sewer capacity. As a result, Avalon has asked the ZBA to make a determination about capacity and believes the town has no legal right to reserve capacity for other areas.

Avalon engineers say the treatment plant has plenty of room to accommodate flows from Avalon estimated at 22,000 gallons per day. Avalon would also pay to install a 4,200 foot force main to connect to the sewer line.

"That would not stand any legal scrutiny that nothing is sewered until you sewer Little Harbor.
— Stephen Schwartz, Avalon attorney

Steven Schwartz, attorney for Avalon, said the Sewer Commission has granted hookups to numerous homes even though Little Harbor is no closer to being sewered eight years after the Judgment was issued.

"That would not stand any legal scrutiny that nothing is sewered until you sewer Little Harbor," he said.

But special Town Counsel Kimberly M. Saillant of Deutsch Williams, representing the Sewer Commission, said capacity is not being reserved but is being given to existing homes in the Central District. She said the town is under a court order because it is in violation of the Clean Waters Act and has to adhere to the Judgment as a matter of law.

Schwartz said the Judgment does not preclude the ZBA from permitting a sewer connection for Avalon, and that under 40B, the town cannot deny a connection if it is technically feasible. He said the town was using the sewer issue as a way to oppose development in general and multi-unit family and affordable housing in particular.

Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz said the DEP is "all over us" to accelerate the sewering of the Little Harbor-Atlantic Avenue area; and the town has a meeting Jan. 21 in Boston with the DEP to discuss its compliance or lack thereof with the Judgment. He said delays in sewering Little Harbor were due to problems in funding and the town was not dragging its feet.

Peter Pratt of the Planning Board said Town Counsel DeRensis has said if Avalon is allowed to connect, then Cedarmere and the Cook Estate can also hookup. (The Cook Estate is a town-sponsored age-restricted project proposed off Sohier Street). He warned in addition to eating up sewer capacity, three large multi-unit developments would increase traffic and put stress on the schools, police and fire departments. "Town Meeting never voted to have 400 units all at once," he said.

David Calhoun, one of the Cedarmere developers, was in the audience. Calhoun said Cedarmere has spent considerable money determining that there is capacity. He said the Judgment clearly mandates the town study and come up with a wastewater solution, which it has.

He said Cedaremere filed an application, which the Sewer Commission denied. Cedarmere is appealing that denial and thinks it should have first dibs on a connection. Avalon did not actually file for a connection.

But Dale of Avalon said that doesn't matter. He said before Cedarmere got off the ground, Avalon went to the Sewer Commission and was told repeatedly there was no capacity. Avalon acted in good faith on that information and pursued other options at great expense, he said.

Is requiring sewers bad for the town?

Court Judgment takes center stage

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Whether Cohasset has to sewer Little Harbor under the Second Amended Final Judgment, a court order requiring the town to solve its wastewater woes, appears to be an open question.

Although voters at December's Special Town Meeting approved adding a schedule to the Judgment which would solidify the town's commitment to the sewer project, and provide compliance from the town — some, including Town Counsel Paul DeRensis of Deutsch Williams — say sewering that area is not a requirement but a path Cohasset has chosen to solve its wastewater problem. Without that municipal sewer line, he believes the town will still comply with the Judgment.

However, Little Harbor area homeowners have been waiting for sewer to be extended to their neighborhoods for years, in the hopes of evading mandatory inspections and upgrades of on-site systems. Since the town violated the Clean Waters Act in 1979, a plan to clean up the waters in the Little Harbor-Atlantic Avenue area of town has been underway. With the schedule incorporated into the Judgment, it is believed the town's commitment to the project will be formalized. With a set plan and sewer connections on the way, homeowners in the area would be given amnesty from upgrading sewer systems, regardless of whether they intend to sell.

"We're trying to prevent the town from having any financial loss."
— Town Counsel Paul DeRensis

The Sewer Commission has said planned upgrades to the treatment plant would provide capacity to sewer Little Harbor and the only holdup to achieving that has been lack of funding. Avalon and Cedarmere engineers contend there is plenty of existing capacity at the plant for their projects and the town cannot legally reserve capacity preventing development.

At a meeting this fall to discuss the article which incorporated the schedule into the Judgment, DeRensis warned members of CEES (Citizens for Equitable Environmental Solutions), the proponents of the article, that opening up the Judgment to make it stricter was not in the best interest of the town because it could expose Cohasset to more litigation.

DeRensis explained the town and DEP are adversaries because the DEP has sued, costing the town a lot of money. He said the goal is to get the town out from under the Judgment, and including the sewering of Little Harbor into the Judgement could open the town up to more liability should it not be able to comply for funding or other reasons. 'We're trying to prevent the town from having any financial loss," he said.

At a town forum also held prior to the Special Town Meeting, DeRensis said the town is in compliance with the Judgment because it has a Wastewater Management Plan that was accepted by the state, and adding the schedule does nothing but set a bad precedent.

But the DEP, in a Dec. 22, 2004 letter to Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan described the town's implementation of its Wastewater Management Plan as "woefully inadequate."

"The DEP is prepared to take whatever action it deems necessary and appropriate to bring the Town into compliance with the Second Amended Final Judgment, including assessing civil penalties," Madelyn Morris of the DEP states.

Representatives from the DEP, state Attorney General's Office and town are slated to meet at 1p.m., Jan. 21 in Boston to air these issues. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss modifying the Second Amended Final Judgment to include the schedule for the sewering of Little Harbor and to discuss the town's penalty liability.

The Board of Selectmen, along with members of the Board of Health and Sewer Commission were slated to meet to discuss strategy for the meeting last night, Thursday, Jan. 13. However, the meeting was not properly posted, and will therefore be postponed until Jan. 18. Members of the Board of Selectmen have agreed to allow 20 minutes for public comment during an open session portion of the meeting. Because the meeting will discuss the town's legal strategy, it will be held in executive session.

Climate of distrust leads to Chartis Tebbetts' resignation meeting. Tebbetts will stay on in her position until Feb. 2, as that is the last day a resignation can be offered in order for the seat to be considered open during the April Town Election. Tebbetts said she wanted to stay on as long as possible to help with various issues, especially the budget.

Tebbetts said the Special Town Meeting was the final catalyst in what has been a very difficult time for the School Committee, adding she can no longer serve in a position which is continually harassed and distrusted. She noted one of the first comments made on the floor of Town Meeting called for her resignation, as well as the resignation of her colleagues Chairman Rick Shea, and Rick Flynn.

"I reflected a lot after Town Meeting about what had transpired and the direction the town is taking," she said, and couldn't believe when the first comment was ruled out of order, a second resolution to investigate the potential improper budget practices of the School Committee was passed by the majority of voters in attendance.

Last spring the town passed a $400,000 operating budget override to help balance the school department budget. But even with the override, the School Committee needed to reduce its budget significantly by cutting teaching and administrative positions, eliminating the middle school athletic program, and not giving salary increases for administrators. There could be a $500,000 shortfall for FY05, and FY06 could require another override.

In light of the budget situation, some residents feel there has been "gross neglect" on the part of the School Committee. However, Tebbetts maintains when state aid continues to decrease, and enrollment continues to increase, along with the salaries paid to staff and commitments to special education, there are bound to be problems balancing the budget, and the Committee is doing the best it can.

"This is the strongest statement I could make. I hope people do take notice of what I've done and why and say, maybe it's time to be more supportive."
— Chartis Tebbetts

"If we've made mistakes, they were honest mistakes. Everyone makes mistakes, probably at least one a day. That's why we do business as a committee," she said.

Tebbetts said the School Committee's budget process has been "totally transparent, fully vetted," and sadly lacking in outside participation, even though members of the public are welcome to attend every School Committee meeting, or any other number of meetings for which the Committee, "takes the budget on the road," including those held with the Advisory Committee and Board of Selectmen. However, she said very rarely does anyone show up.

But what also bothered Tebbetts was the fact that no one came to the Committee's defense while it was under scrutiny. "No one really stood up and said, 'This is ridiculous. We know what they've been through,'" she said, adding, only Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said anything in the Committee's defense. "The majority of people decided it wanted an investigation."

Without feeling the trust and support of the public is with her in the position, Tebbetts said she feels the best decision she can make is to step aside to allow someone else to fill the seat. "This is the strongest statement I could make," she said. "I hope people do take notice of what I've done and why and say, maybe it's time to be more supportive."

Tebbetts came on the School Committee in 2000. She said she decided to run for the position after reading an editorial in the Mariner which spoke about the lack of participation in the School Committee election. She said her first husband served three terms on the School Committee, and her father and grandfather were both educators, and she felt a close connection with the work of the Committee. She ran unopposed, and when her term expired, ran unopposed once again.

"I really have enjoyed being on the School Committee," Tebbetts said, adding the meetings are very productive and collegial, and had always been something she looked forward to. In addition, because her children are grown and are no longer in the school system, and her grandchildren do not live in Cohasset, being on the Committee gives her the ability to interact with the educators and the younger residents in town. "I'll miss that a lot," she said.

But what Tebbetts will not miss is the intense scrutiny which has taken root, but hopes the current negative attitude will change. "The people who are criticizing will continue to criticize, but hopefully, they will learn to become a part of the solution and volunteer their time — maybe even run for School Committee and see what's really going on," she said.

Tebbetts said she hopes the person who fills her seat on the board will continue to "relish the work ahead as she would have: the struggles for adequate funding for public education, for respect for the work of educators, and for cooperation among the various constituencies that benefit from and give to the process." However, "I am not willing to engage in these struggles when I will also have to face the battles against distrust and harassment," she said.

Local duo to look after town interests as Greenbush is built

Buckley appoints two train liaisons

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Manager Michael Buckley, with the approval of the Board of Selectmen, has appointed residents Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan to serve as liaisons between the town and the MBTA during Greenbush construction.

Gruber's formal title will be Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Affairs, and Brennan will serve as Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Engineering. Both will sign contracts which Buckley said could be for a two-year commitment, and both will be paid a to-be-determined hourly rate.

A liaison search committee, comprised of Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer and Fred Koed, Tax Collector/Treasurer Joe DiVito — who has been serving as Acting Special Assistant to the Town Manager for MBTA affairs — and resident Jody Butman, conducted interviews for the open position a few weeks ago, and concluded both men with their combined skills would be the best solution for the town.

Gruber, who has been involved with MBTA mitigation for years and is well-versed in the history of the project, was the "candidate of choice" from the abutters' standpoint, said Dormitzer. He is very well known around town, and has the experience necessary to carry the town through the project.

However, he said with Brennan's extensive engineering experience, it was obvious he could serve as the clerk-of-the-works the town needs available on-site during construction. "It looked like a team of people would be the best solution," said Dormitzer, and fortunately for the town, the two men were willing and able to make that happen.

"I'm really looking forward to this. There's a lot that needs to be done for the town and we need to get going."
— Tom Gruber

"This is an exact parallel to my previous life," said Brennan, who is a retired Verizon employee, who most recently served as the Chief of Staff for Northeast operations.

Brennan also spent much time in the United Kingdom overseeing a large trenching project, which required much coordination with the local people, as all public utilities would be affected during the digging.

Brennan said he is eager to get to work in Cohasset. "I love Cohasset. I've been here 10 years, and I hope to spend the rest of my days here," he said.

Gruber said he too cannot wait to get started in his new role.

"I'm really looking forward to this. There's a lot that needs to be done for the town and we need to get going," he said. He suggested both he and Brennan sit down with DiVito to see what progress he has made and then take an inventory of the plans and information the town has. At that point, Gruber said it would make sense to have a meeting with the MBTA and then build on the information gathered.

The Greenbush Line is the third leg of the Old Colony Railroad Restoration Project, and is being built as mitigation for the Central Artery/Tunnel Project in downtown Boston. The project is intended to reduce automobile traffic on the congested highways leading into the city. According to the MBTA, the project will cost roughly $479 million including planning, engineering, land and permitting costs, along with the cost of construction and new trains.

Until Oct. 2, the town had a contract with the Waterfield Design Group, which is designing the village revitalization project, to supply a liaison for the town during Greenbush construction. When the contract was still in effect, some residents questioned why the town had chosen to sign a $120,000 contract with the Winchester firm, rather than one of the14 residents who applied for the position when it was originally advertised. When the Waterfield contract expired, the general consensus was it was in the town's best interest to hire someone local.

Selectman Fred Koed suggested Gruber and Brennan be given some office space in which to work, preferably in Town Hall, but potentially in one of the schools. Buckley said he had been thinking about finding a headquarters for the operation, and said the third floor computer room at Town Hall might be an appropriate solution. The details of the positions will be ironed out in the coming weeks, including where the office will be located as well as hours of operation.

Cook Estate contract issue

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The town has been able to secure an extension on the purchase of the Cook property from the heirs of the estate. But Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he is very uncomfortable the town is about to sign the new Purchase and Sale agreement without any signed agreement from the Northland Residential development company.

"I think there is an issue with them not signing," said Dormitzer of the company which the town has been working with to build 95-units of senior housing on the Sohier Street site. Although Dormitzer said the town is secure in its agreement with the Cook heirs. "We need something on the other side," to ensure the developers won't back out of the deal. "We have no commitment, really," he said.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said to say there is no commitment from Northland "is not quite accurate," as the developers have been working diligently with the town to get the project built. The soils on the Cook site were thought to have been able to support an on-site wastewater system for the project, but further testing determined an on-site system would not be feasible. Developers have been cooperatively working with the town to find a wastewater solution for the site.

However, Dormitzer said the company has decided not to comply with some requirements the town had set, and there is nothing holding the company to any kind of agreement as nothing has been signed. "Verbal agreements have no meaning at all," he said.

Dormitzer said he does not think the town should sign the revised Purchase and Sale with the Cook heirs until it has a guarantee in writing from Northland.

"I'm not sure that sends the right message to the trustees," said McMorris. "We should sign this now."

However, during the Jan. 4 meeting of the board, Selectman Rob Spofford said he had just received a copy of the contract and he hadn't read it, and therefore would not yet be signing.

Selectman Fred Koed said he would like to have Town Counsel come in and tell the board what kind of exposure the town has with a verbal agreement.

In September, Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Rd., came before the board asking for information regarding any signed documents between the town and Northland. At that time, Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan explained he had recently learned there is no agreement other than the bid process documents, but that there will be a signed closing document.

At that time, Jack Dawley of Northland Residential also said due to the language in the RFP, the $100,000 deposit put down by Northland is the only agreement which is necessary for the $5 million project. He also said the Land Disposition Agreement, which is similar to a Purchase and Sale Agreement, was almost in its final form, but was still being tweaked by lawyers. He said he thought the final version would be ready to sign within a few weeks. On Jan. 4 Sullivan said the town has the original LDA with addenda, but no signed final documents.

Former TM assistant pleads guilty to embezzlement

payable to various museum employees. More than 200 bogus checks were issued throughout the duration of the scheme. The press release states, "The checks were 'bogus' due to the fact that compensation was not due and owing to the employee and were 'duplicate' because they were in addition to the true compensation the employee was already receiving for that pay period."

The second form of theft consisted of Bartlett's directing ADP to prepare a different type of bogus check, this time from funds which were set aside by the museum as tax withholding funds. Once the checks were received, Bartlett again stole the check and deposited it into one of her personal bank accounts. There were nearly 40 employees victimized by this form of theft, and stolen funds total roughly $30,000. Cohasset does not use ADP for its payroll.

The third scheme consisted of using the museum's manual payroll checkbook to hand write checks made payable to various museum employees. Bartlett induced two authorized signatories on the account to endorse the checks by providing them with falsified back-up documentation.

Although a recent memo from Town Treasurer/Tax Collector Joe DiVito to all department heads states his office, "will no longer be able to issue manual payroll or accounts payable checks under any circumstances," DiVito said is has nothing to do with the allegations facing Bartlett. He said the recommendation came from the auditors at Tucci & Roselli, who are simultaneously conducting the regular annual town audit while the forensic audit is taking place. "It's just good business practice," he said.

According to the DA's office, for much of the time the scheme was ongoing, Bartlett used her personal accounts at Rockland Federal Credit Union and Abington Savings Bank to deposit the forged checks. Starting in January 2000, Bartlett involved her mother in the scheme, using two joint accounts they shared as a depository for some of the stolen checks.

There has been some question regarding whether Haddad knew about Bartlett's past at the time he hired her. As an Administrative Assistant, Bartlett's job description entailed assisting both the Town Manager and Board of Selectmen, taking the minutes of meetings, and doing the payroll and benefits for both the town and the school department.

At Haddad's request, Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon completed a background check on Bartlett before she came on board. Police Chief James Hussey said as a result of that inquiry, "information was discovered that the employee had been terminated from their prior employment," although the specifics were unknown. He said the information was then given to Haddad, who advised the police department he would look into her background further.

As a result of the charges against Bartlett, Cohasset is currently in the throes of a forensic audit, which is being conducted by Melanson Heath & Company, PC of Andover. The company is reviewing town's books and procedures to ensure nothing is amiss. A sum of $12,500 has been put aside in the Reserve Fund to pay for the company's services.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he has spoken with Karen Roberts who is conducting the audit and he was told at this point, "There are no significant findings" which would indicate Bartlett carried out the same scheme in Cohasset. However, Dormitzer said by the time the audit is complete, "There may be one or two little things," found amiss from Bartlett's tenure of employment.

In addition to the $12,500 for the audit, the town has also paid a roughly $7,500 deductible in conjunction with Bartlett. Shortly before her departure, the town's liability insurance carrier settled a sexual harassment case with Bartlett who claimed she was sexually harassed by a public official. It is estimated Bartlett has been paid roughly $60,000 by the insurance company. Town Meeting voted in December to pay the deductible.

RELAY FOR LIFE

Cohasset resident and three-time cancer survivor, Harry St. Onge, has just been announced as the new chairman for the Relay For Life of Cohasset. Harry has been an active Relay participant as the Team Captain for the Glastonbury Abbey team the past three years. Harry was diagnosed with three unrelated cancers — prostate cancer, non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, and lung cancer — in a period of 18 months. Through his involvement in the Relay For Life of Cohasset, Harry is able to share his story of hope and survival, while raising funds and awareness to help eliminate cancer.

This year's Relay For Life of Cohasset will be held on June 17-18 at Cohasset High School and until you have been a part of it, words cannot describe the atmosphere or power of this event. Last year's event had more than 700 people who participated and the event raised $152,000! It would be so awesome to raise those figures for this years event. To become involved with the Relay For Life of Cohasset, please contact Mary Shepherd at 508-897-4392. For more information about the American Cancer Society, call 1-800-ACS-2345, available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, or visit www.cancer.org.

VO-TECH HONORS

South Shore Vocational Technical High School announces its Cohasset students who have achieved academic honors for the first trimester of the 2004-05 school year. Achieving High Honors was Elyse Portanova and achieving Honors was Sean Silvia. Great work to both.

MLK DAY BREAKFAST

Please join the Cohasset Clergy and the Diversity Committee in honoring the memory and achievements of Dr. Martin Luther King at Cohasset's third annual Martin Luther King Day Breakfast. The breakfast will be held on Monday, Jan. 17 at the First Parish Unitarian Universalist's Parish House from 9-11 a.m.. There is a donation of $5 per person or $15 per family for breakfast. A pancake breakfast will be served from 9-10 a.m. followed by a program honoring the memory of Dr. King. Child care will be available. All proceeds from the event will be donated to C.A.R.E. and Save The Children tsunami relief efforts. The Parish House is located at 23 North Main St.. For more information please call Connie Afshar at 781 383- 6006.

MASS. EYE AND EAR

The Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary has appointed Cohasset's Christian B. Snook, as a Trustee. Mr. Snook received a BBA in marketing from the University of Massachusetts and an MEd from Boston State College. Congratulations.

HOOP BOOSTERS

The next Cohasset Basketball Boosters meeting will be held on Wed, Jan 26 in the middle high school library at 7pm. This meeting is open to all parents of basketball players in town. Hope to see you there.

ON THEIR TOES

LADIES NIGHT OUT

The Newcomer's Club "Ladies Night Out" is hosting and evening of wine tasting. An expert wine consultant from the Traveling Vineyard will teach about different wines and how to properly pair them with foods. Who can't use little instruction in this department? This event is complimentary. All members are encouraged to RSVP ASAP to Kim Spires at 545-2952 or kimspires@hotmail.com .

Newcomer's are still accepting applications for membership. Visit www.scnewcomers.com for club information or call/email Jen Harris at 544-3910 or jkharris24@hotmail.com . Get in on the fun...the season isn't over yet!

DAFFODIL DAYS

The American Cancer Society needs volunteers to help deliver and sell the first flower of spring as part of the 2005 Daffodil Days. Daffodil Days volunteers are needed for an hour or two one morning to deliver daffodils and vases to local businesses, schools, and individuals. You'll receive smile after smile when you arrive and you'll make a difference in the fight against cancer. Volunteers are also needed to sell daffodils at local grocery stores and other community locations. In 2004, the New England Division of the American Cancer Society raised $2.8 million through the Daffodil Days campaign. For more information about becoming a volunteer for the American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days, please call Elise Kerrigan at 508-897-4343.

That is it for this week. Let me know all of your news and information no later than Tuesdays by noon.

Getting physical at the Council on Elder Affairs

Lots of exercise classes offered

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The beginning of a new year often inspires people to get up off the couch and begin a new exercise regime, which is exactly the kind of resolution Director of the Council on Elder Affairs Kathy Bryanton hopes seniors will make this year.

With a wide variety of activities for varying ability levels, the CEA has something for everyone. Exercise classes are held almost every day of the week, and Bryanton said because the CEA is located in a Community Center, it has resources other Senior Centers might not, such as a bowling alley on the bottom floor. In addition, she said the exercise classes are small enough that those who may not feel comfortable going to a big gym can exercise with a small group in a welcoming environment, and still have a great workout.

Paula Luoma, an occupational therapist with years of training and experience, teaches an arthritis exercise class at the CEA every Friday morning. "It's a general exercise program for patients with Osteoarthritis," she said, noting students in her classes have a wide range of ability levels. With arthritis, everyone has an area that is not as strong as the others, and everyone can work together to help encourage success. She added, some of her students have canes and some have walkers, but all have the same goal of wanting to improve flexibility and movement.

In Luoma's class, stretching exercises are paired with a little bit of strength training in the arms, which is very important for those seniors who have trouble standing and need strength in their arms to help pull themselves up from a sitting position.

Bryanton added it has been proven that even in their 90s, seniors can start lifting light weights and gain muscle mass, which can be extremely helpful for those who have come through surgery. "They're even doing it at nursing homes," she said. She added, a worry of many seniors is that they will become a burden as they age, but being active keeps them healthier and more independent.

Susan McVeigh shows fine form as she bowls for a strike.

In Luoma's class, "We stretch, do repetitive exercises and resistance training," she said, adding they start with the neck, then move down to the shoulders, trunk, arms, back, legs, then end with standing balance exercises. Usually, the number of students in her classes is under ten, which she considers to be her ideal number, but said the number varies from week to week.

Luoma said she recommends her students practice at home during the week, adding practice helps insure they see continual progress. She said one of her students who was having a particularly difficult time with the standing portion of the class began doing the exercises at home, and reported back she could "really see such a big difference," Luoma said. A common misconception is that a person needs to work out for hours at least four days a week to see results, but Luoma said that is simply not true.

As with any class, Luoma said there are always some students who are generally more active and start out at a higher level than others. However, in contrast with the very active students, Luoma said many patients have recently undergone surgery and are looking to regain the strength they had before the operation, and her exercises help cater to every ability level, and help rebuild what has been lost, which will hopefully prevent injuries in the future.

Luoma said her classes have become a social event as well as a way to stay healthy. Just like people of all ages, she said many seniors who take her classes "don't want to exercise alone."

Cohasset instructor Holly Pereira, who is a certified personal trainer who works for Webb's gym in Norwell as well On the Path in Pembroke, said she can attest to the fact that the classes become very social, as she has seen the same thing happen in her Body Proud yoga classes, offered every Wednesday. She said by scheduling in a time each week to exercise and socialize, it helps the seniors "get into a pattern." Exercise becomes part of their weekly routine, which is very beneficial for health, but it also "becomes a social outlet," for those who might otherwise spend that time at home on the couch.

Pereira teaches a very gentle form of yoga called Hatha yoga. She said this form of yoga, "links the body's movement with the intake of air." She said it works on stretching and toning, as well as opening areas of the body which are closed. "It's a big stress reliever," she said. Although some of class is done on mats on the floor, she said those students who do not wish to get on the floor can modify the exercises.

Pereira said there is a common misconception senior citizens do not have stress to deal with. They've retired, they have their days free to do what they wish, but Pereira said that is not the case at all. She said the average life has become very fast-paced, and seniors going about their daily activities are subjected to that hectic lifestyle, which is not always easy to get used to. She said in addition, seniors worry about what will happen to the family home should anything happen to them, and medical concerns become more of an issue. "They have lots to be stressed about, and they have all day to think about it," she said, and she makes sure every moment of the time they spend with her is as stress-free and enjoyable as possible.

Pereira said until some seniors take her class, they do not fully understand how stressed they actually are. Once they begin focusing on the breathing exercises, which are the central focus of Hatha yoga, many begin to see how fast and shallow their regular breath actually is. In addition, Pereira ends every class with a 10-minute meditation, and some of her students who had reported having trouble sleeping are able to take what they learn in her class, and meditate their way to a restful slumber.

"It's fabulous, everyone should do it at least once," Pereira said of yoga, adding even if someone tries yoga and doesn't like it, if they can take away some valuable breathing exercises as a result of that one lesson, it can be a wonderful de-stressing tool.

Both Pereira and Luomo said they realize the importance of providing classes which cater to the ability levels of their students because if a class is too challenging, or too easy, their students will not come back.

Kathleen McArdle keeps score during bowling at the Senior Center.

"We grade it accordingly," said Pereira.

In addition to the classes taught by Pereira and Luomo, there are many other activities which can help keep seniors in good shape. Bryanton said after Jan. 1, trips to swim in Weymouth will begin. She said during the summer, the Cohasset Swim Center pool is open, and every day seniors can swim for an hour. Because swimming is such a wonderful exercise, the CEA really wants to make it available all year round. There are also chair yoga classes, during which students complete yoga exercises from a chair rather than the floor, and the center is trying to start Tai Chi classes. The bowling league also meets twice a week, once in the morning and once in the evening, and there are many other activities which go on at the center which are not exercise related, such as bridge groups, educational classes, and book groups.

For more information on any of the activities at the Cohasset Elder Affairs, please contact the office at (781) 383-9112.

Fitness classes at the CEA

Classes are held at the Council on Elder Affairs, 3 North Main St., unless otherwise noted. Sign up is at the CEA office, (781) 383-9112. The CEA asks for a $3 donation per class. In addition to fitness classes, the CEA also has a wide variety of other activities, including cooking classes, knitting classes, bridge, book clubs, and computer classes. Please call the CEA office for more information.

Firming and Toning: Tues. &Thurs. 7:30-8:15 a.m.: An invigorating workout to great music. Increase cardiovascular and muscular strength with fun dance steps and hand-held weights. Requirements: Comfortable workout clothing, aerobic or walking shoes, and a positive attitude!

Chair Yoga: Thurs. 1:15 p.m.: Yoga is an ancient system of relaxation and rejuvenation that originated about 6,000 years ago. The postures strengthen and tone every part of the body, including the internal organs. In chair yoga, traditional postures are modified to make them accessible for everyone in the class. Enjoy soothing music, gentle and calming movement, and a relaxing guided meditation.

Tai Chi: TBA. Names are being taken for interest in Tai Chi — the classical system of Chinese Exercise which promotes health, balance, relaxation and flexibility through slow, fluid motions. Those interested in participating should call the CEA.

Body Proud: Wed. 10 a.m. Get on the path to wellness through yoga. People who have tried yoga enjoy the flexibility, strength, endurance and increased muscle tone. These classes will be easy to follow, pressure free, and enjoyable. Call the CEA to sign up.

Buckley: Override not an option for FY05 shortfall year June 30. In addition to the $93,000 another FY04 bill surfaced in the amount of $65,000 for school unemployment costs. Town Meeting agreed to pay both unpaid bills, but it was not without much discussion.

With a new fiscal year on the horizon, Selectmen are looking ahead to the FY06 budget and discussed school current budget issues at the board's Jan. 4 meeting.

"I'm very concerned about the financial impact for the town," said Selectman Rob Spofford. "I'm getting a lot of calls," from concerned parents and community members he said, and he doesn't have the answers they need.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the board has had roughly four or five months to review data from other town departments and get a sense of where the town will be headed, but "We have nothing from the schools." He said because roughly 80 percent of the school budget is salaries, "We should be able to get a number that is highly accurate."

Spofford added, with the school department budget comprised mostly of personnel salaries, the situation gets worse, "every day they don't make a cut to get the budget in line."

Selectmen said they would like an update on the school budget as soon as possible, and hopefully prior to the scheduled town board budget-summit, slated for Jan. 25. "We need it," Spofford said, adding if it looks like the schools will need to make up $400,000 or $500,000 — everyone needs to start discussing where the money is going to come from. Spofford added he would like to see the school department come before the Selectmen on a quarterly basis to give a budget update, as they head into planning for FY06.

"This isn't going to be easy," Dormitzer said of planning for FY06. (Fiscal year 2006 begins July 1, 2005).

Buckley said he has a draft FY06 budget in the works, and he is not proposing an override, although one might be necessary to maintain services. Buckley said he will be working with many town boards including the Advisory Committee, which plans on meeting every Thursday until Town Meeting, April 2. "This year, it's going to be more of a collaborative effort," he said about the budget process. Buckley added new Town Manager Bill Griffin will attend as many Thursday meetings as he is able, until he comes on board Jan. 31.

The budget summit is currently slated to be held Tuesday, Jan. 25, but Buckley said he would like Griffin to be present if possible, and may reschedule the meeting for the following Tuesday, Feb. 1, to allow Griffin to attend. For more information, please call the Board of Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Question on charge of school budget review committee

At the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting, a vote was taken to allow the Troika (Selectmen Chairman, Advisory Committee Chairman, and Town Moderator) to appoint a committee to look into why the School Committee is over budget. Although a committee has not yet been appointed, there are some questions regarding what its charge should be.

According to Town Clerk Marion Douglas' records, the vote taken at Town Meeting states, the amendment, offered by Roy Fitzsimmons, 116 Doane St., was as follows: "Moved that the Troika appoint a committee to investigate the school's over budget and to report back to the Annual Town Meeting."

Wig Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave., who is interested in being a part of the committee, said the wording of the vote leads itself to interpretation, as some in town feel the committee will be looking at why the overall school budget is over-budget, and some feel it will be investigating only why the utilities budget was over-budget.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said he has spoken to Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee about meeting to discuss the appointments to the committee, but neither one has heard from Town Moderator George Marlette on the issue. He said when the three meet, they will draft a formal charge for the committee, which will encompass the scope Town Meeting had in mind. Town Counsel may be asked to give his opinion on what the charge of the committee should be, as intended by Town Meeting. Sullivan also said in the interest of moving the appointment along, he and McGee may soon get together without Marlette to begin looking over the names.

Anyone interested in being a part of the committee to investigate the School Committee's budget should contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Office seekers' papers ready

IT'S HAPPENING

scenes was inspired by the work of two local photographers, Pete Flaherty of Cohasset and Lynne Layman of Scituate, both of whose work is sold as postcards at Nobles in Cohasset. Still once Longo and de Castellane closed the deal for the project, the two spent a day touring the Cohasset area, taking additional photographs and familiarizing the painter with the local scenery and landmarks.

Gates added Longo's idea for the mural was to not only showcase the extraordinary beauty of the Cohasset area, but also to present it in a unique way for performers and their crews, many of whom are not familiar with the area.

Said Longo, "I'm very satisfied with the progress and final result of Hans' work here. In the last few months I've really gotten to know Hans and what he's produced as an artist, and I just love the detail in his work."

de Castellane, 27, grew up on Cape Cod, first in Brewster, then in Orleans, where he currently lives. He began painting and taking private lessons at age six and years later studied at New York's Pratt Institute, earning a BFA in Communication Design in 1999. The artist then returned to the Cape and has been self-employed as a muralist since, painting private commissions for homes and businesses. Some of his most large-scale clients have included Nantucket Airlines, the Radisson Hotel-Hyannis, the Chatham Wayside Inn and Nauset High School.

Using photographs from local photographers as an aid, Cape Cod artist Hans de Castellane works on the mural depicting Government Island which he painted on the wall of the hospitality room at the South Shore Music Circus.

The Music Circus project is de Castellane's 83rd mural commission since turning professional. Subjects and content of his pieces have covered a notably versatile range from scenes of Venice, Paris and New York to many beaches, golf courses, sky views and others.

"I paint scenes and subjects to look photographic, but as an artist, you eventually want to put in your own flavor," de Castellane said. "Every artist wants to do their own thing, and mural work has a versatility that you can't classify."

de Castellane's ventures have also taken him into regional high schools, where he has been hired for school projects to guide students through painting their own mural. He has helped the students with concept, design, provides the supplies and teaches them how to paint on a large scale, emphasizing teamwork. One such project at Chatham High School was prominently featured last month in the Cape Codder newspaper.

The Music Circus commission offers the artist the potential of opening still another new audience for his work, this one with some national star and celebrity power.

"I can understand that this is a good opportunity for some well-known people to see my work," de Castellane said. "Most of my clients anyway have gotten to know me through word-of-mouth type publicity and exposure, and one thing has led to another."

Marketing seminar offered for artists

Award-winning artist, designer, and arts organizer, Liz Haywood-Sullivan will give a one-day seminar offering insider information on presenting and promoting artwork. The workshop, "Self Promotion and Marketing of Your Art" at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset, Saturday, Jan. 29, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. will cover a range of topics that artists, from professional to student, will find helpful. Tips on how to prepare and present work for competitions, how to approach and attract galleries, how to get exposure in art publications and how to manage inventory, will be discussed. Handouts will be provided and artists will leave with new insights into the artist's experience.

Haywood-Sullivan with professional background in industrial design, commercial illustration and graphic design, is a pastel artist and educator. Her award-winning paintings have been seen in numerous local, national, and museum exhibitions and are included in private and corporate collections nationwide.

The cost for the seminar is $55 ($45 for SSAC members). For information visit www.ssac.org or to register call 781-383-2787.

HSO Discovery Concert

When did an orchestra first come together? Why? How has classical music changed over the 300 years since Bach first played? How does jazz fit into the picture? And just how long is the tube in a tuba?

On Jan. 22, at 4 p.m. join the Hingham Symphony Orchestra and conductor Jin Kim in a guided musical tour that explains the development of an orchestra. HSO will perform Britten's Young People's Guide to the Orchestra, as well as selected highlights from Bach to Beethoven at the Chapman Middle School, 1051 Commercial St. Weymouth.

Members of the Cohasset High School Jazz Band will perform a jazz set, with HSO musicians sitting in, and members of the Hingham High School Chamber Orchestra will join the string section of the HSO for a suite by Grieg. Listeners of all ages will take away a new appreciation for this timeless music and the devoted musicians who perform it.

After the musical journey, audience members can meet each musician and learn more about their instruments in the Instrument Showcase.

Hingham Symphony Orchestra is composed of top-level professional musicians from around the world, who have made the Boston music community their home. Come share their passion for great music, become inspired to learn more, and perhaps even decide to take up an instrument yourself.

Tickets $20 adult, $15 senior, $8 youth through age 18. Available at the door, and at Weymouth Main and Hingham Libraries; Noble's and La Petite Maison, Hingham Square; Buttonwood Books, Cohasset; Front Street Book Shop, Scituate; and Marsh's Liquors, Norwell, or call 781-740-5694.

Journey toward a dream

"I have a dream…."

On Aug. 28, 1963, during the march on Washington, D.C. for Jobs and Freedom, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. stood on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial and made his famous speech about his vision for a nation living up to the creed that "all men are created equal."

How far have we come on the journey that began with the watershed Civil Rights Movement led by King?

A landmark survey by the Gallup Organization has found hope that we now live in a "new America," a country where overall 71 percent of the respondents would not object to a child or grandchild marrying someone of another race and the majority prefers to live in a racially mixed neighborhood. A comparison of how attitudes have changed is the 1958 Gallup poll reporting that just 4 percent of the respondents approved of marriage between blacks and whites.

The survey, commissioned by the AARP and Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, is described in the AARP magazine as "the largest and most comprehensive race-relations survey of blacks, Hispanics, and whites ever undertaken." The survey, published in the magazine's May/June 2004 issue, involved telephone interviews with 2,002 people in November and December 2003.

The survey revealed that "most Americans are open to sharing their life, work, and even love with people of a different color," according to Adam Goodheart, who wrote the AARP report. In response to the prediction that the majority of Americans would be nonwhite by 2050, about 87 percent said it "simply wouldn't matter."

To compare how attitudes have changed in the 50 years since the Supreme Court opened the door to school desegregation in the Brown v. Board of Education case, consider that just a "miniscule" 8 percent of African Americans in the AARP/LCCR survey reported that they had ever been denied admittance to a school because of race.

So, are we there yet?

Have we become the "Promised Land" foreseen by King?

It depends on who you ask.

Just 21 percent of the blacks and 38 percent of the Hispanics believe that all or most of the goals of King and the Civil Rights Movement have been achieved, compared to 56 percent of the whites, according to the AARP/LCCR survey.

Prejudice still directly impacts the lives of too many Americans. People are still being denied equal housing. Some 24 percent of the blacks and 19 percent of the Hispanics surveyed have been denied a rental or the opportunity to buy a home, compared to 2 percent of the whites.

Equal employment opportunity is not that equal. A third of the blacks surveyed said they had been passed over for a job because they were black, and a third reported they had been blocked from promotion because of their race. Blacks are more than twice as likely as whites to say they worry constantly about whether their income will be enough to cover the bills, according to the survey.

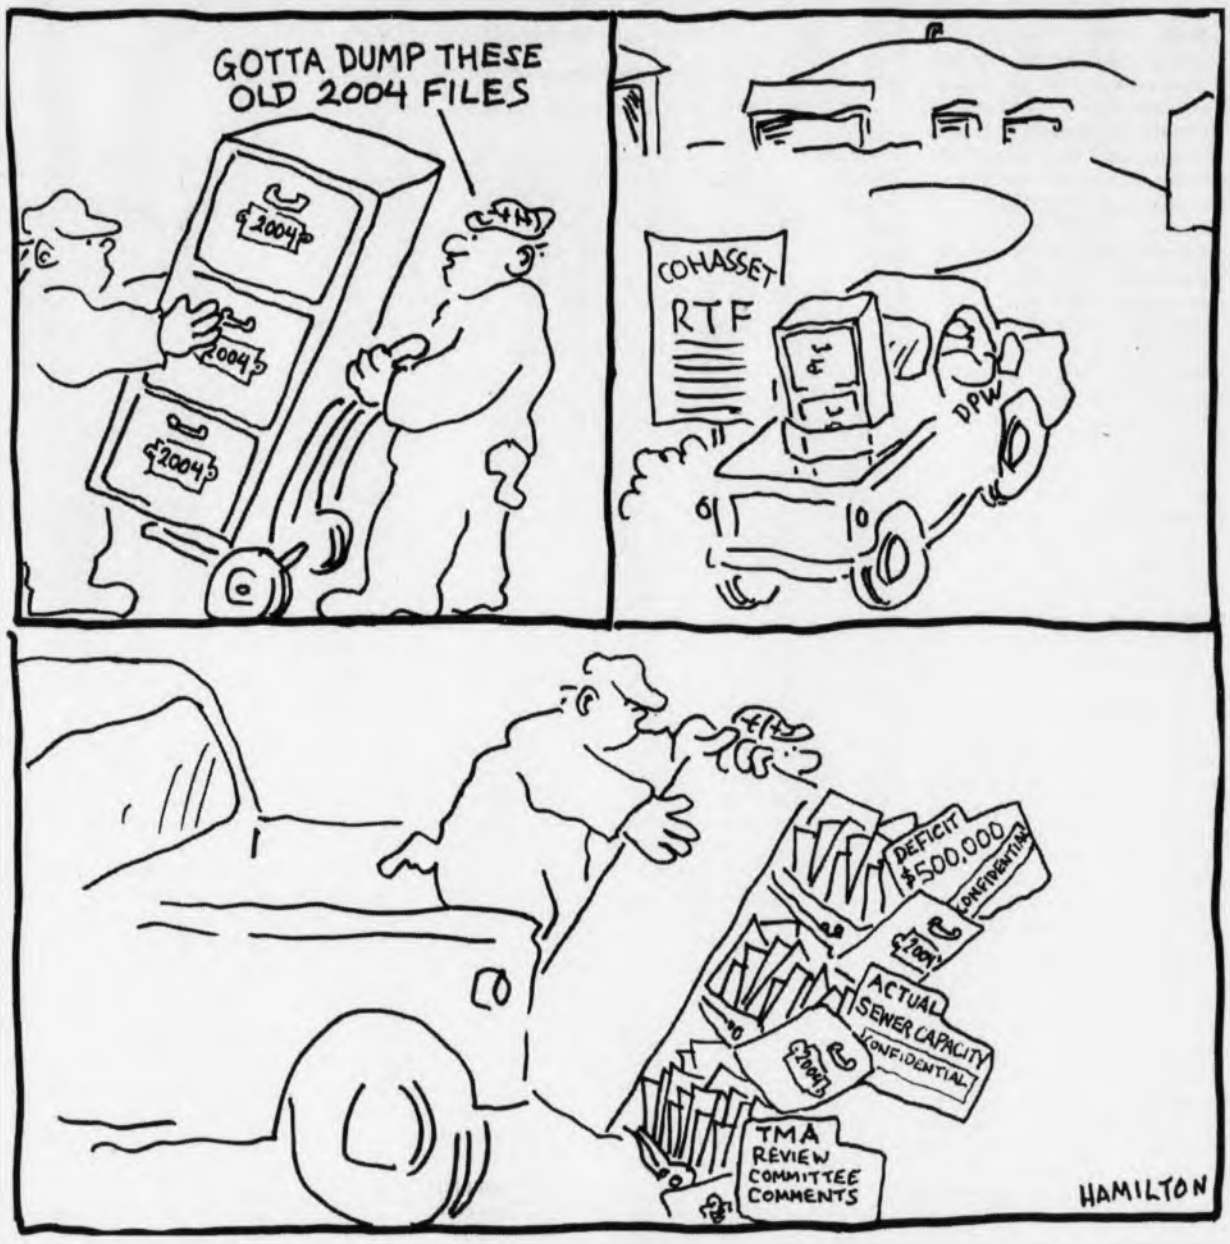
Nearly half of all blacks reported having experienced at least one form of discrimination in the past 30 days, in the arenas of stores, restaurants, theaters, and public transportation.

And justice apparently is not blind. The troubling statistic is that 22 percent of the blacks and 24 percent of the Hispanics reported having been "the victims of prejudice" in an interaction with the police in the past 30 days.

Clearly, there remain a lot of curves and potholes in the road ahead.

King's teachings impelled the landmark civil rights legislation of the Kennedy/Johnson era.

On April 3, 1968, King made his final speech. The following day, the Baptist minister who was chosen as Time magazine's Man of the Year in 1963 and received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964 was killed while in Memphis supporting striking sanitation workers. A passage in his speech, "I've Been to the Mountaintop," foreshadowed the tragedy:



"I may not get there with you, but I want you to know tonight that we, as a people, will get to the promised land."

Thirty-seven years after an assassin's bullet ended the life of King, his philosophy of nonviolent direct action remains a model for the social change that is still unfurling over the nation.

As we participate in the programs marking Martin Luther King Jr. Day this Monday, Jan. 17, it is important to remind ourselves that we are not just viewing history.

We are part of history in the making.

The words and the philosophy of Martin Luther King Jr. will continue to inspire us as we continue on with our journey to the Promised Land.

Sickened by AfTA's train delay tactics

TO THE EDITOR:

It is just sickening to read "AfTA Appeals Stall Work in Scituate and Cohasset" in the Jan. 6 issue.

The Greenbush Line restoration has been studied to death for the past 20 years and the experts have determined that commuter rail service will be a boon for commuters of the South Shore coastal towns, as well as improving the environment. The majority of residents voted in favor of restoration in 1991 and since that time the price has been rising because of roadblocks by anti-train groups, such as AFTA.

Now I see they are even going to appeal the Army Corps. permit, which has been 10 years in the making! Hingham got its wish for a tunnel under the Square and yet this group from Hingham is making a laughing stock of the town with its legal action delay tactics that are raising the cost of the project. Not to mention delaying and denying the commuting public the benefit of being able to hop on a train for Boston.

The money that this group must be dumping for appeals in their ignorance could be put to so much more humanitarian use! How about a class-action suit against AFTA for causing the increases in the cost of this project, which will be paid for by us taxpayers? I know I'm not alone when I say I'm tired of the shenanigans of this group and its predecessors and hope that the day the conductor calls "All Aboard" doesn't keep getting postponed, as it has been in the past.

Food Pantry thanks its many benefactors

TO THE EDITOR:

As we complete our 12th year in operation, the Cohasset Food Pantry would like to thank our many benefactors. We are now located at the St. Anthony Parish Rectory and can now provide ground floor access to the Pantry. We thank Fr. John Mulvehill and the staff at St. Anthony for their continued support and generosity.

As always, we are also thankful for our loyal volunteers who come to help stock the shelves, distribute food and provide cheerful conversation and guidance to our grateful recipients. Several of these volunteers have been with us for many years. Our current volunteers are:

Jane Corry, Carol Fanning, Libby Hagen, Madeline Hargadon, Helen King, Michelle Laney, Mary McNamara, Valerie Semensi, and Jean Thompson.

The Cohasset Food Pantry relies on food and monetary donations throughout the year. We have been blessed this season with an abundance of food donations thanks to the monthly food drives at our local churches and our many benefactors. There are many churches, organizations, businesses and families who helped us provide holiday meals and gifts for Thanksgiving and Christmas and supported us throughout the year. We wish to acknowledge:

Beechwood Congregational Church, First Parish Nativity Assumption of the Virgin Mary Greek Orthodox Church, Second Congregational Church, St. Anthony Parish, and St. Stephen's Episcopal Church;

American Legion, Carriage House Nursery School Food Drive, Cohasset Middle High School - Food Drives and Donations, Cohasset Middle High School Teachers, Cohasset Middle High School Social Awareness Organization – Scott Newkirk, Cohasset Post Office Food Drive, Cohasset/Scituate Newcomers, Cohasset Village Merchants – Donations from Holiday Fair, Community Center Nursery School Food Drive;

Cub Scouts 75th Anniversary, Deer Hill School Girl Scout Troop 4784, Osgood Kindergarten students - Julia DeWaal and Vicki Neaves – Food baskets and Christmas Gifts, Rusty Skippers Band, Sons of Italy Lodges 1850 and 1851, St. Anthony Church CCD Program – Ann Musto - Wreaths, Town Democratic Committee – Agnes McCann;

Coastal Countryside Properties, Copeland Family Foundation, Downtown Merchants – Village Holiday Program, Ideal World, Inc., Kennealey Meats – Thanksgiving turkeys, Norfolk County Commissioners, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank – Holiday Food Drive, Christmas turkeys and donations; Stop and Shop, Real World, Tedeschi Food Shop;

Mrs. Appleyard, Bill and Gina Chisholm, Cal and Helen King, Chartis Langmaid, Callie and Charlie Neaves, Mary Lee Pestone, Jean Thompson & Family, Chris Whoriskey, Anne Vanderweil & Family.

We sincerely apologize if we have omitted any of our generous benefactors.

The Cohasset Food Pantry is open every Tuesday morning from 9:30 – 10:30 am. Parking is available at the rear of the rectory.

School-parent partnership is a must

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

One issue, not always recognized by the greater community, is changes in the role played by parents in maintaining the health of their children. It is not always, nor may it ever have been, just a matter of providing necessities; food, a good home, advice when needed, and, of course, love. Increasingly it is a matter of becoming cognizant of all of the social and societal changes taking place in our environment and providing correct up-to-date information about their implications.

Perhaps, the most profound change is the rapid evolution of the information highway. However, there are others: changes in the makeup and constitution of our vital resources, not the least being our food supply; our attitudes about human relationships; and our methods of teaching, both formal and informal.

Communications to this e-generation are not bounded by the constraints we are accustomed to. Gone is the Hayes Office for movies, or any consistent reliable constraints against advertising by the diversity of media sources to which our children are exposed. It's therefore almost impossible for parents to accumulate all of the educational and experiential tools necessary to enable our children to develop and learn in a healthy environment.

Accordingly, like it or not, the schools must take on a broader outlook; that of not only teaching, but also training students and engaging their parents and guardians to partner with schools and other agencies in shaping the character of the educational environment for our children.

There are points in time when this partnership is more critical than others. It has always been well recognized that when children approach puberty conditions for almost everyone involved are difficult. It's not only the children. Accordingly, the middle school has come into being with its special rules, understandings, and attitudes.

Project Safeguard was started by a group of parents in 1996 who took their model from a similar program in Weston, Mass. Mike Gill, Assistant Principal of the high and middle schools, is one of the group's supporters and provides much of the oversight and continuity from the school's standpoint. The group makes good use of email to communicate and unify their thoughts. The mission statement currently reads as follows: The Project Safeguard Committee, comprised of educators, clergy, community representatives and parents believes that the cooperation of the entire community as well as an intimate parent school partnership is necessary to help protect young people from risky behaviors. The goal of the program is to go beyond educating the students by providing parents, families, (and guardians) with support and guidance as well as strategies for raising healthy and resilient children. The program is subsidized by the Parent School Organization (PSO) as well as Church and civic donations making it a true community effort.

Diversity Committee embraces differences

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Chartis Tebbetts said we would be much better off to see the country as a mosaic, where the separate colors come together to make one beautiful picture.

Monday, Jan. 17, the Cohasset community will once again join together to honor the memory and achievements of Dr. Martin Luther King during the third annual Martin Luther King Day Breakfast. Sponsored by the Cohasset Diversity Committee and the Cohasset Clergy, the event has become a tradition to promote togetherness while celebrating the differences that make us all unique.

The breakfast will be held at the First Parish Unitarian Universalist's Parish House from 9 -11 a.m., with a donation of $5 per person or $15 per family, which will be followed by a program honoring the memory of Dr. King. With areas of East Africa and Asia devastated by the earthquake and tsunami of Dec. 26, proceeds from the breakfast will be donated to C.A.R.E. and Save the Children relief efforts.

Events such as the Dr. King pancake breakfast are a perfect example of the kinds of programs the Cohasset Diversity Committee brings to town, in an effort to promote cultural awareness. Since 1995 when the committee began, it has been working to build an environment of tolerance and respect.

The Diversity Committee was formed by a group of parents who were concerned with the experiences their children were having at school. "There were comments like, 'You can't sit with us because you're Jewish,' or 'Don't let her play with us because her skin is too dark,' and we wondered how to address it," said member Susan Etkind. She said some of the comments were overheard, while others were directed toward children of Diversity Committee members which drove the group to find a way to educate both children, educators, and the entire community on how to embrace the differences in everyone, rather than segregate.

Etkind said because the incidents were taking place at school, that was the logical place to start educating and promoting respect. She said Diversity Committee members began talking with other school districts to see what kinds of programs were in place in surrounding towns. A good number had multi-cultural programs in place, which helped get the ball rolling.

"Because Cohasset is somewhat homogeneous," Etkind said students were not as familiar with other cultures and races as students from other towns closer to the city might be. The Diversity Committee immediately got to work beginning the path to educating the youngest members of the community, and combined its efforts with the Parent School Organization. Together, they began fund-raising to allow them to host a variety of programs.

Since its inception, the PSO/Diversity Committee has brought programs to the schools which have exposed children to music from the West Indies and instruments from the Native American culture, Japanese dancers, speakers on the tragedy of the Holocaust, and even a film presentation on life from a Palestinian perspective, to name a few.

In addition to cultural education, the Diversity Committee teaches the importance of embracing the other differences that may not be as obvious. Differences in religion, country of origin, sexual preference, socio-economic status, or special needs, are all part of what makes a community unique. Member Allison Moskow said part of the education that goes along with teaching acceptance is "stereotype busting," to eliminate judgments from the start.

Although the Diversity Committee's work began as a result of wanting to educate children, member Kathryn Earle said after the tragedy of Sept.11, the group began focusing more on educating adults, while maintaining its programs for children. On Oct. 24, 2003 the Diversity Committee threw an "International party" in honor of United Nations day. "We didn't know if people would respond," said Earle, but in the end, 125 people were invited to attend, and 130 showed up. "There was definitely an interest in the adult community to get together," she said. Another party is being planned for this October.

Residents or friends of the community were invited to the party based on whether the Committee thought the individual would be interested in participating. People of varying backgrounds and ethnicity attended, and members of the Committee say Cohasset is much more diverse than meets the eye.

Members of the Diversity Committee stand firm on their belief that Cohasset is much more diverse than is often thought, but much of the personal distinction is lost when people try to assimilate. "We lose the rich traditions and culture and the language differences," said Moskow, when everyone should be celebrating the strength of distinction. Member Chartis Tebbetts agreed and said when studying the culture of the United States, the lesson most often taught is the metaphor of the country's being a great melting pot. However, she said we would be much better off to see the country as a mosaic, where the separate colors come together to make one beautiful picture.

Diversity through METCO

One of the programs the Diversity Committee is especially proud to get behind is the Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity, or METCO program. By permitting students in certain cities to attend suburban public schools in participating communities, METCO is able to expand educational opportunities and reduce racial imbalance.

METCO Coordinator Aleisa Gittens-Carle, who came through the Scituate school system as a METCO participant, said in Cohasset, the goal of the program is to embrace each individual person, no matter where they get up in the morning.

"I also like the idea of a mosaic, where you can see each individual color as they connect," she said, adding in Cohasset, which has participated in the METCO almost since its inception in 1966, the program has evolved over the years to a point where the "us versus them" mentality continues to decline.

Gittens-Carle acknowledges how hard it is for METCO students to make the transition to come to a school where people aren't familiar with your neighborhood and where you come from, but she said with the help of host families, there has been a tremendous improvement with METCO students being seen as just Cohasset students.

Member Connie Afshar pointed out many of the Diversity Committee members are host families for METCO students. "It is such an asset for our own children and a fantastic way to explore racial diversity. It is very valued," she said of the program.

Moskow said she has hosted children who participate in the METCO program and said she has learned a lot from being a participant. She said it is a leap of faith for the parents who send their children off on the school bus as small children into a community where they have never been before, and have faith that there will always be a family there on the other end that can provide the kind of support they need at their home away from home. Moskow said the father of a student she hosted gave a wonderful description when he told her, "my child, as a first-grader, is being asked to be a diplomat between two communities."

Having been through the program herself, Gittens-Carle said having a host family who is there for added support is a wonderful experience. "What better way is there to embrace someone than to bring them into your home. That's saying something really powerful," she said. She added it is wonderful to see the residents of Cohasset open their homes to children they've never had a connection with before and to maintain a relationship with from the moment they enter the school system to beyond their high school career.

But Gittens-Carle is quick to point out, "Diversity is not just about color or religion, we're talking about disabilities, socio-economic, and other differences." But in Cohasset, she said people are embracing all the differences, which is "a testament to the work this committee has done."

The Cohasset Diversity Committee is always looking for new members and welcomes anyone to join. In addition, the Committee is also looking for residents who are interested in attending the second International Party. For more information, please visit the committee's Web site at www.cohassetpso.org/diversityHTM or contact any of its members.

Cohasset Diversity Committee at-a-glance

The Cohasset Diversity Committee was founded in 1995 with the purpose of preparing "our children and ourselves for the increasingly diverse environment in which we live and which will enrich our lives." Its collaborative colleagues include:

- Cohasset Public Schools
- Cohasset Parent School Organization
- Cohasset METCO program
- Local Clergy
- Cohasset Police Department
- No Place For Hate programs (state-wide)
- Selectmen
- Cohasset Education Foundation
- Local Businesses

Activities hosted by the committee

The Diversity Committee has hosted a number of successful activities to date including:

- A multicultural fund-raiser featuring food and music from around the world.
- Arts festival performances by Chinese and Spanish dancers, Reggae band, World Rhythm Duo.
- Teacher training through World of Difference.
- A personal Holocaust story presented by Ester Gens.
- Week-long intensive study of Japanese Culture and dance with Nikki Hu.
- The art of Black dance and music
- Boston Marathon Wheelchair Division winner Jean Driscoll spoke about her disability and athletic training.
- METCO conference — 25 teachers attended over five years.
- Collaboration with the Cohasset Police Department including presentation for Hate Crime Response Cards to all officers, and Hate Crime training.
- Anti-bullying program, grades K-12.

Martin Luther King Day breakfast

Join the Cohasset Clergy and the Diversity Committee in honoring the memory and achievements of Dr. Martin Luther King at Cohasset's third annual Martin Luther King Day Breakfast.

The breakfast will be held on Monday, Jan. 17, at the First Parish Unitarian Universalist's Parish House from 9 to 11 a.m. There is a donation of $5 per person or $15 per family for breakfast. A pancake breakfast will be served from 9 to 10 a.m. followed by a program honoring the memory of Dr. King. Child care will be available. All proceeds from the event will be donated to C.A.R.E. and Save The Children tsunami relief efforts.

The Parish House is located at 23 North Main St., Cohasset. For information call Connie Afshar at 781-383-6006.

Speaker series continues

A new speaker series event will be held Wednesday, March 9 featuring panelists and a discussion on how the United States is perceived in the world, and how various organizations, notably the United Nations, provide opportunities for nations to come to the table as equals. Dr. Lincoln Bloomfield will moderate. Contact Chartis Tebbetts at (781) 383-1662 or Kathryn Earle at (781) 383-0061 for more information.

Legends of the Outer Cape

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

If that wasn't a tsunami that struck the Outer Cape that April night in 1717 it will have to do until the real thing comes along.

Then again, it might not be true for you know how those old Cape Codders are when they get a tourist at their table and the rum is flowing freely.

Sam Bellamy was a handsome young sailor on an English privateer when he arrived at Eastham in 1716 for a brief stay at Higgins Tavern. There he made friends with 15-year-old Maria Hallett. When he sailed away, he swore he would return to her in a tall ship with lots of treasure.

Some months later, Maria gave birth to Bellamy's child. The baby died but once the secret was out, Maria was ostracized and driven away by the townspeople of Eastham. She built a hut for herself on cliffs by the sea where she kept a vigil for her lover's return.

Meanwhile, Bellamy, unhappy that he was not getting rich faster, turned pirate in the Caribbean. Capturing ship after ship, he sailed up the coast until the Whydah, the tall ship he wanted, fell into his hands with all its treasure. In early April, the Whydah was off the Outer Cape.

Capt. Cyprian Southack hated Bellamy for reasons known only to the storyteller. When he heard the pirate was off the Outer Cape, he summoned his crew and put out of Orleans Harbor in a whaling boat. There was a northeast storm brewing but he didn't care. Here was his last chance to intercept Bellamy.

The crew was reluctant to set sail in a northeaster. They communicated their fears to Capt. Southack but he was adamant. "We will find Bellamy," he said. "I will chase him down if I have to sail to hell and back." "You might not be far off," said the first mate.

Thunder roared. Lightning flashed. Winds approached hurricane strength. The whaling boat was tossed about like a cork. Rain poured down on the helpless crew. A blanket of fog put them off from the world outside. The captain could not turn back now, even if he wanted to.

One man thought he saw breakers and crewmen tied themselves to the rail so they wouldn't be washed overboard as they looked for the shore. One man thought the whaling boat was sailing through trees. Another swore he saw a house among the waves. They thought they were losing their minds.

At last the storm ended and the men aboard the whaling boat were able to take their bearings. They were not on the bay side of the Cape where they started but on the Atlantic Ocean side. During the storm, the water had risen 30 feet and carried the whaling boat across the Outer Cape.

The Whydah broke up and went down in the same storm, taking Bellamy and his treasure with it.

But sometimes, when there is a northeast storm brewing, they say you can still see Capt. Southack's whaling boat sailing across the meadows of Orleans, chasing Bellamy the pirate.

And if you look real hard, you can see the lonely figure of 15-year-old Maria Hallett on the cliff overlooking the Atlantic, peering out to sea, waiting for her lover to return.

Democrats to hold caucus

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus on Saturday, Jan. 29 at 10 a.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, to elect five delegates and five alternates to the 2005 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. Delegates will be divided equally between men and women. The convention will be held on Saturday, May 14 at the Paul E. Tsongas Arena in Lowell. At that time, Democrats from across the state will gather to review and approve the Party Platform, which will serve as the official political agenda of the Massachusetts Democratic Party.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats of Cohasset. All candidates for delegate and alternate must consent to nomination in writing and may make a two minute statement and distribute materials on their behalf. All ballots will be written and secret.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 10 Granite St., Quincy, MA 02169 no later than ten days after the caucus date.

For more information, please log onto www.cohassetdems.org or www.massdems.org or contact Agnes McCann, Chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee at 781-383-0222, or the Democratic State Committee at 617-472-0637.

mately 12 individuals, some of whom have children in the middle school, are modest. In the past the Committee has carried out an event called Classroom on the Common. Sometimes it's in the fall, sometimes in spring. It is a gathering intended for parents, students, and teachers to get together and discuss issues affecting adolescent students. There are skilled lecturers, followed by discussions. Skits and plays in which students appear, and helpful materials are distributed. So far, more than 60 parents with early adolescent children have participated in classes and discussions sponsored by Project Safeguard. It is impossible to have a correct response to every question children ask. So don't feel guilty when you don't know the answer.

There is a growing consensus that it is better to protect one's self despite the fact that data may not be conclusive about trihalomethanes in our water supply. Last year, Kelly Reynolds, a research scientist at the University of Arizona wrote an article which describes mixed conclusions about the various studies on the subject and then concludes: "Treatment of drinking water is a reasonable option for insuring the safety of exposure to disinfectant by-products (THTMs). In the scheme of things, drinking filtered water is a minor sacrifice to make while scientists sort out the gravity of the issue."

If you feel that contaminants in the water supply may affect you, perhaps you should investigate either filters at the tap, so called point of use, or at point of water entry to the home. Such filters are available at all major appliance outlets and prices vary. All major filter manufacturers list their data with one of the following certification agencies: WQA (Water Quality Association), NSF (National Sanitation Foundation), UL (Underwrighters Laboratories) and the California Department Of Health Services. All the agencies require documentation of performance claims. For any filter you are considering, obtain a copy of the certified test data citing removal of THTMs, chlorination by-products, or similar wording. If removal is greater than 90 percent, the filter should be considered satisfactory. For most filters, activated carbon is the filtering agent, and cartridges containing this material are replaceable. The size of the filter governs not only frequency of replacement, but cost. Don't forget to obtain an estimate of replacement frequency and cost when you are considering a filter.

SSCC Nursery School registration to start

The South Shore Community Center Nursery School announces applications of the 2005-2006 school year will be available on Tuesday, Jan. 18, at the Nursery School and the Community Center offices.

All families on the South Shore are eligible to apply. The registration process is based on a lottery system. Applications will be available until Jan. 28. All applications are due back to the Nursery School Office by Jan. 28, at 3 p.m. Included in the envelope should be a copy of the child's birth certificate and a $100 registration fee. Application envelopes should be clearly marked Nursery School Registration.

The lottery will be drawn the week of Feb. 7, and acceptance letters will be sent via mail the following week. Any child who does not get a placement in the program will have their registration fee returned.

South Shore Community Center Nursery School offers three levels of programs to meet the needs of children age's three to five. The morning program runs from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and the afternoon program is from 12:30 to 3 p.m. Lunch Bunch is offered as extended day program as well as various Community Center programs. The youngest program, The Nursery Program is for children who will be three years old by Nov. 1. The Pre Kindergarten Program is for children who will be four by Nov. 1. They also offer a very special Enrichment Program for those children who are older fours and fives whom are looking for a challenging year before they enter Kindergarten.

The Nursery School program's goal is to provide a happy, safe environment where children will develop trust and have a positive "school" experience. The children will have the opportunity to recognize their own talents and abilities and they will be encouraged to approach new experiences with a spirit of enthusiasm and self-confidence. The Guidelines for Preschool Learning Experiences created by the Early Childhood Advisory Council to the Massachusetts Board of Education are followed. It is based on the standards set up for the Massachusetts Curriculum Frameworks.

If you have any questions or will like to set up an appointment to meet the director, call Sheila O'Neil at 781-383-0036. The South Shore Community Center Nursery School is licensed by The Massachusetts Office of Child Care Services and is located at 3 N. Main Street in Cohasset Village.

With today's edition, the Mariner begins coverage of the 2005-2006 Massachusetts legislative session with our weekly Beacon Hill Roll Call (BHRC) report. This feature is a clear and concise compilation of the voting records of area state representatives and senators at the Statehouse.

BHRC provides an unbiased summary of bills and amendments, arguments from floor debate on both sides of the issue and each legislator's vote or lack of vote on the matter. This information gives readers an opportunity to monitor their elected officials' actions on Beacon Hill. Many bills are reported on in their early stages and readers often have the opportunity to contact their legislators and express an opinion prior to the measure being brought up for final action.

The feature Also Up On Beacon Hill informs readers of other important matters at the Statehouse.

BHRC is provided by Bob Katzen who has covered the Legislature for more than 30 years. He has been providing this feature to hundreds of newspapers across the state since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Last week was full of activity on Beacon Hill. The Legislature approved several bills on voice votes prior to the end of the 2003-2004 session at midnight on Tuesday and Gov. Mitt Romney signed some measures into law. The Legislature convened the 2005-2006 session on Wednesday. The House re-elected Rep. Salvatore DiMasi (D-Boston) as House speaker while the Senate re-elected Sen. Robert Travaglini (D-East Boston) as Senate president.

ELECTION OF HOUSE SPEAKER

The House re-elected Democratic Rep. Salvatore DiMasi (D-Boston) as speaker of the House for the 2005-2006 session. DiMasi had previously been elected speaker for the last three months of the 2003-2004 session when former Speaker Thomas Finneran resigned from the top slot. Republican Rep. Bradley Jones (R-North Reading) challenged DiMasi last week for the position. The vote tally was strictly along party lines. DiMasi received 137 votes to Jones' 21. The challenge by the Republicans is traditional despite the fact that Jones knew he would not win because of the overwhelmingly Democratic makeup of the current 158-member House. This year's vote was markedly different from the one in 2003— the year that Finneran was challenged within his own party by Democratic Rep. Byron Rushing (D-Boston). Rushing led a group of legislators that challenged Finneran and described his rule as iron-fisted and retaliatory. DiMasi recently announced formation of a commission to review the operations of the House and recommend reforms to open up the legislative process. He echoed these sentiments during his House speech last week when he said that he is "committed to a process that is open, transparent and deliberative." His supporters said that this is an indication that the new speaker's style will be different than Finneran's and that he is striving to include more members in the legislative process. Some critics noted that DiMasi served for many years as second-in-command to Finneran. They said that they are encouraged by his remarks but are taking a more wait-and-see attitude. The commission is expected to submit its ideas and suggestions sometime in January for consideration by the House.

ELECTION OF SENATE PRESIDENT

Senate 33-5, elected Democratic Sen. Robert Travaglini (D-East Boston) to another term as senate president over Republican Sen. Brian Lees (R-East Longmeadow). The outcome was no surprise and the vote was strictly along party lines. In remarks following his election, Travaglini said that the swift passage of legislation advancing stem cell research is one of his priorities and would allow the state to regain a competitive edge in this important area. He cited other priorities including job creation, reform of state government, access and affordability of healthcare and an agenda for working families.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

ABUSE OF ELDERLY AND DISABLED (S 1083)- The House and Senate gave final approval to and sent to Gov. Romney a bill creating a new crime of indecent assault and battery on a person over 60 or a disabled person. The measure also increases the amount of civil penalties that the attorney general may seek against anyone that abuses an elderly or disabled person in a long-term care facility and allows prosecution of the owners as well as the offender if the owners' actions or inaction lead to the abuse. Supporters said the bill would help protect seniors and persons with disabilities from abuse and neglect and ensure that offenders are punished.

PROHIBIT SURCHARGE FOR MAILING INVOICES (H 4398)- The House and Senate gave final approval to and sent to the governor a proposal prohibiting companies from charging a fee or penalty to a customer who receives the company's bill or invoice by U.S. mail instead of by e-mail. The measure provides an exemption that allows companies to offer a discount to customers that choose to receive their bills or invoices by e-mail. Supporters said that companies are attempting to cut costs and save printing and postage expenses by encouraging customers to receive their bills via e-mail. They noted that this legislation would protect consumers that do not have Internet access and/or prefer to receive their bills by regular mail.

AfTA drops DEP wetlands appeal

Work can start in Scituate, Cohasset

By Jillian Fennimore
JFENNIMO@CNC.COM

While a recent federal environmental permit has given the go-ahead for more construction along 17.7-mile the Greenbush rail line — work in or near wetlands in Scituate and Cohasset is no longer on hold pending the outcome of an appeal by Advocates for Transportation Alternatives (AFTA).

Last week the long-awaited permit from the Army Corps of Engineers allowing the MBTA to build near and in the highly protected wetland areas in Greenbush corridor communities was granted.

But the AFTA appeal of the of a state DEP wetlands variance granted in June had stopped work in wetlands and stalled the $500 million commuter rail restoration project.

AfTA's withdrawl of its appeal of the DEP's wetlands variances for Cohasset and Scituate will allow work within the wetland areas in those two corridor communities to begin as early as February.

John Bewick, president of AfTA said the group has withdrawn the DEP appeals and is focusing its resources on appealing the Army Corps permit.

He explained AfTA had asked for an adjudicatory hearing before the DEP commissioner appealing the wetlands permit. AfTA sought a similar hearing on the DEP Hingham wetlands variance which was upheld by the DEP commissioner. AfTA is still appealing that decision in Superior Court and if the court agrees with AfTA, the group will seek to have the decision also apply to Cohasset and Scituate.

According to MBTA Scituate ombudsman Susan Phippen, AfTA's withdrawl of its appeal of the DEP's wetlands variances for Cohasset and Scituate will allow work within the wetland areas in those two corridor communities to begin as early as February.

Work has been underway on the project since the fall of 2003, but the MBTA has been limited to building in areas outside of the 5 acres of wetlands along the line.

MBTA Spokesman Jon Carlisle said the continuous permit appeals by AFTA over the past five years have stalled by not derailed the project. Carlisle said although AFTA is entitled to file appeals and fight against the issued permits, he is confident the rulings will continue to be in favor of the MBTA in all legal matters.

"The only result is delay and more cost to the residents," he said. "Anyone familiar with the process of these legal actions knows that (AFTA) doesn't stand any kind of chance whatsoever."

While MBTA officials work to get the train rolling in 2006, AFTA members say they will continue to work to protect the environment and stress the cost for the project is too high.

"Greenbush is a fiscally unstable project," said Bewick. "Alternatives are much less costly."

AfTA focuses on appeal of federal Army Corps permit

+The following is a press release issued Jan. 13 by AfTA.

Advocates for Transportation Alternatives (AfTA) announced yesterday (Jan. 13) that it is filing suit in federal district court in Washington, D.C., challenging the Army Corps of Engineers decision to issue a wetlands permit for the half-billion-dollar Greenbush rail restoration project without first conducting a full environmental impact report.

"We don't think Greenbush makes any fiscal or environmental sense," said former state environmental secretary John Bewick, who is president of AfTA, a South Shore citizens advocacy group. "All we've been asking for is a disinterested evaluation of the project on its merits. The D.C. courts have heard environmental cases from all over the Country and are the leading experts in deciding these types of matters. AFTA believes that an expert court will see the legal violations here."

"If the state insists on building this train line, it should be done right, not made up as they go along," Bewick said.

"The National Environmental Policy Act requires federal agencies to conduct a full environmental review of projects that will have a significant impact on the environment. For the less damaging Plymouth and Middleboro lines, the Federal Transit Administration did a full environmental review. The federal Environmental Protection Agency requested that the Corps perform a full EIR for Greenbush in 1999," said Bewick. "To go forward with this project without one would be wholly irresponsible."

AfTA asserts that refusing to do a full environmental review on a major commuter rail restoration project is both improper under the National Environmental Policy Act and unprecedented for a $500 million commuter rail restoration project. The Army Corps itself admits that the Greenbush Line would have negative impacts on numerous historical districts and properties; noise and local traffic, public safety, water quality, wetlands, wildlife and aesthetics.

"The D.C. courts have heard environmental cases from all over the Country and are the leading experts in deciding these types of matters. AFTA believes that an expert court will see the legal violations here."

— John Bewick, AfTA

According to AfTA, some of the things that make Greenbush a "significant project" requiring a full EIR under federal criteria are:

⟨ Adverse impacts, such as violating the mandated 400 foot exclusion zone on tributaries to Scituate's drinking water supply.

⟨ Effects on public health or safety. With 25 grade crossings in 17.6 miles, there are 3.5 times as many grade crossings per mile as on the whole MBTA commuter rail system. This greatly increases the safety hazard for fatalities. (There have been at least four fatalities on the restored Plymouth/Middleboro commuter rail lines since 1997.)

⟨ Adverse effects on historic resources. (The Corp's own 106 Historic review process concluded that the train "per se" will have an adverse effect on 37 historic districts and properties and 2800 homes immediately adjacent to the tracks, an unusually large number for a rail line. Many more people will be directly impacted in their homes than for any other MBTA commuter rail line.)

⟨ Significant local controversy over the project. (More than 600 project opponents attended the Corps hearings in 1997. A Town Meeting in Scituate, the largest town meeting in Commonwealth history, voted 2 to 1 against in 1995.)

⟨ Cumulative impacts, such as the recent FAA decision to approve expansion of runways at Logan that will cause 55 DBA noise levels in portions of Greenbush communities to which the train will add even more noise.

"We believe that a full and fair and independent review by a federal agency would conclude that Greenbush is not the least environmentally damaging or most effective alternative for improving public transit to the South Shore," said Bewick. "The reason that Greenbush is a 100 percent state-funded project is that in the early 1990's, the Federal Transit Administration refused to fund it, precisely because there are better ways of achieving the same goals."

Bewick said that expansion and enhancement of existing transit alternatives on the South Shore would create a better transit system, attract far more new riders than Greenbush at a fraction of the cost with dramatically less impact on the environment. At $360,000 per new car off the highways at rush hour, Greenbush is far too expensive. It is a misdirected use of limited rail capacity insofar as the real South Shore population growth is in the areas served by the Middleboro and Plymouth lines, two lines that will be unable to add rush hour trains if Greenbush is built.

"Unfortunately the MBTA has consistently failed to fairly evaluate alternatives to commuter rail restoration," he said. "It ignores the impacts of its failed policies such as the dramatic reduction in commuter boat ridership when it increased the daily cost from $6 per day from Hingham to Boston to $14 per day and lost about a third of its riders.

"Such shortsighted policies result in a system that is among the most expensive and least effective in the nation. The MBTA is having to make dramatic cuts in service to cut costs at the same time that it is adding a project that will add about $15 per ride in total subsidy for new riders attracted to the system. Greenbush is simply a fiscally irresponsible project as well as highly damaging project to the environment."

Wrestlers dominate NQ tourney

Three Cohasset grapplers won their weight class at last weekend's North Quincy tournament, and the Skippers ran away with the team title.

With 191.5 points, Cohasset finished over 40 points ahead of their nearest competitor, the host Red Raiders.

Leading the way for Torin Sweeney's squad were senior Kevin Dinsmore (130-pound class), junior Shane Dorian (140) and senior Joe Kehoe (152), all of whom won an individual title.

After finishing fifth over the holiday break at the Marshfield tournament, Dinsmore turned in his strongest showing of the season.

"Kevin wrestled a great tournament," Sweeney said. "I think he was really focused on winning this tournament after what happened in Marshfield. He beat an NQ kid [Eric Tso] who had beaten him in Marshfield."

The score of that final was 10-4 in favor of Dinsmore. He and Tso also split two matches last year.

Dorian defeated West Springfield's John Desilets, described by Sweeney as a quality wrestler, by a 4-2 score in the final match. Like Dinsmore, Dorian also exacted some revenge, as in the semifinals he

Skaters turning it around

Hockey hopes blowout win over Hull a sign of things to come

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset hockey team hopes it has turned the corner.

After three lopsided losses, the Skippers turned the tables on fellow South Shore League squad Hull, dominating in an 8-1 victory Wednesday night at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham.

A goal from senior Mark Donovan kicked off the scoring six minutes into the game, with assists from line-mates Pat Doonan and Mark Bouchard.

It looked for a little while like Cohasset might be in for a low-scoring slugfest, but they quickly cast aside that possibility with two goals late in the first period, both from senior captain Tim Pilczak. The first was set up by Brian Straughn and Joe Durkin, and the second by a great pass from classmate and fellow captain Ted Straughn. Pilczak made it count with an excellent shot from the right face-off circle.

The scoring onslaught continued in the second period with five more goals. Forty seconds into the period, Brian Straughn scored off a pass from Pilczak. Just over three minutes later, sophomore Conor Holway, who has stepped up lately in defense, scored unassisted to make it 5-0.

Pat Doonan scored the team's sixth goal and assisted on the seventh, scored by sophomore Austen Lanzillotti (Corbin Faber assisted Doonan's goal). With seconds remaining in the period, Pilczak went for the hat trick with a strong shot from the blue line, which wound up being tipped in by Faber.

For Faber, it was his first goal on the varsity level. The play also completed a four-point night for Pilczak, who has moved up front to the first line (with the Straughn brothers) as part of Cohasset's recent re-shuffling.

The easy win gave Cohasset head coach Ben Virga a chance to play some of his fourth-liners and reserve defensemen. Among those getting some good ice time were R.K. Quebec, Kurt Gritzan, Colin Smith, Melissa Crowley-Buck and Benn Massotta. Virga commended all for the effort they put forth Wednesday night.

The coach also complimented the third line of T.J. Kennedy, Lanzillotti and Faber for their fore-checking and ability to create some offense in the zone.

The win and all-around effort from all of his players left Virga in good spirits Thursday morning.

"This was definitely a good moment for a program that hasn't had any the last couple weeks," he said.

The win was also key in terms of the Skippers' standing in the league. Their record in the SSL is 1-1, with the loss coming Saturday to Abington/East Bridgewater.

Generally speaking, shots on goal are a good indicator of how a hockey game is going to go. When AEB skated with Cohasset, however, there was an exception to the rule.

Through two periods, the shots were 22-18 in favor of Cohasset. The scoreboard at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham showed a different story, as the Green Wave were up 5-2, and that is how the score would remain for the rest of the game.

Pat Bishop scored twice for the visitors, while Matt Jones, Joe Nadeau and Derick Slonina all scored a goal apiece.

Pat Doonan and Brian Straughn got the goals for Cohasset.

The game was shaping up to be a back-and-forth affair through the first 20 mintues. AEB scored the first goal of the game in the first period and their second goal in the second period, but both times, Cohasset came back shortly after to tie it up.

The Green Wave then scored three goals in a 4:30 span toward the end of the second period, and that was the knockout sequence.

Nadeau scored what turned out to be the game-winner at the 8:48 mark of that frame, as he fired a shot towards the Cohasset net that deflected of a Skipper's skate and into the goal. Bishop got his second goal of the game less than a minute later on a breakaway that was set up by James Sheehan.

With 1:42 left in the period, Slonina closed the scoring, as he was in good position to take advantage of a defensive mishap right at the doorstep of the Cohasset net.

AEB head coach Tony Sulmonte praised his frontliners after the game for their efforts.

"My hat goes off to our forwards; they took a beating from some big Cohasset defensemen and were able to collect loose pucks and score," he said.

Virga said afterwards he thought the final score was misleading, given the number of chances (the Skippers had 24 shots total) they created.

"I have no complaints about our effort," he said. "We worked hard, and I thought our young guys stepped up and played real-

Gymnasts stay on winning path

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Despite being short-handed, the Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team knocked off a previously unbeaten Hanover-Rockland squad Monday evening.

Led by the impressive all-around scores of Nancy Durkin and Samantha Rosen, Nor-Coh squeaked it out, 128.5 to 127.95.

Durkin, a senior from Cohasset, earned solid scores across the board: 8.6 on the balance beam, 8.5 in the floor exercise, 8.2 on the bars and 8.1 on the vault.

Rosen competed well in three events: floor (8.7), vault (8.2) and bars (8.0). It was the Norwell senior's clutch performance under pressure on the floor that sealed the deal; she was the last athlete to perform in that last event, and came away with the meet's second-highest score.

Last year, Nor-Coh went undefeated in a league that included Han-Rock. This year, the girls are in the larger Cranberry League with different schools, but Rosen said the win over their rivals still counts for a lot.

"I'm just really proud of our girls; they really came together to win."
Kara Connerty, Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics coach

"It feels good knowing that we beat them and knowing that we could have won that league again," she said.

Head coach Kara Connerty received strong performance in various events from Lisa Spirito, Jessica Davies, Kate Carpenter, Kiersten Shontz, C.J. Himberg and Alyssa Murphy.

The team needed those athletes to step up, as they were without two of their best gymnasts. Erin Kelly was out with illness, and Carly Arena is out for the year after suffering a leg injury in a recent practice.

"I'm just really proud of our girls; they really came together to win," said Connerty. "We had our highest score of the year, which is impressive for the kids. I think they felt proud of their accomplishment."

Fighting through it

CHS girls hoping to rebound from losing streak

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

It is rather incredible how this year's Lady Skipper basketball team has created an almost mirror-image to last year's squad.

Both teams roared into the New Year with a string of four victories, only to hit a brick wall.

The trouble with this year's team started with a loss to Kingston's Sacred Heart at the 2004 Holiday Tournament. The Lady Skippers thought they could quickly hop back on the winning track. Unfortunately, the opposite happened.

Take the Jan. 3 game as a case in point. The Skippers traveled west to play the Blue Raiders in Hopedale. It is quite certain none of the girls listed "losing" on their New Year's resolutions list. Yet, that is exactly what happened when the Blue Raiders handed Cohasset a 49-40 disappointment.

Except for the consistent shooting of senior co-captains Casey Anderson (25 points) and Nicole Whitney (nine points), the rest of the Skippers looked rusty in their shooting. Their failure to box out the Blue Raiders also hurt the Skippers in this match-up.

Defensively speaking, the girls got the job done. They switched to a physically taxing man-to-man defense late in the game.

"Our man-to-man defense was really working well," said junior point guard Chelsea Grossman. "We hustled hard and even made a comeback at the end. I feel we could have won if we hadn't run out of time."

Coach John Levangie commended his players for their high level of intensity and energy.

"I give the girls a lot of credit for the effort they put forth," said Levangie. "Hopedale is a very good team, and the girls tried incredibly hard."

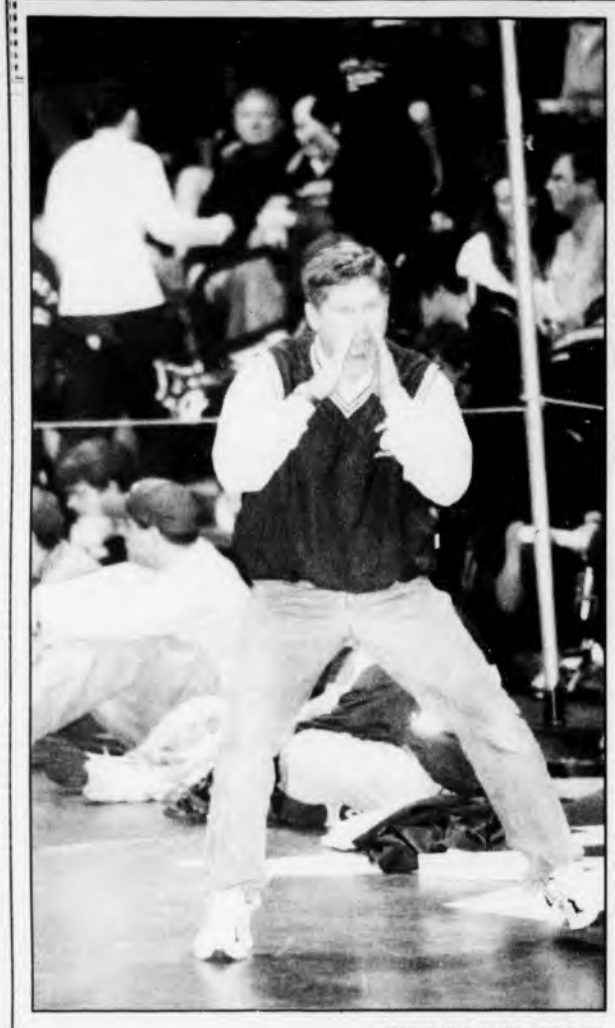
Hoping to "reverse the curse," the Skippers traveled to Abington four days later only to be rebuffed for their third loss in a row. In short, it was "same story, different town." Cohasset's shooting looked colder than a January swim off Bassings Beach. Yet, the Lady Skippers ran the defensive patterns like clockwork

"This was the hardest I've ever seen the girls play," said Levangie. "They really played their hearts out, but just couldn't get their shots to fall."

Casey Anderson still managed to throw down 17 points. Lacey Richardson, Nicole Whitney, and Chelsea Grossman also made significant contributions despite the 51-39 score.

"I feel our entire team gave this game all we had," remarked Junior Mia Lieb-Lappen. "Though a loss is always disappointing, I feel we showed incredible hustle."

Only three minutes into the game, Lieb-Lappen departed from the game feeling quite ill. She later returned but the team could not make much forward progress.



Unfortunately, Cohasset lost again on Tuesday, this time to Carver, 48-28. Anderson scored defeated a Barnstable wrestler who had beat him at Marshfield.

Kehoe, a defending state champion, battled through illness to finish in the top spot.

"He sucked it up. We kind of just brought him along, and simply asked him to do the best he could," Sweeney said. "He kicked everyone's butt."

This trio led a well-balanced performance for Cohasset, who had 11 out of 13 of their wrestlers place in the top six. Perhaps the most encouraging sign was the performance of defending state champion, Matt Baroudi.

In his first competition back from injury, the senior finished third overall. In an exciting semifinal match, Baroudi lost in double-overtime. It was a match that Sweeney said his star would have won had he been in top wrestling shape.

Baroudi competed in the 189-pound class, a spot that had been occupied by sophomore Nick Cambi. As a result, Cambi moved up to the 215-pound division, and turned in a solid performance by finishing sixth.

"Nick wrestled really well; he beat the number-2 seed in his second match, which was great for him," Sweeney said. "He had to bite the bullet a little bit there, and he did a really nice job."

Coming off a championship performance in Marshfield, senior Jon Littauer took second in NQ in the 119-pound class.

All finishing fourth in their divisions were junior Jake Watts (103), sophomore Adam Smith (125) and junior Dave McKenna (145). For McKenna, it was his first tournament competition of the year, and he fared well.

Ryan McLellan, a sophomore, placed fifth in the 112-pound class. Rounding out Cohasset's top performers was senior Matt Casey, who took sixth at 171. A champion at Marshfield, Casey was cruising through this tournament as well before suffering a minor injury in the semifinals. The Cohasset coaches decided not to risk further injury, and forfeited his remaining matches.

The Skippers geared up for their tournament tomorrow with a lopsided win over Norwell on Wednesday.

The Cohasset tournament starts tomorrow at 9:30 a.m., with the finals to start around 5 p.m. Including the hosts, 10 teams will be competing. Among the top teams joining Cohasset at the tournament are Duxbury, Hanover, Rockland, Hamilton-Wenham and Lynnfield.

Cohasset freshman Mike Bilodeau makes a move to the basket on a fast break during the boys' game against Abington last Friday. The Skippers have fallen on hard times lately, with a couple tough losses to Abington and Carver. The boys hope to turn it out around down the Cape this weekend: they travel to Harwich tonight, and face Cape Cod Academy tomorrow afternoon.

Boys Patriot League basketball handles Hanson

Patriot League basketball resumed this past Sunday with all three teams facing Hanson in exciting hoop action.

The new year brought renewed enthusiasm to all three squads, as they dominated their games and won.

The sixth grade boys scored early and never looked back in their contest. Robbie Hill set the tone for his team with aggressive, heads up play offensively and defensively. Hill was wild under the defensive boards, flying in and stripping Hanson of the ball. Hill prevented Hanson from getting many early second chance shots.

Cohasset took advantage of the fast break, first with a Mike Monaco to Hill to Ben Campbell who was fouled taking the shot. The next offensive play was a Gabe Seksay led fast break. Seksay rebounded and fed Monaco who hit Robert Jones for the easy layup. Cohasset just dominated both ends of the court and led early 8-2.

Quick substitutions kept fresh legs on the court. The boys in blue masterfully worked their offensive strategy, swinging the ball to the weak side and Sam Richardson hit a sweet outside jump shot.

Defensively, Hill blocked a shot and Cohasset converted to score, and go up 13-2. Campbell fed a waiting Eric Wasel in the the low post for another Cohasset score. Anders Goetz was ferocious, guarding Hanson's ball handlers, preventing them from driving the lane.

Jack Carrier was also a force under the boards for Cohasset creating second shot opportunities. Robert Jones played heads up ball, feeding the open man and taking the shot when open himself. Derek Youngman and Drew Cobin provided quickness in the back court, causing Hanson to be unable to break the press. Robert Jones led all scorers with 14 points and Ben Campbell chipped in 6.

All around, it was another great team effort, with Cohasset easily defeating Hanson. The sixth grade squad improves to 5-2 on the season.

The seventh grade team took to the floor and dominated early on. The boys not only had the home court advantage, they had a size advantage as well. Aggressive rebounding and defensive efforts kept Hanson from scoring, as the Cohasset squad jumped out to an early 6-0 lead. Taylor McQuade and Dana Valentine dominated the boards on both ends with their sheer physical presence.

By rebounding so strongly, McQuade and Valentine, along with the scrappy Brendan Doonan, got the fast break offense in motion. Eamon Davis and John Kearney frequently found themselves in the right place at the right time, stripping Hanson ball handlers.

Coming in with fresh legs, Chris Brown, Johnny Maher and Kevin "Big Play" O'Connell, increased the momentum. O'Connell was on fire, draining the outside shot. He also was phenomenal passing the ball. Davis and Maher benefited from O'Connell's precision passing, scoring from the inside.

Brown controlled the boards defensively, preventing Hanson from second shot opportunities. Jeff Charles played very aggressively, diving on the floor for loose balls, stripping the opponent and creating fast break chances. Will Wise provided great ball movement, swinging the ball to the weak side.

Frequent rotations kept new blood on the court. Coach Davis commented "Clutch play, whether passing or shooting, from the bench led to the win."

Valentine and Maher were high scorers for Cohasset, each with eight points.

The eighth grade squad finished out the Patriot League action in a winning fashion.

The start of the game saw Cohasset's John Sturino as a defensive menace to visiting Hanson. Sturino was everywhere, stealing the ball, diving on loose balls and creating havoc for the Hanson offense. Cohasset took an early 8-2 lead.

Hanson regrouped and slowly chipped away at the Cohasset lead. Nick Savage and Dan Martin were strong on the boards, preventing Hanson from too many second chance scores. Nick Simonds kept the motion offense in motion feeding the weak side.

With three seconds left in the first half, and the score tied, Hanson hit a three pointer to go up 19-16 at the half.

The second half started with a rejuvenated Cohasset squad. Working the fast break, Evan Richardson went coast to coast putting his team in the lead. Hanson could not match up with his speed and agility, allowing Richardson to frequently dissect the Hanson defense for points.

The lead changed hands continuously throughout the beginning of the second half. Martin found Richardson off an offensive rebound and Richardson scored to put Cohasset up. Hanson returned and scored. Sturino drove the baseline and was fouled, sinking both free throws, putting Cohasset up 22-21.

Cohasset continued to trade baskets with Hanson. A possessed Sturino went coast to coast not once but twice off steals to score for Cohasset. A resounding block by Martin kept Cohasset up by two. The momentum was permanently shifted into Cohasset's favor when an alert Danny Brady fed Richardson for two and a foul. Cohasset went up 30-26.

On an offensive rebound, Simonds was fouled and went one for two. Mike Fithian then grabbed the next offensive rebound and found himself at the foul line and sunk both to put Cohasset up 33-26.

Nick Savage and Adam Berger kept the ball in Cohasset's hands throughout the game, with their strong rebounding on both ends. Owen Landon found his range and sank two outside jump shots. Lennart Brown kept the motion offense going, swinging the ball to the weak side, tiring out the Hanson defenders. Marcus Charles kept pressure on the Hanson guards and created turnovers that prevented Hanson from scoring.

Richardson sealed the win for his team, with two trips to the foul line in the last minutes and sinking all four shots. Coach Richardson, pleased with the win, commented, "The boys are coming together, playing smarter ball and establishing their roles. This win was a total team effort."

ly well. I didn't feel like this was a 5-2 loss."

AEB kept up the pressure in the third period, out-shooting Cohasset 11-4. Five of those shots came during a 5-on-3 advantage in the opening minutes of the period.

From there stemmed perhaps the brightest spot of the day for the Skippers: the play of senior goalie Brendan Michaud. After watching the first two periods from the bench, Michaud stopped all 11 of those shots, which included some great chances by AEB's Stephen Sheppard and James Sheehan.

Michaud got the start Wednesday against Hull and played well against a limited number of shots. Along with junior netminder Stefan Parnell, Virga has a couple options in goal, and both kids will see their share of ice time as the season progresses.

For Virga and his charges, the overall goal for the season remains the same: qualify for the state tournament. At 2-3, the coach knows what has to be done.

"We have to go 8-7 in our last 15 games; it's as simple as that," Virga said. "I think it's doable."

After tonight's game with Scituate, the focus goes back to the league with games at Mashpee on Sunday and a home game against Harwich/Provincetown. The coach says Har-P'town may be the best in the league, with Cohasset, Norwell and AEB also in the mix.

"I think the league is wide open," Virga said. "It will be interesting to see who responds."

Girls travel basketball report

After dominating the Old Colony League last season with a combined record of 48-10, which featured undefeated championship seasons for the sixth and seventh grade teams and a trip to the finals for the fifth graders, the four teams in the Cohasset Girls Travel Basketball Program for grades 5-8 made the move this year to the more competitive South Shore League.

Although the girls have started slowly against a higher level of competition, each of the teams has made their mark in league play thus far.

After an opening game sweep at the hands of Norwell in which all four squads suffered a setback, the sixth grade girls earned the program's first South Shore "W" with a convincing 27-3 victory at Raynham. Guard Emma Quigley struck for double figures with a 10-point effort, hitting on shots from in-close and from the outside.

Kate French with six points, Carly Haggerty with five, Lindsay Davis with four, and Carly Martin with two points rounded out a balanced Cohasset offensive attack. Also playing key roles in the victory were guard Rachel Fredey, who dished out a number of assists, and forwards Eliza Kinnealey and Logan Pratt, who helped sustain a tough Cohasset defense which allowed Raynham just one field goal on the day.

The sixth graders earned their second win of the year a week later with a powerful 38-17 victory at Carver. Forwards Lindsay Davis and Kate French shared scoring honors with double-figure totals of 10 points apiece, while center Carly Haggerty tingled the twine for eight points.

However, it was a mini-offensive burst by Logan Pratt that propelled the Cohasset girls to the win. Carver had moved out to an early 8-6 lead on the strength of some outside shooting over the top of the Cohasset 2-3 zone defense. Cohasset bounced back to forge ahead to grab a 12-8 lead.

But that's when Pratt swished two successive 12-footers from the baseline to open up the Blue & White bulge to eight points, a lead from which Carver never recovered.

The victory was notable for a number of personal team records for this group of girls. The 38 points marked the highest total scored by the Sixers in one game and also marked the highest point total by any sixth grade team so far this season in the SSL.

In addition, Emma Quigley recorded the first three-point field goal for this group of Sixth Graders in their two years of play. Amy Costa with two points and Olivia Murphy with a free throw also got into the scoring column for Cohasset, while guard Caroline Fein earned defensive plaudits with a number of steals.

The sixth graders currently stand at 2-4 on the year, but have been ahead at certain junctures in every ballgame except for a 21-10 loss to Hanson. Now that they have become accustomed to the faster tempo of the SSL, the Sixers will be looking forward to a strong finish over the second half of the season.

The seventh grade team has also found the adjustment to the new league to be a challenge. While the girls lost the first four games, three of those losses could have easily been wins. In the season opener they lost a tough battle to Norwell; in the second game they lost a heartbreaking double OT game to Raynham; and they lost by only six to Hanson. In the fourth game against Carver, their three AAU players proved to be too strong for Cohasset.

This past weekend the Sevens broke into the win column with a strong effort against Duxbury that resulted in a 28-13 victory. Most of the girls from last year's championship team who have returned led Cohasset to the triumph.

Samantha Crough, Mimi Mahoney, and Erin Fontaine provided strong backcourt work and upfront Tori Lehr, Meredith Kelly, and Lindsey Allard worked the boards and got some easy baskets. Isabelle Franklin sat out the Duxbury game with an injured ankle, but Amy Meikleham and Lucy Noble picked up the slack with strong all-around games. Also logging valuable minutes in the Duxbury game, as they have throughout the season, were Taryn Donahue, Chelsea Silvia and Hannah Burgess.

another 17 points in the loss.

Going forward, the Lady Skippers need to dramatically improve their shooting percentages. The fans can expect to see some line up changes. Lara Novak is out for the year due to a leg injury.

Coach Levangie has turned some of his attention to a few of his younger players, such as freshmen Meg Anderson and Anna Haggerty, for a little help on the court.

With solid South Shore League teams teams like Norwell and Harwich looming in Cohasset's pending schedule, scoring will prove pivotal if they want to improve on their 4-4 record.

COASTAL STARS REPORT

Mite C2

The Coastal Stars Mite C2 team played its best game of the season on Sunday beating Hingham 10 to 0 at Hobomock Arena. Chris Phillips was outstanding in goal registering the shutout.

Seamus Ryan got the scoring started in the first period as he took a feed from Brian Mathews off of the face and beat the Hingham goalie to the short side for the goal. Later in the period, Kyle Bowman scored an assisted goal where his nifty stick handling move by two Hingham defensemen provided for an uncontested breakaway. Gunnar McKenzie, finished the period's scoring with a blistering wrist shot from the left circle. The goal was assisted by Kyle Bowman who he made a nice pass from the corner.

The Stars kept consistent pressure on Hingham in the second period. The Stars Red line of Harrison Sheldon, Evan Antonuccio, Tucker Antico, Andrew Kuppens, and Matty Johnson were outstanding with Matty Johnson scoring on breakaway assisted on a nice feed from Evan Antonuccio. Gunnar McKenzie scored his second goal of the game midway through the period on a nice pass from Derek Benson. Derek finished off the period with his first goal of the game on an assist from Matts Nelson.

The Stars offensive power continued in the third period where Derek Benson, who was a force in front of the net all game, scored his second goal on an unassisted end to end breakaway. Gunnar Mckenzie netted his third goal on a feed from Kyle Bowman giving him his first hat trick of the year. Tucker Antico and Brian Mathews finished off the scoring with Harrison Sheldon making a nice pass for an assist on Tucker's goal. Robert Bothwell also had a strong game anchoring the Stars defense double shifting much of the game.

Mite A

The Coastal Star Mite A team played an early game this past Sunday and came home with another win. The boys played a competitive Hanover team with the game being a close one. As with the week before, Brendan Crane scored the first goal of the game early in the first period when his shot on net was deflected in off of a Hanover player's skate. Halfway through the first when the Stars had a power play, a beautiful centering pass from Charlie Michalowski set up a wide open David Cataldo for a one timer to score the Star's second goal. The Stars had the 2-0 lead going into the second period.

Hanover came back and scored early in the second period to make it a 2-1 game. Play was more evenly matched for the remainder of the second period. The defensemen of Matt Burchill, Garrett Leahy, Charlie Blackington and Jeremy Duchini had there work cut out for them keeping the Hanover offense out of the Stars zone. Jeff Nagel played one of his strongest games of the year making some tough saves when the pressure was on. The Stars got the insurance goal to go up by two when Martin Buckley dished the puck out front to Sam Topham who pushed it in for the goal with only a little more than a minute left in the second.

Both teams skated hard throughout the third period. Both goaltenders made some great save to keep the score close. With just five minutes left in the game, Sam Topham followed up on his own shot to score making the score 4-1. Hanover never gave up on the game and Matt Burchill skated back to break up a Hanover break away with just a minute left in the game. The 4-1 victory makes the Mite A record 11-1-2 and they remain tied in second place in the South Shore Conference.

Squirt C4

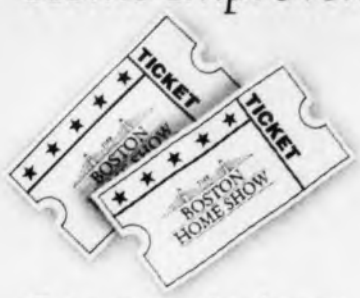
The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 team began the New Year with a 6-3 victory over Duxbury on Jan. 2.

The Stars scored first when James Daley fired a centering pass from Matt Tautkus past the Duxbury goaltender. Matt Tautkus then made it 2-0 Stars firing one over the stunned goaltender's shoulder. Stars forwards Seamus Feeney, Liam Rose, Ryan Melia and Michael McPartlin continued to pressure the Duxbury goalie throughout the first period.

Duxbury struck first to begin the second period, but Andrew Tautkus quickly made it 3-1 Stars when he sailed up the right boards and scored on a breakaway. Stars defenders Tristan Wiggin, RJ Neuls, Nick Craig and Jonathan Gardner kept Duxbury in check for most of the second period. Duxbury made it 3-2 until Andrew Tautkus struck again with another breakaway goal making it 4-2 Stars. Stars Goalie Max Hemingway made a number of spectacular saves stifling the Duxbury forwards throughout the game.

The score remained 4-2 well into the third period when Stars forward Thomas Coyne broke through the Duxbury defense and fired a shot into the left hand corner of the net. Not to be outdone by his brother, Matt Tautkus scored his second goal of the game, firing a backhander past the Duxbury net minder making it 6-2 Stars. Duxbury scored to make it 6-3 and pulled their goalie with two minutes left in the game, but would not get any closer.

Squirt C1



The Coastal Stars Squirt C-1 team reached the 10 win plateau with a strong game against the Eagles on Sunday. After a scoreless first period, Kevin Friedland got the Stars started early in the second period when he banged home a rebound off a Chris Lund shot. Three minutes later Max Montgomery buried the first of his two goals on a nice pass from Brian Craig. Jason Tolman made it 3-0 when he scored off a nice feed from defensemen Jack Condon.

Chris Lund netted the 4th on a nice passing play with assists going to Kevin Friedland and Tucker Welch. Goaltender Michael Soucey took care of things in the Stars end of the ice picking up his 4th shutout of the season. He had great help from his defense parings of Robbie Bertone, Tucker Welch, Jack Condon and Mark McGoldrick.

The defense really limited the Eagles quality scoring chances. Tucker Welch picked up the 6th goal of the game on a great deke in front of the Eagles net, first getting by the defensemen then around the goaltender. Wingers Sam Asnault, Chase Sheldon, Adam Cowie-Haskell, and Jack Sullivan applied constant pressure on the Eagle defense with relentless fore checking. This created several turnovers and some quality scoring chances. Brian Craig picked up the last two goals one unassisted and the other off a Max Montgomery pass.

The game puck went to Tucker Welch for playing solid defense and scoring on a nice move in front of the eagles net. The Seahawks are the Stars next opponent.

'Snow fun

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Tatyana Nakashima, 13, screams out in excitement as she heads down the high school hill last Thursday, the first day school was cancelled due to snow in 2005.

On last Thursday's "Snow Day," Kayla Farren, 13, tries to find an opening while getting into snowball fight with her cousins: Ryan McGovern, 9, Caroline Farren, 7, Allie Farren, 11, and Kaitlin McGovern, 5, all from Cohasset.

Mrs. Nakashima and Mrs. McKeon show their kids they still have what it takes to tackle the high school hill.

SENIOR SCENE

ALZHEIMER'S SUPPORT

Alzheimer's topic is 'At Risk Behaviors'

The Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore will host Gerald Flaherty Wednesday, Jan. 19, at 7:30 p.m. on "At Risk Behaviors in Alzheimer's Disease."

Flaherty coordinates the Medical and Scientific Affairs program and the national Safe Return program in Massachusetts. Safe Return is a data base registry funded by the U.S. Justice Department to help recover missing persons with memory impairment. He is co-author of "Dementia and Wandering" and editor of Directory of Research Opportunities for People with Dementia. His presentation will include why people with dementia sometimes wander, when does it become dangerous for a dementia victim to drive, how does a family learn to confront the worry, ambivalence and possible devastation of waiting too long before coping with these potentially life-threatening behaviors.

This meeting is free and open to the public at the Hingham Senior Center, 200 Central St., Hingham. For more information, call Toni Abbott at 781-749-1823 or Ruth Scully at 781-740-2426.

Wine tasting brunch to benefit Alzheimer's

On Sunday, Jan. 23, Bridgemans Restaurant in Hull will host a Wine-Tasting Brunch by the Sea at noon. A wine will accompany each course with wine commentary by an expert who will explain the art of blending food and wines. Paul Wahlberg, the young and passionate chef at Bridgemans, promises an exciting menu. Bridgemans received Zagats Review 2004 an "excellent" rating and "Best New Restaurant South of Boston" in Boston Magazine's "Best of Boston." A raffle for baskets of wines and goodies will add to the fun, along with the amazing view of the beach.

Above cost proceeds of this event underwrite ADSGSS Inc. activities, which are entirely supported by donations and volunteered staffing. Since 1938 the monthly newsletter, mailing costs, outreach brochures, packets of information, help line and Family Respite Assistance Program (1991), which helps families pay for local day-health programs, are part of the ADSGSS mission to help local families cope with Alzheimer's disease.

"A Wine-tasting Brunch by the Sea" will delight your palate as well as benefit those local families who depend on ADSGSS for information and support.

Reservations are a must. Seats are $65 per person. Call JoAnn Mitchell, 781-749-5417 for reservations.

WORSHIP NOTES

Archbishop O'Malley to visit St. Anthony's

His Excellency Sean P. O'Malley, OFM Cap., Archbishop of Boston will make his first visit to St. Anthony Parish, Cohasset, where he will celebrate the 9:30 a.m. Mass at St. Anthony Church on Sunday, Jan. 16.

A reception will follow the liturgy in the Parish Center. Parishioners and friends are cordially invited to attend the Mass and the reception.

The Rev. John Mulvehill, pastor of St. Anthony's, said Archbishop O'Malley has been visiting parishes in the diocese. "But this is his first visit to Cohasset," said Mulvehill who received a call last Friday about the visit and announced it at last Sunday's Mass.

He expects O'Malley will talk on the scriptures of the day in the regular Sunday Mass, but hopes people will express their concerns to O'Malley in the informal reception at the parish hall.

Mulvehill explained many Scituate residents who were part of St. Frances Xavier Cabrini Church – which the diocese closed in October – have been attending St. Anthony's. Before Christmas, roughly 600 more people were attending the liturgies than in past years, Mulvehill said. He said St. Anthony's can accommodate the extra people and has not had to add additional masses.

Some of the St. Frances parishioners have been holding a 24-hour "sit-in" since October to protest the closing of their church as part of the Boston diocese reconfiguration plan.

Archbishop Sean O'Malley enters St. Mary's Church in Hanover last August to celebrate the annual Portiuncula Mass to honor St. Francis of Assisi's ministry to the poor and to celebrate the significance of the Portiuncula Chapel on the grounds of the Cardinal Cushing School.

Media program at St. Stephen's

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is again offering a faith-based program called Via Media starting Wednesday, Jan. 26 from 7-9 p.m.The objective is to create an open and inclusive environment that appeals to people wondering about how the Episcopal Church approaches issues of faith. People are encouraged to bring their ideas and questions, informational resources will be provided and a place to exchange your thoughts and voice your opinions.

Over a period of eight weeks, St. Stephen's invites those seeking a spiritual community to enter both the journey and the conversation. Each week will begin with dinner at 7 p.m. and will be followed by a short video. Small and large group discussions will allow you to share your thoughts, reactions and questions to the topics presented in the video.

Using this combination of learning styles, they will encounter the basic principles of Christianity through the Anglican approach of Scripture, Tradition, and Reason. All people are encouraged to ask questions, and to learn how to answer their questions of faith.

This program is open to the public and is free. They hope you will consider joining for dinner and conversation. To register, call St. Stephen's at 781-383-1083 no later than Jan. 24.

Shawl ministry

The Shawl Ministry of the South Shore, will meet on Saturday, Jan. 22, from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Trustees Meeting Room of the Hingham Public Library. The group meets the fourth Saturday of every month and is open to anyone interested in knitting or crocheting as a way to express the love of God to people in need of care. The sessions close with a blessing over the works in progress and the finished shawls. New participants are always welcome and can be taught the needlework basics if necessary. Rev. Victoria Gaskell is the facilitator.

Participants are welcome to create shawls for any person or project they desire.

Hingham Public Library is off Route 228 at 66 Leavitt St. The entrance is in the rear on the lower level and is handicapped accessible. For information call Gaskell days at 617-353-3036.

Knitters should bring size 11 or 13 needles and 3 skeins of yarn. Crocheters need a size M,N, or P hook and 4 skeins of yarn. For suggested yarns and more information about The Shawl Ministry go to www.shawlministry.com.

Second Congregational hosts book discussions

The Second Congregational Church located at 43 Highland Ave., in Cohasset, will be hosting a two-evening discussion series on the book: "The Gospel of Mary Magdalene" by Jean-Yves Leloup. The meetings will take place on Wednesday, Jan. 26, and Feb. 2, at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome...older teens, young adults, singles, couples and Seniors.

Come discuss a great book over a steaming hot cup of coffee. If you are interested in attending, contact the church office at 781-383-0345 or just stop in. Books are available for purchase at Buttonwood Books on Rt. 3A in Cohasset.

Passengers get close-up views of Alaska's glaciers, wildlife from small ships

By BENJAMIN LYONS
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

ABOARD THE WILDERNESS ADVENTURER, Alaska — Drifting only 250 feet away, we watched in hushed silence from the bow of our ship as a black bear and her cub scoured the shoreline for food. We whispered expressions of delight and silently passed binoculars. After a good half hour, the cub stood on its hind legs and faced us with an intimidating expression before thinking better of the idea and retreating up a dead tree. Watching these bears from this perfect vantagepoint, all of us understood we had chosen the right way to see Alaska. We were cruising Alaska's Inside Passage between Ketchikan and Juneau aboard the 70-passenger Wilderness Adventurer, operated by Glacier Bay Cruiseline. More boat than traditional cruise ship, the Adventurer offers cruising at its most basic, with Alaska the focus. Promising an active, high-energy cruise, Glacier Bay boasts that its ships, equipped with more than 30 kayaks, are really "sport utility vessels," in contrast to the floating hotels that sail this route. The experience is up-close and personal, with the Wilderness Adventurer and the other ships in the Glacier Bay fleet able to get into isolated areas the big ships simply can't. The two-person kayaks, stable and easy to use, were launched directly from the ship's stern.

It took only a few minutes to feel comfortable paddling around and exploring the coastline. The hours in the kayak were undoubtedly the highlight of the weeklong cruise, as passengers paddled up to waterfalls tumbling off granite cliffs or poked along the coastline, ducking underneath overhanging tree branches. Loosely guided, we set off learning about the intertidal zone or looking for wildlife. At times, seals surrounded us and stared inquisitively, making us feel as if we were actually interacting with Alaska rather than just observing it from a distance. If we weren't kayaking, we were on shore with one of the ship's three naturalists. Some walks were more nature hikes, on which our earthy guides talked to us about medicinal uses of plants and read poetry in the forest to give us a "sense of place." The experience took on a distinct summer camp feel. A wake-up call was broadcast at 7 a.m. and activities, all offered without an extra charge, started at 8 a.m. Those who, like me, wanted to do as much as possible, could take an escorted kayak trip from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., return for lunch and then be off at 1 p.m. for a three-hour nature hike. On another afternoon, when no long hike was offered, I kept myself off ship by kayaking on my own for an hour, hiking for the next hour, then finishing the afternoon with another turn in a kayak. Being in my mid-20s and fairly fit, I found the organized kayak excursions to be comfortably tiring but hardly draining.

Ice in Sawyer Glacier.

The hikes, on the other hand, were not quite as challenging as I had hoped, although at least two hikes required truly nimble footwork to walk up slippery rocks and pull yourself over muddy, twisted roots. The small-ship advantage in seeing wildlife was evident during our 24-hour stay in Glacier Bay. Just after noon when the big ships left for their next port of call, we had only started our exploring. We cruised along the coast getting close to mountain goats and their babies jumping from ledge to ledge on precarious cliffs. We followed two moose swimming across a bay and approached a colony of large sea lions playfully frolicking in the water and on land.

In addition to spotting wildlife, the goal for most passengers was seeing glaciers, and we got our fill in Glacier Bay and Tracy Arm. I pulled open the blinds in my cabin one morning, and the window was filled with an unmistakable, mile-long blue wall that was Marjorie Glacier only a few hundred feet away, the colors so vivid the ice seemed to glow from within. Later, we all marveled at seeing the glaciers calving, when large sections suddenly split off and plummet into the water. The noise is what impresses the most — a deep thunderous cracking followed by a sudden resumption of undisturbed silence. Whales were so plentiful throughout the cruise that by the end of our week they hardly drew a glance. But we all were caught unaware one day when a whale surfaced less than 10 feet in front of our ship. We first knew of its presence by its deep, guttural breathing sound, followed by the scream of shock from the person on the bow realizing she was looking down on top of a whale.

Though passengers on our cruise ranged from teens to those in their 70s, the average age was late 40s or early 50s. All shared an intense enthusiasm for getting out and seeing Alaska. Few had ever taken a cruise before. The Wilderness Adventurer has one public space, the forward half a lounge with a bar while the aft half serves as the dining room. Rather than glitzy casinos and revues, evenings on this ship included short ecology talks by a naturalist, with everyone gathered in the lounge as if around a campfire. Onboard dress was equally casual. Forget bringing a tie—we often wore rain gear in the lounge and the only thing brought to meals were binoculars and cameras (strewn on the tables as we ate). All passengers came well prepared and fitted not only with the proper gear, but a good spirit — the occasional rocky sea and driving rain drew no complaints. The ship's cabins were very snug and didn't have locking doors. Bathrooms were merely toilets with a showerhead conveniently affixed above. But those were minor inconveniences.

By the end of our trip, the list of wildlife and natural sites we had seen was long and extensive. On the last night, passengers gathered around to exchange e-mail addresses and watch a slide show of the week that the crew had surreptitiously been working on throughout the trip. Laughing and acting out silly skits in the lounge, we reflected on our shared, intense week and how sorry we were to leave. Each of us passengers had come there to experience and appreciate the true beauty of Alaska, and we had.

Glacier Bay Cruiseline's four ships cruise Alaska from May to September. Rates for one-week cruises on the Wilderness Adventurer start at $2,890 per person. For reservations, call 206-623-7110 or go to www.glacierbay-tours.com

OBITUARIES

John F. O'Toole

John F. O'Toole of Cohasset, a native of Somerville, died at home Jan. 10, 2005.

A true gentleman to all in manner and speech, he was a loving and devoted husband. He graduated from Northeastern University's School of Engineering. After graduation he worked for Liberty Mutual, Cuneo Press and finally the Department of Defense. While working as a civil engineer with the U.S. Navy, he and his wife lived in Japan for several years. He retired from the DOD in 1986.

A resident of Cohasset for 50 years, he served on the town's planning board for 23. He was also a member of Cohasset's Old Goats Club, a luncheon group.

His dry sense of humor, inquisitive mind and impeccable manners made him the perfect conversationalist for anyone on any topic. A baking enthusiast, his brownies and Irish soda bread were admired by all. He was a lifelong learner, always in pursuit of new knowledge.

In addition to his wife, Frances (Ford) O'Toole, he leaves a number of nieces, nephews and cousins.

A funeral mass will be held for him Saturday, Jan. 15, at 11 a.m. at St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

Arrangements are by Hamel, Wickens, Troupe in Quincy.

Anne V. Kelleher

Anne V. (Delgrosso) Kelleher, 83, of Cohasset, a homemaker, died Jan. 7, 2005, at the Allerton House in Weymouth following a lengthy illness.

Born in Boston, daughter of the late Joseph and Ellen Delgrosso, she attended Cohasset schools and was a graduate of Burdett College in Boston.

Mrs. Kelleher was a resident of Cohasset for 54 years.

She leaves her husband, Robert W. Kelleher; four daughters, Ellen Kelleher of Beachwood, N.J., Maryanne K. Maher of Toronto, Canada, Patricia K. Tynan of Huntington Beach, Calif. and Nancy Kelleher of Tucson, Ariz.; three sons, Robert J. Kelleher of Sunnyvalle, Calif., Peter M. Kelleher of Henderson, Nev. and James W. Kelleher of Hingham; a sister, Chauncy Delgrosso of Hollywood, Fla.; and 12 grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. Interment was private.

Arrangements were by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to The American Diabetes Assoc., 40 Speen St., Framingham, 01701.

Arlene Z. Kent

Arlene Zerega Kent, 102, of Scituate, formerly of New York, died Jan. 6, 2005, at home.

Born in Brooklyn, Mrs. Kent was the daughter of the late John P. Zerega and Ethel Hill of Brooklyn. John P. Zerega's father, Antoine Zerega, founded the first pasta factory in Brooklyn, N.Y.

She attended Marymount College, Tarrytown, N.Y. and received a two year degree in 1922. She then took journalism courses at New York University, and worked as a newspaper reporter for the Brooklyn Standard Union for a period. Following that experience she returned to Fordham University where she received her bachelor's degree.

She became a social worker and spent 30 years as a Confraternity of Christian Doctrine teacher in Spanish Harlem through a settlement house: Casita Maria, located there, which she helped establish.

For this work, in 1976, she received a special award and blessing at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York from Terrence Cardinal Cook.

She was the widow of attorney William J. Kent, Jr. former president of the H.C. Bohack Company in Brooklyn and Long Island, N.Y.

Mrs. Kent leaves two sons New York State Supreme Court Judge William J. Kent and his wife Patricia of Sayville, N.Y., John P. Z. Kent and his wife Mary of New York City; a daughter Ethel Kent Wheatley and her husband Ronald of Scituate; six grandchildren, John K. Wheatley and Elizabeth Wheatley, both of Scituate, John Kent, Jr., Edward Kent, and William Kent, all of New York City, and Jill Desantes of Cutchogue, N.Y.; one great-granddaughter Samantha Descantes.

The Pyne Keohane Funeral Home, Hingham, handled the arrangements.

A Funeral Mass was held in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

Interment was in St. John's Cemetery, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham, MA 02043

Central air conditioning
for homes with hot water or steam radiator heat.

If a home doesn't have forced air heat, installing ductwork for central air conditioning can mean major remodeling and expense. But a Unique Indoor Comfort® system doesn't require large metal ductwork, or major remodeling.

Cool air is delivered through small 2" flexible tubing that can easily be weaved through walls and ceilings, around studs and other obstacles. All that's visible are small, round outlets in every room. What's more, Unique Indoor Comfort® offers Lennox high efficiency air conditioning.

Proven in thousands of homes, easy to install Unique Indoor Comfort® is the central air conditioning solution for the older home.

OUR LARGEST COLLECTION IN 40* YEARS!

Here's Why We Could Get So Many Bargains:

Apparently, over half of New York City's oriental rug importers (there really aren't that many) were concerned that the current world chaos would dry up their sources ...So they very quietly brought in far more that they usually do. I guess they figured that the world upheaval would reduce production of hand made rugs and make it too dangerous or expensive to transport them. . . and that was before that awful tsunami!

Now these importers are pretty crafty, and they don't tell their competitors what they are doing. At the New York Market on Dercember 14th, most of them were surprised to find such an over-supply, and so was Marjorie, our astute buyer. She was delighted at the bargains that she got from vendor #1! She was thrilled with the bargain she got from the vendor #2!! She is enthralled with the rugs offered by vendor #3!!! Margorie knew that she already had bought too many when she went to vend but she couldn't resist his proposition!!!! Margorie called my son Bill, who got us into the Oriental Rug business, and told him that she had already overbought but the bargains were too good to refuse. Should she keep going? Bill replied, "If these are bonafide bargains that we will be proud to sell, keep buying. We may never get another chance like this! After all, that's what banks are for".

TOO MANY RUGS FOR ANY ONE STORE -EACH STORE will have BETWEEN 250 and 500 Rugs!

OVER $7,000,000.00 LEGITIMATE RETAIL!

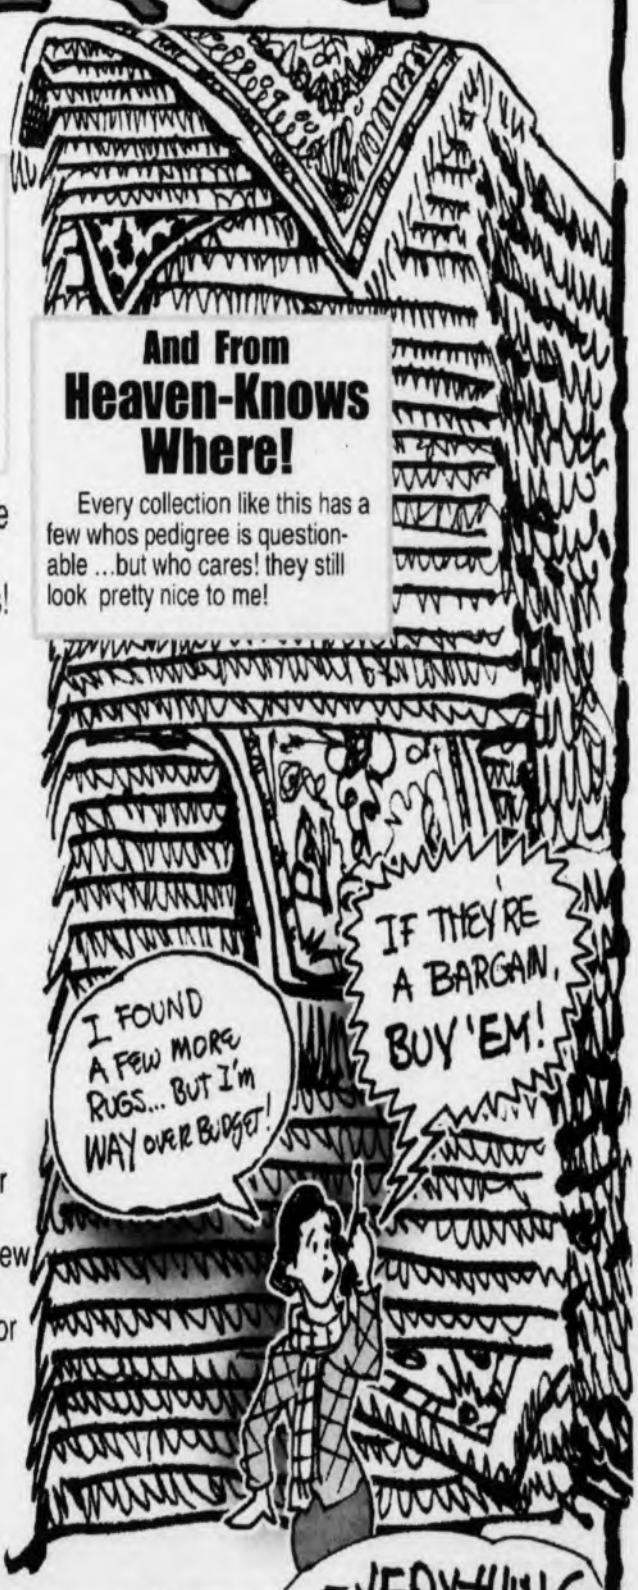
AUTHENTIC HANDMADE ORIENTAL RUGS

IN SIZES 2X3, 3X5, 4X6, 6X9, 8X10, 9X12, 10X14, A FEW OVERSIZES, AND HARD TO FIND RUNNERS AND ROUNDS.

FROM INDIA

Traditional Persian designs in a variety of designs, colors, and sizes. Whether you're just starting out or furnishing that dream home, you'll find the perfect rug.

From Pakistan



Sumptuous 16/18 Persian designs- some of the finest rugs made in the world today. Beautifully detailed with almost 300 knots per square inch, these rugs are fit for a palace as well as your home.

FROM CHINA

A gorgeous color palette of 160 Line and some 200 Line Persian designs with silk highlights. Perfect for the person who wants an elegant look

FROM PAKISTAN

Traditional Geometric Kazaks. A wonderful tribal look that complements contemporary as well as traditional.

And From Heaven-Knows Where!

Every collection like this has a few whos pedigree is questionable ...but who cares! they still look pretty nice to me!

In addition, you'll see some:Afghani Bokharas with their strong geometric design; Antique look Chinese rugs reminiscent of the 1920's Art Deco movement; Nepalese rugs with the Tibetan flavor Persian Gabbehs with their sophisticated Tribal look; Turkish rugs with the fashionable vegetable dyes!

ALL TO BE SOLD AT 50% to 75% OFF FANCY RUG SALON PRICES!

ARE THESE RUGS A GOOD INVESTMENT?

No one really knows! I would guess that as "western culture" spreads, the cost of rug making will go up. The costs of transportation will go up . . but no one really knows.

They ARE a good investment if you enjoy living with them, walking on them, and looking at them. I consider them a work of art for the floor instead of for the wall ...and a desirable heirloom to pass down from generation to generation.

WE WANT YOU TO LOVE YOUR NEW RUG!

We want you to be so proud of your new rug that you throw a party to show it off! If you don't think your new rug is good enough to brag about, just bring it back within 30 days for a full refund.

Actually, 31: it took Bill nine years to convince me that Building #19 customers would pay the kind of money it takes to bring home a genuine handmade Oriental rug...even if we sold it at half to a third of what other stores charge. Face it: I was wrong.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

REAL EAR MEASUREMENT

Aside from the subjective responses that the hearing instrument specialist elicits from the wearer when fitting a hearing instrument, it is necessary to obtain objective information to verify that the instrument improves hearing. This is attained by administering a test called "real ear measurement." It involves placing a miniature microphone in the wearer's ear canal to measure sounds which are introduced through a loudspeaker. The measurement is taken both with and without the hearing instrument in the ear. This enables the hearing instrument specialist to learn how the sound is resonating and being amplified within the ear canal, providing a better understanding of how the signal should be changed to suit the wearer's individual needs.

Put your hearing future in the hands of caring professionals. It is the job of the hearing instrument specialist to find the perfect match between instrument and patient. He or she will take into consideration all the many factors that will affect the success of wearing an instrument. Let us do what we do best – call on FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER for testing, evaluation, fittings, follow-up care, and quality hearing products. You can reach us at 781-337-1144, 534 Main St. (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth.

P.S. Real ear measurement may reveal that the shape of the earmold may have to be changed to modify incoming sound signals.

Scituate parishioners plead for their church

Archbishop O'Malley visits St. Anthony's

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

For at least 50 minutes — roughly the length of Sunday's 9:30 a.m. Mass at St. Anthony's — Archbishop Sean O'Malley could put aside divisiveness and disruption in the diocese and preach on the universal themes of love, sacrifice, fidelity, dedication and peace on earth.

His distinctive, rich voice resonated throughout the pristine church adorned with white poinsettias whose leaves complemented the kelly green vestments worn by the Archbishop, his secretary the Rev. Brian Buchard, and the Rev. John Mulvehill, St. Anthony's pastor.

"We need to make time and space for God in our lives," O'Malley said.

Upwards of 500 people of all ages ranging from newborns to nonagenarians filled the church. The audience warmly received O'Malley's message, which was interrupted by hymns featuring soloist Lily Sestito, and the congregation broke into applause at the end of the service.

But among the regular St. Anthony's parishioners were a

Wild prom party

Schools reconsider hosting the event

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Last year's post-prom party was nothing like the picturesque pre-prom scene where seniors, dressed to the nines, smiled angelically for their parents' cameras. Instead, there was drinking, rowdiness. Some students deliberately set off the fire alarm in an attempt to break free from the party, which parents had spent roughly six months planning, complete with $20,000 in decorations.

A new group of senior parents are now looking to begin the planning process for the May event.

Mothers, Lynn Durkin and Helene Garber, came before the School Committee Thursday, Jan. 13, with a request to use the high school to host the party, as has

Handy (wo)man can help

Cohasset resident starts new business

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When her children were small, Mary Foley remembers standing around the bus stop with the other mothers, wishing they had someone to tend to all the items on their "to-do" lists. In essence, they each wanted someone to help plan the parties, do the shopping, and clean things up — they wanted a wife of their own.

This summer, with one daughter in high school, two off to college, and some newfound time on her hands, Foley turned that dream into a business venture, "WifeWorks," which will take on virtually any task. From walking the dog, to hanging shelving, to painting bedrooms — Foley said she is ready and willing to do it all.

"It's such a simple idea, everyone always says, 'Why didn't I think of that,'" she said, adding these days, people often don't live near their families and the don't like to impose on their friends too often. She said her service provides a way to get some help for things a person might normally ask their mother or sister to do.

"I'm good at a lot of things and I can hit the ground running," said Foley, adding many people are looking for services which they could hire a professional to do, at a higher cost, or a student who might not have the experience. She can fill that in-between niche. After managing her own household for years, Foley

Improvements stop history from going down the drain

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Captain John Wilson House on Elm Street is a building rich with history. Built by shipwright David Nichols, it was sold to Captain Wilson in 1810 for $475. Since that time it has served as a teahouse, photographer's studio, tailor shop, and in 1936 was given to the Historical Society, which is taking every precaution to preserve it and ensure its past is never forgotten.

Cohasset is uniquely beautiful due to its abundant ledge outcroppings. However, buildings surrounded by rock often have drainage problems, which is exactly the case at the Wilson House. Historical Society First Vice-President Tom Gruber said currently, the house is experiencing severe water damage, which has to be stopped or the house will be destroyed. Fortunately, the Historical Society has a restoration project underway which will not only stop the damage, but redirect the flows which will inevitably continue on the site.

> "Every board will be put back where it came from."
> — Tom Gruber, Historical Society

"Our objective is to direct water away from the house as far as we can," said Gruber, which will involve constructing a new drain at the rear of the house to catch not only runoff, but the water which seeps through the cracks in the ledge, and redirect its path toward a drain pipe on the side of the house.

With the ledge surrounding the house, Gruber said running the pipe along the side of the house and out to the catch basin on the street is not an option. Instead, the pipe will need to run through the house, but out of sight, underground beneath the floorboards.

The back portion of the top floor of the Wilson House is built directly on the ledge, while the front portion is above the first floor of the house. Currently, every floorboard in the downstairs front room and the back portion of the upstairs has been removed to make way for the renovation team, which is in the process of digging trenches in the ground underneath the house to

The Cohasset Board of Health still has flu shots available for those 50 and older and those who are at high risk. For more information call Public Health Nurse Judith Fitzsimmons at 781-383-2210.

Strategic planning volunteers sought

The school department has sent out materials on the strategic planning initiative for the district, which outlines various goals for the future. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said it is critical to have community input moving forward, especially as the fiscal year 2006 budget process gets underway. There will be a meeting to discuss strategic planning Feb. 8. Anyone interested in being part of the process is encouraged to contact the superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111, or via e-mail at dwalsh@cohassetk12.org.

Budget summit

The budget summit, which was slated for Tuesday, Jan. 25, has been postponed until Wednesday, Jan. 26. The date has been changed to allow new Town Manager Bill Griffin, who will come on board full time Jan. 31, to attend. Members of the Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee and School Committee will be present at the meeting, which will begin at 7:30 in the Selectmen's meeting room at Town Hall. All are welcome to attend.

Warrant closed

The Board of Selectmen voted to close the Town Meeting Warrant Tuesday. Buckley said all articles will go to Town Counsel Paul DeRensis for review, and public hearings will be held with the board to ensure residents are fully informed of all the issues prior to the April 2 Annual Town Meeting. For more information, please contact the Board of Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Permit fees rising?

At the request of Town Manager Michael Buckley, Building Inspector Bob Egan asked the Board of Selectmen to approve an increase of building permit fees, which will help balance the FY06 budget. As in most municipalities, Cohasset's building permit fees are based on projected construction costs of "value."

Currently, fees are imposed at $6 per thousand for residential construction and $10 per thousand for commercial construction. Buckley said most other towns in the area charge $10 per thousand for residential and $15 per thousand for commercial, which is the increase Egan is proposing. In 2004, the Building Department permitted work that was valued at more than $24 million, and generated revenue of $157,000. Raising fees will yield an estimated $60,000 for the FY06 budget.

In addition, Egan has proposed the testing and scaling fees for a gasoline dispenser be raised to $20 and for a 30 pound scale be raised to $15.

There will be a public hearing on the issue at the Jan. 25 Board of Selectmen's meeting where the board will take questions or hear concerns from the public.

In a related item, user fees at the harbor will increase from $5 per foot to $6 per foot, for boats occupying moorings and dock space. User fees have not been increased for at least the past 10 years. Currently, there is no charge for float ties, but beginning this summer, the same user fee of $6 per foot will be implemented for floating dock space, with a mandatory boat length of 12 feet required to occupy a space. In addition, those boats which do not pay their user fee will be charged a penalty of $50 on top of their user fee, and will be pad locked by the harbormaster until payment is received.

Increasing fees at the harbor will help that department become self-funding. This year, the budget is $6,000 short of completely paying for itself.

At the Jan. 25 meeting of the Board of Selectmen, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln will make a presentation about the possibility of raising ambulance fees to increase revenue as well.

Bus accident feedback aired

Installing seatbelts will be examined

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Members of the School Committee say they were very disappointed comments they have heard from members of the community regarding the school bus accident which occurred Monday, Dec. 20. Some parents said the administration should never have sent children out on a field trip in inclement weather, while others criticized the way the situation was handled after the fact.

At roughly 7:15 a.m. on the day of the accident, three buses carrying a total of 137 seventh-grade students left the middle high school to attend a play at the John Hancock building in Boston. The buses were traveling north in the HOV lane on the Southeast Expressway in Dorchester when the third bus in line hit the second bus in line, sending 15 students to area hospitals.

School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said her son was one of the students transported to the hospital, and she said between the administration, teachers, and emergency personnel, "I know the situation couldn't have been handled in a more professional manner."

MacCarthy said the parents of students involved were also great in pulling together during what could have potentially been a crisis situation, as many offered rides to other students and everyone pulled together to help each other out. "I think it was handled very well," she said.

If she had thought the weather was going to be that bad, MacCarthy said she could have made the decision to not send her child to school, but she didn't, and had anticipated her child coming home having had a great time.

School Committee member Rick Flynn said his son is also in seventh grade and was involved in the accident, and he supports MacCarthy's sentiments 100 percent. "This is not something you practice for or what you ever want to happen, but in situations like this, you find out what you're made of," he said. While there has been some discussion regarding whether the right call was made to send students off on the field trip with questionable weather, he said as someone who has traveled to Boston for the past 18 years, usually it's clear sailing on Route 3, even if the back roads don't look clear. "It's easy to be a Monday morning quarterback," he said.

"It's easy to be a Monday morning quarterback."
— Rick Flynn, School Committee

Supt. Denise Walsh said she was very proud of the way things were handled the day of the accident. She said it was wonderful to "see parents coming to the school without being asked," and gave her sincerest thanks to the administrative team who knew exactly where to go that morning — to be with the students. When the school found out about the accident, Principal Jack DeLorenzo and Assistant Principal Michael Gill immediately hopped in the car. Walsh said the two men on the scene as well as many teachers helped put parents' minds at ease, because they knew their children "were with people who love them."

Although Walsh said she believed the situation was handled in the best way possible, "I would be crazy to say we didn't learn from this," she said, adding by the end of the day, she had coordinated a debriefing for the staff. She said some in attendance were still shaking from the day's events, but she felt it was extremely important to talk about the situation and address any problems or concerns right away.

In the aftermath

Walsh said immediately after the accident, many people began asking why there are no seatbelts on the bus. She said after an initial investigation, she has found there are "as many pros as cons" to the safety device, but said possibly, as a strategic planning initiative, a sub-committee can be formed to look into the issue, which can report back to the School Committee.

"We want to let the community know, we're listening, we've heard you, and we share your concern," she said.

Walsh said only three states currently require seatbelts on the bus, and to the best of her knowledge, they are New Jersey, New York, and Florida. However, if there is a chance seat belts can cause more injury when used than if not, which some studies suggest, Walsh said the community will want to proceed with caution.

School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts said another important element to consider is the "major financial implication" installing seat belts in the school buses would have. Walsh agreed and said in the end, it might make more sense to install more padding in the rear of the seats, so students facing forward will have more cushion in the event of an accident.

In addition to seatbelts, the Connect-ed notification technology, which sends pre-recorded messages to parents via the telephone, will be fully operational soon. A letter was sent home to parents the week of Jan. 10, and a trial message was slated to be sent home by the end of the week. With the recent events, Walsh said she has been processing what the technology would have meant during the accident. "The initial phone call would have been frightening because we didn't know how badly the students were injured," Walsh said. However, she said she would have loved to have had the technology available to send home a message once it was known all students had been treated and released.

MacCarthy said the technology would have also been a great way to instruct parents whose children were involved in the accident to come to a specific location, such as the auditorium, where they would be given all the information they need about the accident, or could meet their children to take them home.

Anyone with questions about the accident, seat belts on the bus, or the Connect-ed technology system is encouraged to contact Superintendent Denise Walsh at (781) 383-6111, or via e-mail at dwalsh@cohassetk12.org.

Full-day kindergarten on the table

Part of revenue generating plan

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In an effort to offset the fiscal year 2005 budget deficit and plan for 2006 the school department has begun looking at ways to both increase revenue and reduce expenditures, and has targeted five actions which can be taken.

The schools have begun looking at ways to expand programs that will provide a service to the community as well as generate revenue. Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan has proposed an expanded kindergarten program which she believes will be a wonderful addition to the existing half-day classes. Sheehan said research has shown having full day kindergarten is a great benefit to children, as they are better prepared for the transition for first grade, they score higher on achievement tests, and teachers have more time to cover topics in a meaningful way. She said the option of enrolling a child in half-day kindergarten at no cost will remain an option, but by having the full day classes available, parents can choose which program is best for their child.

Walsh said the kindergarten program may be supported by grants. For example, if the state gave $15,000 for each of three classrooms, Cohasset would be given $45,000 plus the tuition payments from 60 students at $1,800 per pupil, for a total of $108,000. Walsh said the program could provide the net revenue necessary to offset the operational budget.

Walsh said another area the schools are looking at to save money is the possibility of providing services in house rather than outsourcing. One of the ideas which has been presented is the implementation of an integrated preschool program. Currently, the South Shore Collaborative operates a tuition based preschool out of the Osgood School, with a current special education out of district tuition of more than $15,000 for each child. Under the existing collaborative, there are 4 students projected for FY06, for a total of $60,000. Walsh said she believes the school department can save money by hosting its own in-house program, and by offering an integrated program, Cohasset students who require additional support will be able to stay in the classroom with their peers.

Curriculum Coordinator Ruth Fennessey said with the town running the preschool, education programs would follow the same curriculum frameworks as the rest of the school, where currently, as a privately run preschool, the same guidelines are not required.

Beginning this spring, athletic user fees will be raised from $75 per sport to $150 per sport. This increase will set an annual individual cap of $400 and an annual family cap of $600. By raising the fees, it is anticipated roughly $30,000 will be provided for the athletic program in FY05 and an anticipated $60,000 in FY06 to offset the total tentatively budgeted $292,000 for the FY06 athletic program.

In addition to athletics, increased fees are to be proposed for FY06 for facility rental. Walsh suggested depositing the funds collected into a revolving account to offset utility costs and building maintenance.

As a last resort, Walsh said cutting programs and staff have been evaluated. She said they have reviewed the most effective and efficient ways to provide support services for students, and the department is working its way toward less "pull out" support. In other words, students will be taken out of class to the resource room less often, and coteaching in the classroom will provide the necessary support for students.

In light of the changes, Walsh said the number of resource rooms has been reduced from three to two at the middle school. In addition, nine paraprofessional positions have been reduced from the FY05 and FY06 budgets, effective Jan. 24, which will save the department roughly $90,000 in FY0 and $180,000 for FY06.

Moving forward, Walsh also said the schools will be monitoring and conserving utility use. The department has entered a co-op purchasing of natural gas through the South Shore Educational Collaborative. In addition, there is a new facilities manager on board, paid for by the town to also monitor town buildings, to help review utility usage.

The school department is predicting a possible shortfall of roughly $500,000 for the FY05 budget, which includes $93,000 for under-budgeted gas costs and $67,000 for unemployment costs. The money to cover both costs is in the reserve fund — Town Meeting approved the transfer to allow the Advisory Committee to dispense the funds when needed. In addition, other areas which were either not budgeted or under-budgeted include transportation, cleaning/custodial services, tuition reimbursements for professional staff, special education tuition, and legal fees. Walsh said by implementing these new changes, it is hoped the school department will be able to bring the budget into balance.

However, Walsh said it is only prudent to expect the unexpected, as the schools are only mid-way through the heating season, and unexpected out of district special education tuitions are possible at any time. She said only two weeks ago, a $90,000 out of district placement came in which was unbudgeted for FY05, and it is unknown how much aide the town will receive from the state.

High school post-prom party was too wild a night

been the tradition for the past eight years.

But the Committee as well as school administrators said there are many issues that will need to be worked out before they would consider opening up the doors of the school for the event once more. They suggested the using breathalyzers at the door and requiring chaperones and students attending to sign a responsibility contract.

For the past three years, School Committee member Rick Flynn has chaperoned the post-prom party, which is held from 11 p.m. until 5 a.m. He said last year in particular, a group of students made the night "a little crazy" by getting drunk during the event.

Flynn said last year the seniors found ways to sneak alcohol into the school beforehand. During the day, the school was kept open to allow underclassmen to come inside and view the decorations, and during that time some of those students apparently hid alcohol in lockers and in the plants. In addition, "Some people had (alcohol) taped to their legs," when they came to the party, Flynn said.

But in addition to being disappointed with the students, Flynn said he was disappointed in many parents who had the attitude it was OK for students to drink if they "only had a couple." He said some parents see drinking as a "rite of passage," adding he knows many parents turned a blind eye to the situation when they knew some students were drinking, and that is a huge liability issue.

"By law, alcohol does not exist on a school campus," said Flynn, and parent chaperones need to be held accountable for every student who attends the party.

School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy also chaperoned last year's post-prom party and said after witnessing the scene, she has been thinking long and hard about what she would say should the issue of having another party this year arise.

"From where I sit, I hold a zero tolerance belief," she said, adding while she hates to see the after-prom party and its concept go away, she has been very disappointed with the outcome from past years. "It was supposed to be a zero tolerance event," she said, adding there should be no wiggle room. "The parents didn't take the right approach in being accountable."

High School Principal Jack DeLorenzo said he too has been very disappointed with parents in the past, adding some have even approached him to ask if they could borrow the couch from the nurse's office for a "sober-up room" at the party. In addition, he said one parent, a former School Committee member, tried to sober up a severely intoxicated student — who was later taken to the hospital — with coffee during the dance.

"It was supposed to be a zero tolerance event."
— Adrienne MacCarthy, School Committee

DeLorenzo said when the chaperones don't take their job seriously and incidents occur, they have not been the ones held accountable by other parents. He said after last year's events, the school was inundated with calls, and he said he is still receiving calls about it to this day. He said he received a very lengthy e-mail about the issue as recent as this fall. In light of the reaction from parents, and his own concern, he said he is very wary of allowing the event to take place at the school again this year.

Durkin said she fully understands the concern, and said at the heart of this year's request is the safety of the students. She said this year, rather than spending $20,000 to decorate, the committee has some fresh ideas to use money raised to help keep students entertained, thereby eliminating the boredom that sometimes leads to mischief. In addition, having tighter security, such as a police detail, is another option they are looking at to ensure students have a fun night, but everything remains under control.

"We want to make it a safe environment. We want to have a place they can go after the prom and stay until the morning," Durkin said, adding the attitude of the past, which has essentially been providing a place for the students to "do what they're going to do," where they can at least be monitored by adults, will not be continued.

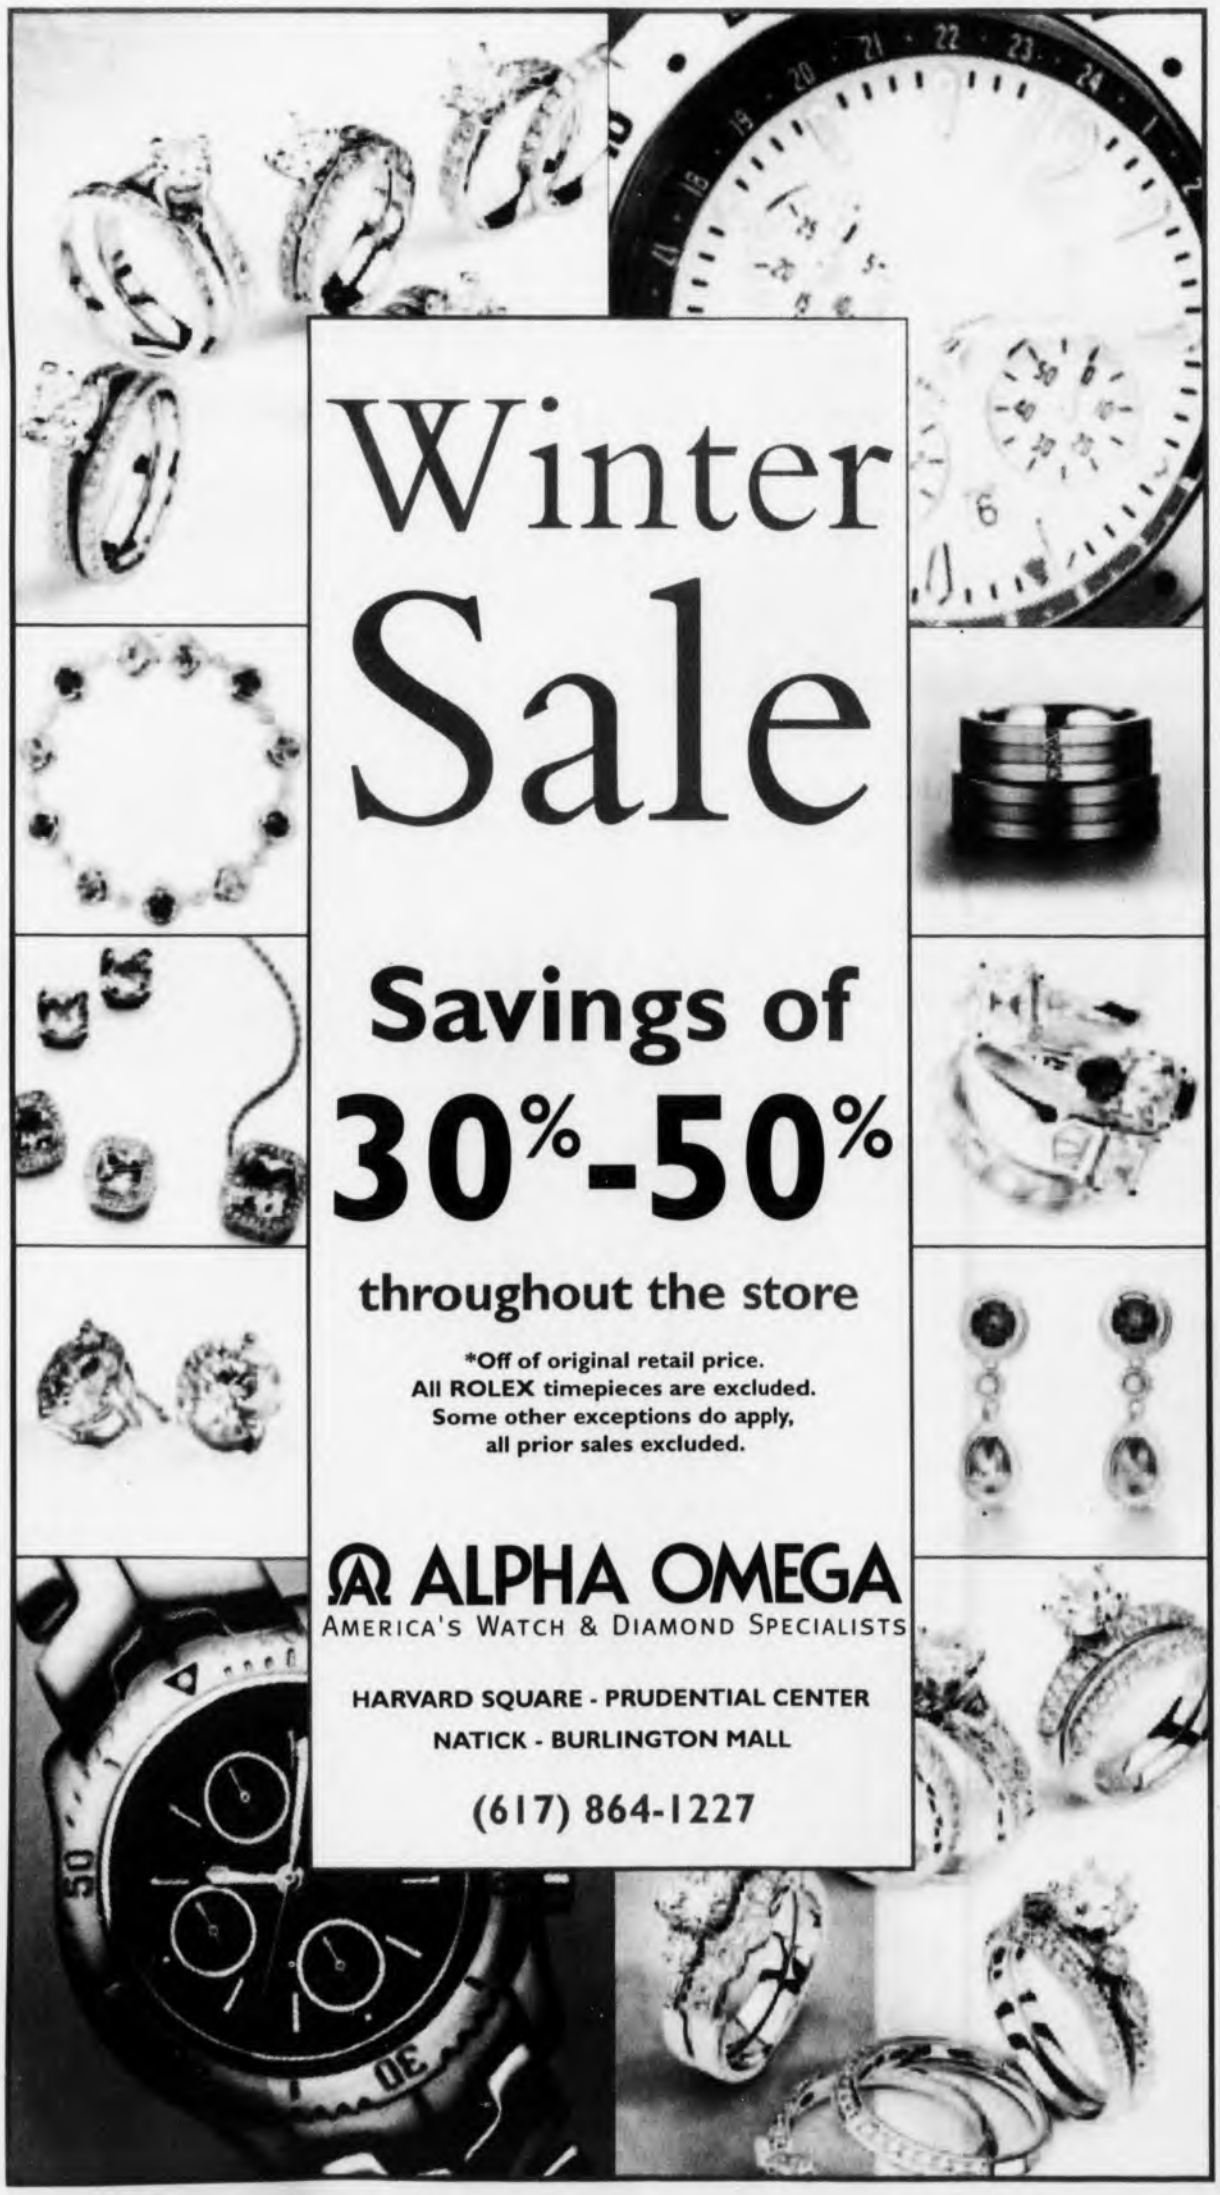
She said what she would like to do is have a meeting with some representatives from the senior class and see how many, if any, would be willing to attend a completely dry post-prom party, and begin planning from there.

"We can present it to the kids, and see if they want to do it. If not, we gave it our best shot," Durkin said.

Assistant Principal Michael Gill said he appreciates the way the group is going about planning the party, and said spending less time and money on decorations and more time on security makes sense to him. "I very much want to see this keep going, but we do have concerns," he said. Gill added he and other school administrators would feel much more comfortable if it was held someplace else. However, Durkin said she and the others who are involved with the preliminary stages of planning for the post-prom party have looked at other venues and nothing is available.

Flynn suggested instead of having chaperones, who are the parents of students in other grades, which has been done in the past, perhaps having senior parents chaperone would also help cut down on some of the problems. He said as a chaperone during past years, without children in that grade, he didn't know many of the students he was watching. "If the students can co-exist with parents for a night," he said, whether it be their own parents or the parents of a friend whom they know well, he feels students will be less likely to drink and get into trouble.

Breathalyzers



In addition, Supt. Denise Walsh said breathalyzers could be implemented at the door and it might make sense to implement a search to ensure students are not smuggling anything inside. Gill said he has spoken with representatives from other schools which implement breathalyzers and of the 10,000 tests administered thus far, only one has yielded a positive. "What it tells us is that it's a preventative measure," he said. Gill added breathalyzer tests are very accurate and can detect the presence of alcohol even if a student has had one drink.

Walsh also suggested parents and students who would be attending the party could be asked to sign a contract which would essentially say that by signing, they understand the evening will be drug and alcohol free, and the parents would be held responsible for all students attending.

MacCarthy said she thought it was a great idea to ask parents to sign, adding "They need to say they'll be responsible. They're looking after other people's kids."

Walsh said she would like to see class representatives contacted and asked whether students would be willing to live within the rules, and if so, the school's risk will be greatly reduced. However, the number of students willing to participate will ultimately determine whether the party goes forward or not.

The School Committee said it did not want to deny the use of facilities request just yet, and it is willing to discuss the issue at a further meeting. It advised the post-prom planning committee to do some of the leg work necessary to determine whether the event can be safe and secure, but attractive enough that a large amount of students will attend.

Cohasset police, school department get on the same page

Reach 'MOU' on teen issues

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Student violence, alcohol and drug abuse are a rising problem across the nation, and Cohasset is working hard to keep the number of incidents in town as low as possible. In an effort to ensure the schools and police department are on the same page when it comes to dealing with teens, the two have joined forces to draft a Memorandum of Understanding, which clearly outlines policies to follow and the roles of each.

Police Chief James Hussey and Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh, who both came on board in Cohasset this summer, began working on the Memorandum very soon after they accepted their positions in town. Although there had been a Memorandum between the schools and police department in the past, "It was more open-ended than we wanted," said Hussey, adding he and Walsh agreed they had many experiences from previous towns which could be incorporated into the new updated Memorandum for Cohasset.

School administrators, teachers and other staff members are increasingly relied upon to recognize and report inappropriate behavior and incidents, and knowing the correct authorities to contact depending on the situation is a very important part of the procedure. Through the Memorandum, which is currently a working draft and will need to be reviewed by counsel, the two departments agree:

- to establish an effective line of communication between the school and police department.
- to establish a clear procedure regarding the reporting of hate crimes, sex crimes, weapons and the use, possession, and distribution of drugs and/or alcohol within the schools, on school grounds, and at school- sponsored events.
- to guide teachers and administrators in reporting what is a serious criminal matter.
- to re-affirm with parents, students and the public that violence in schools will not be tolerated and that culpable individuals will be held responsible to the full extent of the law.
- to coordinate efforts, when appropriate, with the District Attorney for Norfolk County and the Department of Education.

Hussey said for minor incidents at the school, the administration will take its own proper action, and the police department does not need to be notified. However, under the Memorandum, schools are required to inform the police department of all "reportable acts," which includes threats to commit violent acts, verbal and/or physical assaultive behavior (intimidation, bullying, threats, harassment, hate crimes, sex crimes), possession of weapons, property destruction, or thefts. Once the police department is notified, it becomes responsible for handling the situation.

Hussey said one of the biggest teen issues Cohasset faces is underage drinking, which is often brushed aside as a "kids will be kids" topic.

If the situation is reversed and the police either arrest or take a student into protective custody over the weekend, the school administration will be given an update, to keep everyone abreast of student behavior. At the root of the Memorandum is the idea that school matters remain a school matters and police matters are separate, but that both are communicating regularly. Hussey said he wanted to make it clear the Memorandum does not mean his department will begin policing the schools.

One of the main goals of the initiative will also be keeping the lines of communication open with parents. Hussey said one of the biggest teen issues Cohasset faces is underage drinking, which is often brushed aside as a "kids will be kids" topic. He said it is imperative for everyone in the community, not just the school and police departments, to be on the same page, and take a stand against it. "It is against the law and it's not OK," he said.

When dealing with underage drinking, Hussey said he considers each on a case-by-case basis, based on that person's history. He said as a result, students who are caught and are first-time offenders are not necessarily automatically given a court date, but instead will be given the support of the department, which has the resources and assistance the student and his or her family needs. He explained his philosophy is prevention and intervention first, with enforcement as the last piece, and when carried out properly, greatly increases the rate of success.

However, when students are caught drinking, the Memorandum will require the department contact the parents or guardians of all students present where drinking and/or drug use is taking place, whether the student is participating or not. The names of students present, however, will not be given to the schools.

With the collaboration of the two departments, students may be subject to breathalyzers during school sponsored events or activities. Middle-high school Principal Jack DeLorenzo said the school is "at a point where we consider a breathalyzer prevention. It sends a message," he said.

Assistant Principal Michael Gill said breathalyzers have proven to be a very affective means of preventing underage drinking, and "Keeping people safe is what it's all about," he said.

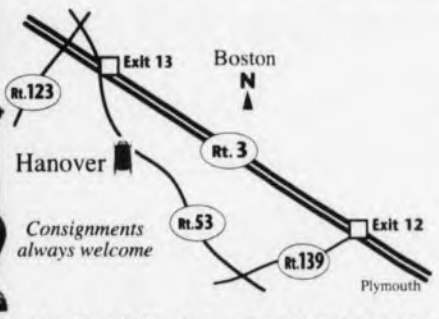
Walsh said with the support of the School Committee, the next step will be to bring the Memorandum before the Board of Selectmen for its approval, and back to legal counsel one more time. However, with many important events coming up this spring, she said time is of the essence, and hopes the students will be able to receive their approved copy within the next week or two. "In fairness, they (students) need to know," what will be expected, she said.

To receive a copy of the draft Memorandum of Understanding, please contact Supt. Denise Walsh at (781) 383-6111, or via e-mail at dwalsh@cohassetk12.org. The school and police department welcome input from residents on the issue.

Town Census

The Town Census for 2005 has been mailed to each household. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2005. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible although you may have recently renewed your 2004 license. If you did not receive your census, call the Town Clerk's Office at 781-383-4100.



Van drivers are needed

The Council on Elder Affairs is in need of volunteer van drivers. This is a commitment of approximately 3 hours a month. Call Martha Horsefield, Volunteer Coordinator, at 781-383-9112.

Hats off to Cohasset's Kristen James on being named to the dean's list at Fitchburg State College for the fall semester. Kristen, who had to maintain an average grade of 3.2 or higher for this honor, is a computer science major.

NEW SOFTBALL PROGRAM

The Cohasset Youth Baseball Softball Association (CYBSA) is pleased to announce the creation of a new 7th and 8th grade softball program for the upcoming 2005 spring season.

The program is being established to help fill the void that has been created with the elimination of the middle school softball program. The plan is to have an "in-town" league similar to the existing Major League softball program that is currently offered for the 5th and 6th grade girls.

The program hopes to field as many as four teams and plan to play two games a week during the CYBSA regular schedule which begins in April. Any girls interested in participating or if you need further information to please contact either Rob Spofford (383-1680) or Chris Haggerty (383-9930) by Jan. 29, which will allow adequate time to plan the inaugural season.

RADIO GUEST

Candy Ford, a Cohasset resident and the Director of the Candy Ford Group, a nationwide modeling and promotional staffing agency based in Boston, co-hosted the KISS 108 "Matty in the Morning Show" with radio personalities Matt Siegel and Billy Costa on Tuesday, Jan. 11 from 8-10am. Subjects ranged from Jennifer's and Brad's split to modeling.

COOKIE TIME!

Yum, Yum, it's that time of year again! The Girl Scouts will be selling their cookies for their annual fundraiser from Jan. 7-30. They will be selling door to door during this time and look for the girl's at Stop and Shop during January and February school vacation week. You may also contact Beth Marsden-Gilman at 383-1811 or Lorraine Healey at 781-923-1212 to order directly if no one comes by! Thank you for supporting the Girls Scouts!

That is all the news for this week. I think that everyone is in a deep-freeze in more ways than one. Try to dig deep and send me your news, event information or great days of celebration information no later than Tuesdays by noon.

said she not only has the experience, but continues to learn new ways to approach various projects.

Since her business began, Foley said she has had many different jobs, including organizing a playroom, pet-sitting, and purchasing gifts. She even visited someone's mother in the nursing home while they were on vacation. "If you were only going to be gone for two days, you might ask a friend, but not for a week," she said, which is what makes her service so nice.

Pink toolbox in hand, Foley has a handy side as well, and has been called upon to put together shelving for closets. She has hung shelves and hooks on the walls. "I've always been a putterer," she said, adding she was always fixing things around her own house and those are skills she brings to the job.

Foley, who was an art major in college, said one very interesting job was hanging 40 pictures in someone's home. "I hadn't done anything like that before," she said, but the client was very happy with her work. She said she was also able to tap into her art training while painting a little boy's bedroom.

"Lots of people need organizational help," she said, adding all they need is a little guidance and someone to get the project started as it can be overwhelming at first. She said so far she has organized a playroom, and even painted a magnetic wall in a home, which is fun for children to make words on with a magnetic alphabet and can also be a very helpful organizational tool.

During parties, Foley said many people don't want to be stuck in the kitchen, especially if relatives are in from out of town or out of state, and they would rather visit than keep running back and forth to check on appetizers. Foley said she has been hired to serve as an extra set of hands in the kitchen, bringing out food when it is ready so the hostess can really entertain.

"I'm good at a lot of things and I can hit the ground running."

— Mary Foley, WifeWorks

One of the most unusual errands Foley has been hired to do is pick up a bottle of wine. She said a client was cooking and needed wine for the recipe, so she dashed out and picked one up, then brought it over to the house. "It's kind of all over the place," she said of her job, adding she's doing something different all the time. But no matter what, the experience is always rewarding because she is helping someone, she says.

Many of Foley's clients hear about her services through word-of-mouth. As the instructor of the gym-dandy preschool gym class at the South Shore Community Center, Foley says she meets young mothers on a regular basis who are looking for an extra helping hand who knows what they're doing. Because she is known around town, she said it gives people a certain comfort level, when inviting her into their homes.

Foley said business has been picking up since it started and she thinks it will continue to thrive because of the busy pace of life today. "People really need it," she said.

Foley said her family, including husband Bill and daughters Cara, Tess, and Abby, have been very supportive of the business, and her girls even gave her a monogrammed tote bag with "Wife Works" scrolled along the side for a Christmas gift. Foley said with both Cara and Tess away at college, having her own business has been helpful in turning her attention away from missing them so much.

Currently, Foley is providing the service on her own, but as the business grows, she hopes to be able to provide employment opportunities for other women like herself who might not want to get back into the job force full time, but who are looking to have a rewarding part-time job.

Wife Works offers gift certificates, which Foley says make a great gift for many different people, including: new parents who want to spend time resting and getting to know the new baby, but need to get some laundry done; new homeowners who want to enjoy their new house, but have a good deal of unpacking to do; seniors citizens who may need help, but might not want to ask for it; or recovering patients. She said Wife Works can even help frequent travelers by stocking the fridge on the day of expected return.

Foley said she can't wait to see what her business will bring next but couldn't be happier with the experience thus far. "It's exactly what I thought it would be," she said.

For more information on Wife Works, including rates or a job estimate, please contact Mary Foley at (617) 872-9289 or via e-mail at foley184@comcast.net.

Wilson House to make drainage problems history

lay the pipe. Looking at the house, the pipe will run from the back left upstairs room, through the ground down to the first level, at the angle of the ledge, and out on the side of the front door, where it will continue underground to the street. Restoration architects from Menders, Torrey, and Spencer, based in Boston are working on the project, as well as employees of Cape Cod Builders Mashpee.

Gruber said because the building is of such historic significance, every floorboard has been given a number to ensure when the project is complete, "every board will be put back where it came from." The boards from the two rear upstairs rooms are being stored in the two upstairs front rooms of the house, and the first floor boards are being stored in the Maritime Museum next door. With the floorboards removed, ledge is easily visible in the interior of the building.

"The top floor overhangs the ledge," said Gruber, and with the water damage, the sill beams in both of the rear upstairs rooms are rotting and will need replacing. Gruber said the beams in one rear room are hand hewn, but in the other were obviously cut mechanically, which indicates one room was added to the house more recently than the other. During the renovation process, other surprises have been found, such as the electrical wires, which were wrapped in metal and badly rusting, and needed updating from a safety standpoint. Electricity has been shut off in the building until the system can be updated.

Current drainage renovations are only the first phase of the building's restoration, as the interior and exterior will both be restored, and handicapped access added, once water damage will no longer be an issue. Gruber said improving the lighting inside the house to showcase the many pieces in the Society's collection will be part of the second phase of renovations. Phase one is being paid for by the Community Preservation Fund, which has provided the $150,000 necessary to carry out the drainage renovation project. Town Meeting approved the allocation in March 2002.

EDITORIAL

Is it worth it?

We really dislike the cliché "sounding like a broken record" but it really is apropos here.

In this column, we've preached again and again about the dangers of underage drinking which appear to be of epidemic proportions here in Cohasset.

Over the years, we've covered Halloween melees on the town common, mass arrests at unsupervised house parties, and the breaking in and trashing of a private home, to name a few. These incidents all involved teenagers and alcohol.

Cohasset isn't alone. Kids and alcohol is a national problem and our children are part of a multi-billion dollar culture that promotes drinking as cool for the young.

In fact younger children can often remember more about the beer advertisements during the Super Bowl than what happened during the game itself.

In a neighboring town in just the past 12 months, we've had to cover two fatal accidents involving youths and alcohol. Talking to friends and family about this type of tragedy is one of the most difficult parts of a reporter's job.

Years back in Norwell, we had to cover a fatal crash only to learn the teen's parents rather than take the keys away after an earlier alcohol-related accident, had purchased their son a new car.

We applaud the School Committee and School Administration for sending up a red flag about the upcoming post-prom party this year. These annual events, which rather than "keep kids safe," have apparently turned into an environment in which drinking is condoned by some parents. Last year's party was rumored to include a "sober-up" room.

We are also pleased the Police Chief and Superintendent of Schools are drafting a Memorandum of Agreement which will help both the police department and school system deal with teen issues and illegal activity.

This is serious business. We are often amazed, though, at how many parents think "kids will be kids" and there is little one can do about teens and alcohol abuse.

While teens and driving never mix, alcohol can be a killer even when no car is involved. A family from Rhode Island used to sponsor a travelling play about their son, who became drunk at an underage party and choked to death on his own vomit. A young recovering alcoholic would play the role of Eddie while students at the high school where the play was being produced would play the other parts. A frank discussion with the student audience followed.

We understand the Social Host Law in Pennsylvania is based on a case in which an inebriated young man wandered into the street and was hit by a car.

We once covered the story of a young man who had too much to drink and put the beer glass in his pocket. He fell while walking home; the glass broke, cut an artery and he bled to death.

The following facts about drinking may be useful to teenagers and their parents. They come to us courtesy of the Hingham D.A.R.E. program:

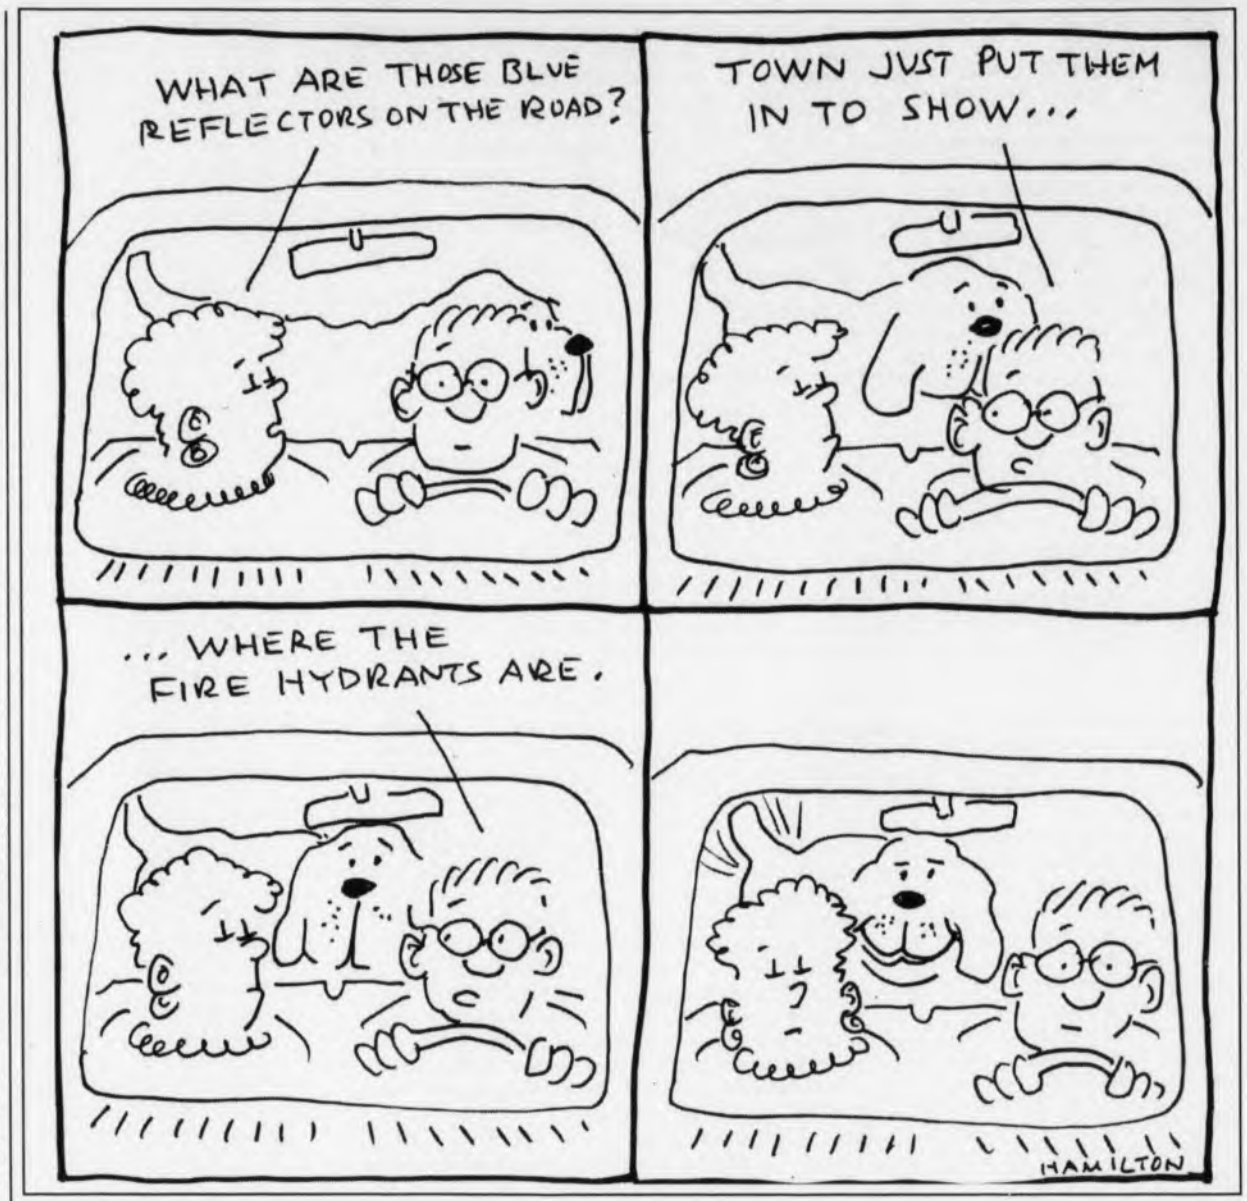
You may be arrested if you are under 21 and:

- Drinking an alcoholic beverage
- Carrying an alcoholic beverage
- Transporting alcohol in a vehicle
- Present at a house party when not accompanied by a parent, legal guardian or adults 21 or older
- A breath test or blood alcohol level of .02-.04 will result in loss of license for 180 days (6 months)
- In possession of a fake I.D.

A guilty conviction could be punishable by:

- Loss of license for 90 days
- $50 to $300 fine
- A criminal record
- Increase in auto insurance premiums

What happens when an underage person holds a house party and alcohol and other drugs are present?



- All people under 21 can be arrested
- Host can be charged also with disturbing the peace
- Parents of the host can also be charged with disturbing the peace
- Parents of the host can be sued if a person gets sick, hurt or gets injured after leaving the party, even if the parents were not aware of the party.

A person 21 or older who provides alcohol for minors is subject to criminal and civil liabilities.

- Providing alcohol to a child under 21 may be punished by imprisonment for six months and fines of $2,000.

Reading all this, parents and their teenage children need to ask themselves the question: Is underage drinking worth it?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Beholden to power groups

TO THE EDITOR:

It is disturbing to read that only one new person has taken out papers for elective office in Cohasset this year. (That was for a seat which would become vacant.)

We seem to be beholden to power groups that select candidates for office and not be citizens who create his/her small election committees, present ideas and background for the office.

This especially seems to be the problem with School Committee and Selectman offices. At least the School Committee incumbents declared they would not run, although it was sad that Chartis resigned. The Selectman incumbents have not said anything and are probably wondering if the so-called "power" on the board would shift if they did not run or are looking for a candidate to their liking.

There is a golden opportunity — even exciting.

The Selectmen will have a new Town Manager who is terrific. I knew him from the past, excellently qualified and very competent. We also have a new Police Chief who has helped us immeasurably. Isn't it a good time to be a Selectman and guide the town over rough tax waters? I thank Michael Buckley and Joe DeVito for their steady help in troubled times.

As to the School Committee, the job has changed due to the Education Reform Act. The budget process is still their responsibility. If the members returned to a zero-based budget and work with the excellent new superintendent problems are bound to ease. It is rewarding to help in the education of our children, the future of the country.

Candidates have to be their own persons and not kowtow to a special group. Remember when you are elected you serve the whole town, not yourself or your backers.

What the public doesn't see

TO THE EDITOR:

I happened to be in the Cohasset Police Station Garage on Wednesday, Jan. 12. There I saw a young, dedicated Cohasset Police Officer correctly installing an infant's Safety car seat in a young mother's SUV.

She had this beautiful child in arms. She was getting caring instructions as to how to use the belts etc.

It was a "beautiful picture."

Civility abandoned

TO THE EDITOR:

It's all too easy, for those who haven't themselves had to put up with the current viciousness, to counter the resignation of Chartis Tebbetts by sneering that elected officials should expect criticism and serve out their terms. But the discourse has descended to a low level, prompted by, but not excused by, the series of overrides. One would think that town officials, and particularly the school committee, were guilty of criminal negligence, to hear the bitter remarks of some residents that had seemed kindly, mature and understanding, and not small-minded. (It's no surprise to hear nonsense from people one seldom thinks of in such benevolent terms, they are conspicuously vocal at town meetings).

The recall article was soundly defeated, not because it is such a bad idea, but in part because the remarks of some proponents created an impression of destructive rather than constructive intent. The proposed amendment that the entire school committee resign was breathtakingly irresponsible, and didn't help the recall proposal, but it wasn't so far removed from the empty-headed comments that have become commonplace. Of course, the principal argument for recall (protecting us in the event that we elect a crook) seemed more ludicrous than vicious. People who have enjoyed living in a town with a civilized atmosphere aren't well disposed toward opportunistic fostering of even more disarray, even though the good and thoughtful people neglect to speak out for tolerance and understanding of the difficulties that beset the officials struggling to cope with today's environment.

The most recent selectmen's race was noteworthy for unprecedented disrespect for the town's officials, for the management of town affairs, and for just about everything else about the town. The extremism would have been more tolerable if it had not been accompanied by soufflé-like "solutions." Let us hope the next electoral race will display more maturity.

Chartis Tebbetts has a long record of unpaid but valuable service to the town, but she is but one of the many to whom we owe gratitude for the quality of our local institutions, and for the civility that has distinguished the conduct of our business.

Let us call a halt to the erosion of that civility.

HEALTH NOTES

Clarifying plans for Beechwood ballpark

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

We never wanted to put a wastewater treatment plant on the ballpark. We do want a way people can dispose of wastewater to eliminate nutrients from the water that runs off into Lily Pond, Bound Brook, Pegrams Brook and the reservoir.

Recently, there have been several phone calls to the Board of Health claiming that we want to use the Beechwood ballpark as a site for a sewer plant.

This misconception came from a letter we sent to the Selectmen suggesting that the future renovations for the Beechwood ballpark consider its use as a source for groundwater the discharge of effluent from any planned sewer plant which may, in the future be built to service homes in Beechwood. The Board envisioned that the DPW, or whoever was planning the work for the new field consider its possible use for groundwater discharge purposes as a part of its planning process. This would lead to discussions between the Board of Health, the Sewer Commission, the DPW and the Water Department regarding the design of the renovation of the field since all of these organizations and possibly others have responsibilities relating to the use of the field. The primary objective of this letter was to try to ensure that the field renovations result in a long lasting, easily maintained ballpark which will give the most benefit to the users in Beechwood.

It's no secret that the Board of Health believes that in addition to being responsible for the disposal of wastewater, we wish to promote the most environmentally friendly use of our land and open space. Recently, there has been a change in turf management practices which have had a strong effect on large open spaces devoted to lawns and open spaces. This has affected the way golf courses, ballparks, and other large areas of greensward are planned and maintained.

In many towns, there is a lack of fresh water for sprinkling and irrigation, and turf management is particularly difficult where open green areas like the common need to be watered. Cohasset water consumption is not a problem, thanks to those who plan and maintain our pond fed water supply. But contaminants from too much fertilizer are a real problem for almost every body of water in Town either salt or fresh.

In freshwater bodies such as Lily Pond, our drinking water is contaminated from trihalomethanes which are the byproduct of too

The case to continue Greenbush opposition

GREENBUSH VIEW

MARTHA A. R. BEWICK

There is still $310 million remaining unspent in the MBTA FY05-FY10 budget for Greenbush, according to the MBTA's Capital Investment Budget. Spending it on Greenbush would compound a fiscal and environmental folly.

Advocates for Transportation Alternatives (AfTA) filed suit in Federal District Court in Washington, D.C. last week, laying out the chronicle of negative impacts the Greenbush diesel rail project will have on our towns, and challenging the Army Corps of Engineers' "Finding of No Significant Impact" (FONSI) for Greenbush.

AfTA's complaint calls for the Army Corps to go back to the drawing board, and to undertake a full federal Environmental Impact Report, the same federal scrutiny given to the Old Colony Plymouth and Middleborough lines — lines where there were far fewer adverse impacts.

We still believe what we have been saying and writing for years: "Greenbush is the most fiscally irresponsible, environmentally damaging, and destructive transit alternative of any to have been suggested for the South Shore." Giving up now means that we accept the long-term damage that diesel rail construction and operations will bring to our towns over the next 25 years.

There is still $310 million remaining unspent in the MBTA FY05-FY10 budget for Greenbush, according to the MBTA's Capital Investment Budget. Spending it on Greenbush would compound a fiscal and environmental folly. These funds can be far better allocated to the urban transit projects in Somerville, Lynn and Dorchester, for which there is intense demand. Used to match federal funds, former Greenbush state-funded dollars will be able to stretch much further.

During the historic review process by the Corps, with the Massachusetts Historic Commission, and the National Trust for Historic Preservation, the MBTA was finally forced to lay out the extent of the adverse impacts of Greenbush on 2,780 homes in the 35 historic districts in the five towns along the track right-of-way. The original T draft had identified only three of these historic properties. The Corps, the National Trust, and the Historic Commission even went so far to say in their findings, that the operation of the diesel trains in the historic neighborhoods "will have a 'per se' adverse impact on the entire district, without regard to any of the direct noise, vibration, visual, or traffic impacts."

The FONSI is mostly cut and pasted MBTA documents, with inserts of words and occasional new sentences here are there. It includes the same erroneous data, erroneous assumptions, inflated arguments we've heard and challenged for years.

Within the FONSI, there are undeniable chronicles of permanent negative harm to our towns. Here are some of them. The Corps FONSI acknowledges construction impacts, and suggests that "permanent project impacts" will be of greater significance than what has already been experienced: "These negative effects (of construction) can be substantially reduced through certain construction methods and procedures, and as a result, these impacts are of much lower significance than other, permanent project impacts." We should not have to live with (and pay for!) the consequences of the MBTA's ill-advised choice of design/build for this highly complex and controversial diesel rail project.

The Corps FONSI clearly outlines negative impacts facing the 2,780 historic homes in the 35 historic districts in our towns: "The project will create noise, vibration, and visual impacts that will adversely affect individual properties and National Register listed or eligible districts in the towns of Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate. The integrity of the properties' setting and feeling through the introduction of visible, audible, and atmospheric elements that are out of character with the properties will be altered; thereby diminishing the integrity of these properties. Effects in all the towns will be caused by vibration, noise, access and visual factors associated with stations, crossings, and roadway improvements." (FONSI, pp. 44-45)

Contrary to those who argue for Greenbush as an economic development stimulus, the FONSI says: "Empirical evidence from previous commuter rail investments demonstrates that there will be no significant development impacts, measured in terms of new housing units or additional commercial development that is casually related to the proposed project."

Missing from the FONSI is what the Environmental Protection Agency, a fellow federal agency, said five years ago, in 1999: "given the overall increases of smog-forming nitrogen oxide emissions resulting from the diesel-fueled trains, we can no longer view this project as an unqualified air quality improvement project." The EPA recognized the impacts of Greenbush on the local communities and advised that a federal FEIR be undertaken.

Also missing from the FONSI are recent comments by the Massachusetts Division of Environmental Protection. MDEP says in its 401 Water Quality Variance on Greenbush that Greenbush itself may not meet the state's NOx (nitrogen oxide) goals, and that the MBTA may need other projects to provide "emissions offsets." This is, at long last, a state acknowledgement of the negative air emissions effects of Greenbush.

Admissions about air quality deterioration, negative construction and operations impacts on historic districts, permanent negative effects on wetlands, water supply, endangered species and habitats, traffic and congestion, and so many other non-FONSI issues, such MBTA finances and service cutbacks, compelled AfTA President John Bewick to say: "Giving up now is like the Red Sox giving up after the third game in the playoffs against the Yankees."

We firmly believe those in Washington who can take the broader hard look at this project will draw the same conclusion again, that Greenbush requires a full federal FEIR.

Failure to take this action will guarantee that Greenbush will be built. Support for AfTA's challenge will give us all a chance that Greenbush will not be built. This is a winnable battle. Greenbush, in spite of pronouncements from on high and construction below, is not a done deal. For many of us, that is a chance worth taking and supporting financially. Join AfTA's suit for a fair federal hearing for our towns, and send your tax deductible contributions for the federal challenge to AfTA, 165 Beal Street, Hingham MA 02043 today.

Having fun at Harvard

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The last time I was directly involved with Harvard University it involved a pub called Cronin's and a passel of students who were housemates of, or otherwise acquainted with, a fellow student known as the Agha Khan.

I was doing a story on him at the time and the kids seemed to be having fun as they told me Agha anecdotes, possibly because I was buying the draft beer on expense account and everyone knows booze mounts more swiftly to one's head when it's free.

I recalled that day in Cronin's and the fun my student companions were enjoying the other day when I learned that Harvard had hired a fun-loving 2004 graduate to teach the underclassmen and women he left behind how to have fun.

Zac Corker, 23, who apparently trained for the job at a party last November in Allston that attracted the attention and presence of Boston police, will be charged with developing programs that will help nerds to enter the Harvard social whirl. In other words, he'll be "a fun czar."

Good. Maybe now Playboy will be removed from its plain brown wrapper and take its place proudly alongside the New England Medical Journal on the magazine rack at the Widener Library.

Zac also has a web site, www.hahvadparties.com, which he started up to protect students' right to party and contains such useful party tips as how to tap a keg and how to unhook a bra, presumably with one hand while the other holds a flagon of lager.

How times have changed! When I was young and ice covered most of the campus even the greenest freshman knew how to tap a keg before he donned his first beanie and bras didn't need to be unhooked because they probably had already been burned.

The signing of Zac Corker to a nine month deal must mean that Harvard is taking at least tentative steps to restore some of the glory that has been slipping away from the "little prep school across the river," as it used to be called at BU.

Just think, Harvard, which used to school presidents, hasn't had one in nearly 50 years, while the last three got their degrees from Yale and the one before that went to a college called Eureka. My friends tell me one can have fun at Yale but I don't known about Eureka.

The Fight Fiercelies once had a football team that competed annually for the national championship. Of course, the only other teams were at Yale and Princeton. But once it becomes known that it's possible to have fun at Harvard, can 300-pound tackles and 4.5 running backs be far behind?

Who knows? Maybe under the tutelage of Professor Zac Corker, Harvard will displace Florida State as best party college and the man from Playboy will come around to snap the women of the Ivy League.

Classical music speaks to all

H*S* OVATION

NINA WELLFORD

Many classical concert-goers just know that they love music. They find that sitting in an intimate concert hall, listening to outstanding professional musicians perform music with passion and skill, lets them give in and let go.

Whenever I mention to someone that I work as the Managing Director of a professional symphony orchestra, nine times out of 10 they say, "Oh! That must be wonderful! Of course, I don't know anything about classical music, but — And I always respond, 'Well, neither did I, but I certainly have learned a lot.'"

Many people think that the audience for classical music concerts consists of people over the age of 60, who can hum along with classical music on the radio, who prefer to waltz and foxtrot, who certainly know the difference between Bach and Beethoven, and who might even have a favorite composer. People always assume that everyone else at the concert "knows" more than they do about instruments and orchestras and the music that they perform.

My experience over the last seven years has poked holes in this preconception. While we are pleased to count a core of sophisticated listeners as regular audience members, in fact, the audience for classical music is changing rapidly. We at the Hingham Symphony Orchestra are happy to facilitate that change. Consider this:

I've learned that, with the rare exception, most classical concert-goers consider themselves only somewhat knowledgeable about the music they are hearing, and casual listeners, rather than critical listeners, dominate the audience base.

These days, the audience is as likely to contain aging baby boomers who grew up on rock and roll (the originals, not as classic hits). Many classical concert-goers just know that they love music. They find that sitting in an intimate concert hall, listening to outstanding professional musicians perform music with passion and skill, lets them give in and let go. It takes them out of the day-to-day, and connects them to something bigger and deeper. At an HSO concert, the venues are small. Every seat is a good seat: you can watch each musician as they play what you hear. You don't need to "know." You can let yourself just get involved in the music. A concert can be a welcome break, or even lead to revelation.

Many in the audience would really like to know more. It's fun and challenging to learn about this music that has been evolving for over 400 years. At the HSO, we help you learn, and have fun while doing it.

Before many concerts, Music Director and Conductor Jin Kim gives a talk, handing you musical keys to the piece about to be performed. Each concert program book contains program notes, written by acclaimed annotator Steven Ledbetter. In plain English, they place the music into historical context, and point to what the composer was thinking when he wrote the piece. If you become a member of the HSO, we will even mail you the program notes before the concert. But, as Jin Kim has often told me when I ask him for a description to place in pre-concert publicity, "The best description is your own. Listen to the music, and tell me what you hear." (FYI, I'm not there yet — what you read still comes from the "experts" like Jin.)

Some of us played an instrument way back in high school, and might occasionally still pick up a guitar or sit at the piano. But many are now encouraging their children or grandchildren to play, knowing that those who get involved in music will likely develop a lifelong love, not to mention those intellectual and organizational skills that are proven side-effects of playing an instrument.

The upcoming Discovery Concert, plus the programs like the KidsConcerts that the HSO brings into schools, help us develop those eager young listeners. When young people can see musicians who obviously adore what they do, and yet who are not that much older than they are — a magical thing happens. I have heard from countless parents who tell me that after coming to a Discovery Concert, their child decided that she or he HAD to play the cello, or the trumpet, or the drums.

The Discovery Concert synthesizes all that we do at the HSO. Jin Kim speaks from the stage, leading audience of all ages on a guided tour of the music. Guest musicians include students from the Hingham High School Chamber Orchestra, who play side-by-side with HSO musicians for several pieces, after a master class with Jin at school. And, in true jazz form, HSO musicians "sit in" and jam with students from the Gates Middle School Jazz Band from Scituate. Then, during the Instrument Showcase, the audience can meet the musicians and ask any question that you ever had about their instrument, what it's like to be a musician, how they make that certain sound. At every HSO concert, we try to break down the barriers between musicians and the audience. The Discovery Concert lets you get even closer.

Finally, I have found that many people initially go to classical concerts because someone else asked them to (remember, only about half the people there actually bought the tickets). But most return because they found something that satisfied them. We are a community built around music. As I think you can see, people should not stay away from classical music concerts because they feel intimidated — whether by the music or the rest of the audience. We are all in this concert hall together — each taking our own meaning from this timeless music. Join us, won't you?

The HSO performs its annual Discovery Concert this Saturday, Jan. 22 at 4 p.m., at Chapman Middle School, 1051 Commercial Street, Weymouth. Great for all ages, and a great way to start.

LIBRARY CORNER

Drop-In Story —Drop-In Story Time is for all ages and communities. It lasts for 30 minutes and does not require registration. This is a lapsit program for children and caregivers. Monday, Jan. 24, and 31, at 10:30 a.m. or 1:30 p.m.; Monday, Feb. 7, and 14, at 10:30 a.m. or 1:30 p.m.

Story & Craft —Story & Craft is a four-week program for Cohasset residents ages 3-6. It lasts one hour and requires pre-registration. Telephone or walk in registrations are now being accepted, 781-383-1348. Workshops are Thursday, Jan. 27, at 10 a.m. or 1 p.m.; Thursday, Feb. 3, 10, and 17, at 10 a.m. or 1 p.m. Space still available in the morning session.

Saturday Storyteller — On Saturday, Jan. 22, from 10 to 11:30 a.m., "Helping Children Have Success Now - A Community Partnership for Children - is sponsoring a story and craft time with storyteller Diana Kane, in the Meeting Room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This is for all preschool-age children and their families. Information about programs will also be available. This event is funded by the Massachusetts Department of Education. No registration required.

Pizza and Books —The Pizza and Books group will meet on Tuesday, Feb. 8, from 5:30 to 7 p.m. Pizza will be served at 5:30 in the Community Room and the book discussion will begin at 6 p.m. in the Young Adult Room. This month's book selection is, "Leon and the Spitting Image" by Allen Kurzweil. Call now to reserve your place. This group is open to students ages 10-13 and is facilitated by Barbara Mullin. To place a hold on this book go to www.cohassetlibrary.org and click on catalog or call Mrs. Moody for help.

Book Discussion Group Join the group Friday, Jan. 28, at 10 a.m. for its first meeting. For discussion will be the New York Times bestseller, "Reading Lolita in Tehran: a Memoir in Books," by Azar Nafisi. Sign up in advance is required. Call Judy Simons at 781-383-1348 or sign-up on-line. Click on the January Events Calendar on the Web site www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Author Coffee Cohasset author Susan Playfair will discuss her book "Vanishing Species: Saving the Fish, Sacrificing the Fisherman" Tuesday Jan. 25, at 10 a.m. in the Meeting Room. "Vanishing Species" offers a series of unforgettable portraits of people who are involved in the struggle to find a way to support sustainable fishing and the communities that rely on it. Refreshments will be served.

Homebound Delivery Service If you love to read but are unable to come to the library due to an illness or disability, the library offer a home delivery service. For those interested, a volunteer from the Friends of the Cohasset Library will visit you at your residence to discuss your reading preferences and take your requests for library materials. Selections will be delivered to you and picked up and returned to the library on a regular schedule. If you, or anyone you know, might be interested in this program, telephone the library at 781 383-1348.

Independent Film Series The film "Wolves in the Snow" will be shown Feb. 10 at 7 p.m. in the Meeting Room. The film is an intense drama set against the backdrop of Montreal. Admission and refreshments are free.

Art Exhibition Pam Golden's Extincathon Series/Assemblage Sculptures are on display at the library through Feb. 28. Golden is a Marshfield sculptor who works from her studio in Rockland. She is also the art director at the Inly School in Scituate.

POLITICAL NOTES

Friday Night at the Movies

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee's popular Friday Night at the Movies series continues on Friday, Jan. 28 with the screening of "Uncovered: The Whole Truth About the Iraq War", the popular and provocative documentary directed by Robert Greenwald. As always, all interested movie goers are invited. Admission is free and the conversation is lively! Join the Cohasset Democrats next Friday night at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. The doors open at 6:30p.m.. For more information, check the web site at cohassetdems.or, or call Agnes McCann, Chairman, at 383-0222.

Democrats to hold caucus

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will hold a caucus at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Jan. 29, at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, to elect delegates to the 2005 state convention of the Massachusetts Democratic Party to be held at the Paul Tsongas Arena in Lowell on Saturday, May 14.

All registered democrats are invited to attend. For more information, check the web site at cohassetdems.org, or call Agnes McCann, Chairman, at 383-0222

HEALTH NOTES

Plans for Beechwood ballpark

many nutrients dissolved in the water. These nutrients come from three major sources: natural plant decay from the wetlands surrounding our freshwater ponds, old septic systems and cess pools which have not been upgraded to modern standards, and runoff of fertilizers from lawns which use too many fertilizers. So, nature provides the swamps and wetlands around our water bodies, but people have control of septic systems and lawn fertilizers. If fertilizers and septic systems were operated using modern management practices we probably wouldn't have a trihalomethane problem and we'd vastly reduce the algae and invasive plant problems in Lily Pond and the Aaron River reservoir.

And the Beechwood ballpark seems to be one of the battlegrounds for the fight against pollution which our growing population is waging in Cohasset. We never wanted to put a wastewater treatment plant on the ballpark. We do want a way people can dispose of wastewater to eliminate nutrients from the water that runs off into Lily Pond, Bound Brook, Pegrams Brook and the reservoir. Good planning at the Beechwood ballpark restoration is one of the ways we can help.

In the next few weeks, the Board of Health is planning to hold a public meeting with speakers to explain the benefits of good turf management practices and advanced wastewater treatment. You'll be surprised at what will be presented.

For example, a well-run wastewater plant can send out an effluent stream of water which can be purer than federal and state regulations require for drinking water. Such effluent streams have been approved by the state for use as irrigation, and other uses requiring pure water.

In Cohasset we have a regulation which could be applied to the Beechwood ballpark if, for example, it were irrigated by lawn sprinklers using pure fresh water effluent approved for reuse. The regulation could stipulate income to the neighborhood from such use. If the wastewater treatment plant providing such effluent were some distance from the ballpark, (its location has not even been considered, much less planned) homes abutting the pipe might be able to use the water for irrigation of their lawns. So, there is much to gain from proper planning for the Beechwood ballpark, and much to lose if we don't.

Office seekers papers ready

Nomination papers for the Annual Town Election for 2005 will be available on Monday, Jan. 3, at the Town Clerk's Office. The last day to take out nomination papers will be Friday, Feb. 18. In order to hold an elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. Please note that you are not running for office until you take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies your signatures.

Positions available for 2005 Town Election

- Selectmen — TWO for three years
- Moderator — ONE for three years
- Town Clerk — ONE for three years
- School Committee — ONE for three years
- Trustees Paul Pratt Memorial Library — THREE for three years
- Assessor — ONE for three years
- Board of Health — ONE for three years
- Cohasset Housing Authority — ONE for five years
- Planning Board — ONE for five years
- Recreation Commission — ONE for five years
- Sewer Commission — ONE for three years
- Water Commission — ONE for three years

To date, these residents have taken out papers for the following positions. Roger Lowe and Sheila Evans, Trustees for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library; Mary Granville, Board of Assessors; George Marlette, Moderator; Ray Kasperowicz, Sewer Commission; Robin Lawrence, Board of Health; Stuart Ivimey, Planning Board.

Reflectors show hydrant locations during nighttime

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Blue reflectors, like the one on Pond Street by the middle-high school, are being installed around town to help firefighters find the hydrants.

Driving at night in Cohasset has become a colorful experience, as small blue reflectors have started popping up all over the main streets. While they might add a decorative touch to an otherwise bland streetscape, the reflectors are actually there to help members of the fire department better locate hydrants at night.

Glenn Pratt, Vice Chairman of the Cohasset Water Department, said his department has installed roughly 200 blue reflectors in the streets, as part of an initiative his department has begun to better help the fire department with hydrant location. He said the blue reflectors in Cohasset streets are the same as the orange reflectors often seen on state and federal interstate highways.

There are 420 hydrants in town, and the first phase of the Water Department project will be to mark the main traffic roads, which are defined as those painted with a yellow center line. Pratt said all ongoing Water Department projects moving forward will also include installation of the reflectors, and it is expected all Department of Public Works repaving projects will include installation of reflectors as well.

In addition, Pratt said the Water Department will be continuing its aggressive distribution system upgrades over the next six years, and all those projects will include reflector installations. "In the spring, we plan to add additional reflectors on the smaller less traveled roads," he said.

Pratt said over the past few years, the Water Department has been working in many ways to assist the fire department in quick, efficient hydrant location at night. Last year, the Water Department purchased a laptop computer programmed with a GIS map, which it gave to the fire department. The computer can be operated from any truck, and can map the location of all fire hydrants within 600 feet of an incident address. In addition, "We have recently completed the repainting of our hydrants so they each have a reflective white top, for quicker locating at night," he said.

In addition, some hydrants are currently outfitted with "flags" which help the fire department locate them in heavy snow. Pratt said it is expected the reflectors will one day replace all the snow flags.

The Water Department expects to spend roughly $4,500 on reflector installation during this phase of the project, which includes all main roads, which will be roughly 150 units when done. The remaining reflectors will be installed during the summer, which will most likely cost another $3,500.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

The official list from the state treasurer's office of "per diems" collected by state legislators in 2004 for "mileage, meals and lodging" expenses reveals that through December 31, lawmakers have collected a total of $600,167 in reimbursements. Per diems are the travel expenses that state senators and representatives are allowed to collect "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse." The 2004 statistics indicate that legislators received annual reimbursements ranging from $270 to $14,850 and that 41 legislators have so far chosen not to apply for any reimbursement. These figures are not necessarily the final ones for 2004. State law does not establish a filing deadline that legislators must meet in order to collect the per diems. Critics say that some legislators will wait several more months into 2005 before they file for additional per diems from 2004 in order to avoid having their full reimbursement amounts appear on any list released by the state treasurer's office in January.

The amount of the per diem allowed varies based on the city or town in which a legislator resides and its distance from the Statehouse. These reimbursements are not taxable and range from $10 per day for legislators who reside in the greater Boston area to $82 for Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 for those in Nantucket. Legislators who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often are the ones that collect the highest total of annual per diems.

The Legislature approved, as part of the state budget in 2000, a provision doubling these per diems to the current amounts. Supporters of the hikes said that the per diems had not been raised for many years despite the rising costs of travel, food and lodging. Some opponents said that the hikes were excessive while others argued that the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous. They noted that other state workers and most private workers and are not paid additional money for commuting.

The Legislature in 2000 also doubled from $3,600 per year to $7,200 per year an additional flat rate, annual general expense allowance paid to each legislator. This separate expense allowance is not based on a lawmaker's geographical distance from the Statehouse. Legislators are issued a 1099 from the state and are required to report the $7,200 as income. Supporters of this increase noted that this allowance is often used to maintain district offices and to pay for other district expenses including contributions to local civic groups and the printing and mailing of newsletters. They argued that the hike was necessary because the recent voter-approved Clean Elections Law that provided public funding of campaigns for legislators that agree to strict fundraising and spending limits would make it more difficult for incumbent Clean Elections candidates to use the limited campaign funds for these district purposes. These same supporters say today that despite the repeal of the Clean Elections Law by the Legislature in 2003, the expense allowance hikes are still justified because of the rising costs of maintaining district offices and other expenses directly related to their jobs as state legislators. Critics say the expense allowance hikes were not justified in the first place and certainly should have been repealed when the Clean Elections Law was scuttled. They also note that legislators are not required to submit an accounting of how they spend the $7,200.

The House and Senate did not hold a separate roll call vote directly on the doubling of the per diem or the general expense allowance. Both were included as a small section of the comprehensive $21.5 billion fiscal 2001 state budget that was approved on roll call votes by both branches.

Lawmakers recently receive an automatic 4.1 percent annual pay raise for 2005 and 2006. The hike will increase current rank and file members' $53,380.80 annual salaries to $55,569.41. All 40 senators and many representatives also receive additional stipends mostly ranging from $7500 to $15,000 if they serve as committee chairs or in other leadership positions. Governor Mitt Romney is required to establish the raise under the terms of a constitutional amendment approved by the voters in 1998. The amendment requires legislative salaries to be increased or decreased biennially at the same rate as the state's median household income for the preceding two-year period— as ascertained by the governor.

LOCAL LEGISLATORS' PER DIEMS FOR 2004

The number of days next to the representative or senator's name represents the number of days in 2004 that the legislator certified to the state treasurer that he or she was at the Statehouse. The dollar figure in parentheses represents the total dollar amount of per diems that the legislator has received for 2004.

The Top Ten list of legislators who have received the highest total of per diems in 2004 include Rep. Peter J. Larkin (D-Pittsfield) $14,850; Rep. Daniel E. Bosley (D-North Adams) $12,780; former Rep. Christopher P. Asselin (D-Springfield) $11,640; Rep. William Pignatelli (D-Lenox) $10,800; Rep. Peter V. Kocot (D-Northampton) $8,712; Rep. Benjamin Swan (D-Springfield) $8,280; Rep. Antonio Cabral (D-New Bedford) $8,190; Sen. Michael R. Knapik (R-Westfield) $7,920; Rep. John P. Fresolo (D-Worcester) $7,848 and Sen. Stephen J. Buoniconti (D-West Springfield) $7,788. Buoniconti collected the per diems when he was a representative in 2004.

Health Board chairman unhappy with engineering firm

Wants service put out to bid

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Health Board Chairman Steve Bobo is calling for an investigation and possibly an audit of the practices of the Sewer Commission's engineering consultants — Tutela Engineering Associates, Inc.

Bobo believes Tutela, which was hired to give its professional opinion on Cohasset's wastewater situation and compile information to submit to the state, has purposefully withheld information from the state which was provided by the Board of Health to ensure sewers are judged as the only option to release the town from the Second Amended Final Judgment. The Judgment is a state order which has required the town to clean up pollution in the Little Harbor area. Tutela would likely be hired to complete the Little Harbor sewer project, and therefore Bobo believes the company has augmented "the scope of the sewer in Cohasset at the town's expense," for its own personal gain.

However, in a telephone interview Thursday, Daniel Coughlin, Senior Project Manager for Tutela, said his company compiled an elaborate submission for the town, and the information was presented at a meeting Bobo attended before it was submitted to the state in October.

"It was very comprehensive and demonstrated the town's stance," he said, adding the town had plenty of time to review the information and make comments or suggestions. "I didn't see many holes in it," said Coughlin, but added if there was any more information the town wanted, he would have welcomed its inclusion. However, he said from the time the information was submitted until this week, it has been sitting in boxes in the Selectmen's office.

Coughlin also said he doesn't think there is any value to Bobo's comment that Tutela is augmenting the scope of the project, adding the Sewer Commission directs all the work the company does. "We don't set policy," he said, adding there is often disagreement between the board and the company on the direction the town should take for various projects. In addition, he said there is no guarantee Tutela will be chosen to engineer the Little Harbor sewer project .

Voters at the December Special Town Meeting approved adding a sewering schedule to the Judgment, which when incorporated is believed to formalize the town's commitment to the project. According to Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, the Judgment was handed down by the state as a means of implementing the Clean Waters Act. In 1979, a complaint was filed alleging violation of the Act, and the town reached an agreement with the state to supply modern wastewater treatment. As part of the settlement, the town consented to enter the Judgment. Since then the town has been working on a plan to clean up the waters in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue area of town.

Residents in the Little Harbor area have been waiting for sewer to be extended to their neighborhoods for years, in the hopes of evading mandatory inspections and upgrades of on-site systems. With a set plan and sewer connections on the way, homeowners in the area would be given amnesty from upgrading sewer systems, regardless of whether they intend to sell.

Members of the Board of Health, Sewer Commission, and Board of Selectmen were slated to attend a meeting in Boston with the DEP today (Jan. 21) to discuss incorporating a sewering schedule into the Judgment.

At the Thursday, Jan. 13 strategy session for that meeting, Bobo recalled Coughlin claimed the town has not met the requirements of the Judgment. However, Bobo said not only does Town Counsel Paul DeRensis believe the town is in compliance because it has a Wastewater Management Plan which was accepted by the state, but this summer, Madelyn Morris of the DEP stated in a letter to the town that at that point, it had met 95 percent of the Judgment's requirements.

However, Coughlin said in his opinion, whether the town has met the requirements of the Judgment is "something for Town Counsel to deal with."

Bobo said he believes Tutela has a pattern of consistently taking advantage of the town, and the problem continues to get worse as the contract it holds is never put out to bid.

Bobo said Little Harbor is no worse off in terms of pollution that it was 15 years ago.

Selectman Fred Koed said it is his understanding that engineering work is exempt from being required to go out to bid. However, Selectman Rob Spofford said under prudent business practices, the contract should be put out to bid every few years. He added in light of Bobo's comments, the town needs make sure it feels confident coming before the state with reports Tutela compiled, and if it doesn't, a third party independent engineer needs to be brought in immediately to review what has been submitted.

However, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he would be very careful about making allegations because it is not in the town's best interest to come before the state without being united. He also said because the town just voted to incorporate the sewer schedule into the Judgment, he doesn't see the need to pursue questioning whether incorporating it into the Judgment is the best option for the town. "Why do we continue to struggle with this? I don't understand," he said.

Spofford said he doesn't understand why anyone would welcome litigation from the state, and incorporating a schedule which the town will have to abide by, regardless of whether it has the money to complete the project or not, could put the town at risk to face fines which could be as much as $10,000 per day. In addition, the town has no monetary figures for how much sewering that area of town will cost, and people are still willing to blindly support it, he said.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris reminded the board that as part of the Judgment the town has already completed sewering projects in the town's North Cohasset sewer district. "That project was two years behind and we had to ask, 'Please don't fine us.' Do we always want to put ourselves in that kind of jeopardy?" she said. In addition, McMorris said in Town Counsel's opinion, the article to incorporate the schedule was illegal, and the vote taken was only to get a sense of the meeting.

Bobo said comments made on the floor of Town Meeting, which stated the town's fecal coliform levels were much too high is not true. He said Little Harbor is no worse off in terms of pollution that it was 15 years ago. "We are one of the few towns in the Commonwealth with a stormwater plan," he said, and sewering may not be the only alternative for Little Harbor.

Spofford requested the board enter into executive session at the end of the regularly scheduled meeting to discuss strategy for the meeting further. He said as a result of a comment made at the Jan. 13 meeting, he had conducted some research and had information he wanted to share with the group which could affect the outcome of the Jan. 21 meeting.

Billing

In addition to withholding information, Bobo believes Tutela has "consistently taken advantage of the town by submitting invoices for unnecessary make-work and expensive report preparations well as superficial oversight, resulting in high costs and excessive billings for services. In addition, I have been informed that because of no-bid contract practices proposed by Tutela and unknowingly sanctioned by the Sewer Commission, competitive bidding for sewer work has not regularly been used," he said.

According to town records, between FY95 and FY04, Tutela was paid $8,391,052 by the town. Boards which used the services of the company included the Sewer Commission, Water Commission, and Board of Selectmen. While the Sewer and Water Commissions have utilized the company's expertise every year, selectmen did not use its services in fiscal years 1995, 1996, 2002, 2003,or 2004.

During those years the town installed the North Cohasset sewers and expanded the Central District, including upgrading the treatment plant. The Water Department also replaced aging water mains to upgrade the system and built a new standpipe.

Of those 10 fiscal years, the Sewer Commission paid $5,225,223 for Tutela's services, while the Water Commission paid $2,944,555 and the Board of Selectmen paid $221,275. The Sewer Commission's highest expenditure was $1,137,891 in FY00. In FY04, the Sewer Commission paid $180,236, while the Water Commission paid $704,648.

At the Special Town Meeting, voters approved paying an unpaid bill to Tutela for $18,178. The bill included services provided between May and July of both 2003 and 2004 and breaks down as follows:

- The May 4 through May 31, 2003 invoice totals $3,244. Costs include Zenon upgrade set-up, off loading, and scheduling, as well as chemical cleaning placement and installation.
- From June through July of 2003, items included coordinating letters to the Department of Environmental Protection regarding Interon as well as various coordination of Interon related-items, project status reports for the Elm Street wastewater plant, and providing flow information for various areas around town. Costs for that period total $3,240.
- The invoice for May1 through May 29, 2004 is for $4,090 and includes hours for assembling Board of Health testing information and analyzing Lily Pond sampling reports, coordinating railroad sleeve information with Town Manager Michael Buckley, and discussions and e-mails relating to Interon problems. The board was also billed for two hours for a review of the Provincetown bylaws, which would have dealt with the Home Rule Petition article the board was slated to include on the Special Town Meeting Warrant.
- The invoice from May 3 through July 3, 2004 totals $7,603 and most of the charges involve Tutela Senior Project Consultant Daniel Coughlin's work on Town Meeting Warrant articles. Fourteen hours were billed for research and drafting of by-law and Home Rule Petition language. Six hours were billed for meeting preparation and meetings with Town Counsel regarding the Home Rule Petition and bylaw review. At least 10 hours were billed for reviewing Town Counsel's revisions to the Home Rule Petition and bylaw.
- In addition, Tutela billed five hours for reviewing a US Filter contract amendment, and an additional two hours for a contract amendment back-up. Tutela also charged for three hours to review letters to be sent to Cohasset residents not connected to the town's municipal sewer system.

Water Commission compiles list of water filters

The Water Commission has compiled a list of home water filters certified to remove Total Trihalomethanes (TTHMs) from tap water.

"We have listed many makes and models of home water filters which are certified by NSF International to remove Trihalomethanes," said Water Commissioner Nathaniel Palmer. "This list is available at http://www.cohassetwater.org or can be picked-up in hard copy at the Lily Pond Water Treatment Plant, 339 King Street."

"We have also arranged with Cohasset Hardware to sell water filters certified to remove TTHMs," said Palmer. "Contact Cohasset Hardware directly for more information or to purchase a water filter."

"We urge consumers, before they purchase a home water filter, to verify that the filter is certified to remove TTHMs," said John McNabb, Chairman of the Water Commission. "We would also like to assure Cohasset residents that we are working hard to reduce TTHM levels to comply with state regulations as soon as possible."

"We have also arranged with Cohasset Hardware to sell water filters certified to remove TTHMs."

— Nathaniel Palmer, Water Commission

The Water Commission also suggested that before purchasing a water filter, a consumer should check the NSF web page — www.nsf.org/Certified/DWTU to see if the filter is verified to remove TTHMs.

NSF International (The Public Health and Safety Company) is a not-for-profit, non-governmental organization, focused on standards development, product certification, education, and risk-management for public health and safety. NSF has developed a comprehensive set of standards and evaluation criteria for assessing the ability water filters to sufficiently remove contaminants, including TTHMs.

Archbishop Sean O'Malley celebrates the Mass at St. Anthony's Church which was decorated with dozens of white poinsettias.

Archbishop Sean O'Malley visits St. Anthony's Church

number of unwilling newcomers from neighboring Scituate, who won't give up to fight to save their church, St. Frances Xavier Cabrini — one of 80 parishes closed in recent months as part of a reconfiguration plan in the Boston Archdiocese.

"I did enjoy the Mass," Dorothy Creutz emphatically said on her way out of the service. "But now I'm going back to my own church."

But Scituate residents — Christine Kane, accompanied by her son, Kevin, 9, and her mother, Patti Litz — stayed to have a word with O'Malley at the informal reception following the service at St. Anthony's Parish Hall.

"While we have been feeling very welcome at St. Anthony's," Kane said, "we want to ask the Archbishop to reconsider and keep us open.

"As our leader, it is important that he hears what we have to say."

Barbara Nappa is also helping to maintain a 24-hour vigil at St. Frances. She and the other Scituate parishioners wore pins featuring either a picture of the St. Frances Church building or a dove that arrived at the church before it closed and has become a sign to the parishioners that the church is meant to stay open.

"The Archbishop's homily was beautiful," Nappa said. "It is wonderful to welcome us to St. Anthony's but this is not our church. I want to invite him to visit St. Frances and it is worth a try."

While O'Malley was very approachable to the many waiting in line at the reception, he didn't appear to be willing to budge off of his decision to close St. Frances.

"It is good to be here," O'Malley said. "We know transition is difficult but are happy so many have begun to find their spiritual home here."

In a letter to sent to St. Frances last spring explaining the church closings, O'Malley cited population changes, movement of people from the cities to the suburbs, the shortage of priests and decrease in the number of active Catholics as factors contributing to the decision to close parishes. He stated one-third of the archdiocese's parishes are operating in the red and said the reconfigurations are not a result of a need to pay legal settlements stemming from the clergy abuse scandal. He said funds gained by parish closings will be used to help support those parishes and schools remaining open.

With 1,000 families and an average of 804 parishioners attending weekend Masses at St. Frances, the archdiocese felt St. Mary the Nativity Church in Scituate Harbor and Cohasset's St. Anthony's could absorb the St. Frances parishioners.

On Sunday O'Malley noted St. Anthony's was large enough to accommodate the extra parishioners. He described Cohasset as a lovely, beautiful town.

The Rev. Matthew Bradley of the Foyer of Charity, a retreat center on Hollett Street in Scituate, said he was glad O'Malley came to Cohasset and that the parishioners were clearly delighted to see the Archbishop.

"But I hope his contacts with St. Frances Parish give him a more complete perspective on what is at play there in dispersing the community," he said.

The Rev. John Mulvehill, St. Anthony's pastor, said due to the Martin Luther King Jr. Day holiday weekend, a lot of the regular parishioners were away skiing. He said the church has a capacity of 750. Before Christmas roughly 600 more people attended liturgies than is past years. He said St. Anthony's can accommodate the extra people and has not had to add masses.

In an interview Tuesday, Mulvehill said the Archbishop made a wonderful homily and noted he thanked St. Anthony's for welcoming those from St. Frances to the parish.

"I'm sure he feels the pain of the people who have been displaced everywhere he goes," Mulvehill said.

Not all those from Scituate were upset, however. Faith Bowker Maloney, who grew up in North Scituate, said St. Anthony's was her parish before St. Frances was built some 40 years ago. "It's my natural home," she said.

Cohasset resident Angie Kelley gave O'Malley's visit a positive review.

"He was great, very humble," Kelley said about the Mass. "I could understand every word and his message was great."

O'Malley is the ninth Archbishop of Boston succeeding Bernard Cardinal Law in July 2003.

Bill Marsden of Cohasset greets Archbishop Sean O'Malley during a reception in O'Malley's honor at St. Anthony's Parish Hall following Mass on Sunday.

Archbishop Sean O'Malley leaves St. Anthony's Church after celebrating the Mass on Sunday that drew upwards of 500 people despite the holiday weekend.

Gymnasts stepping up

Nor-Coh set season-high score against Sandwich

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Against some of their strongest competition of the season, the Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team have come up big.

Although their 129.4 team points were not enough to beat an excellent Sandwich squad last Thursday, it was their highest score of the season, as the girls continue to show improvement as the year progresses.

Nancy Durkin, a senior from Cohasset, set a career high on the all around with a score of 34.15. Highlights of her performance include an 8.8 on the floor exercise and 8.7 on the balance beam. She also turned in solid scores on the bars (8.5) and vault (8.15).

The team's other all-around performer, Samantha Rosen, turned in a 32.8 for the four combined events. The Norwell senior co-captain had the team's best score in the vault with an 8.25, and also earned good marks in the floor (8.75) and bars (8.0).

Rosen said she and her teammates were on top of their game against a team in Sandwich that, along with Barnstable, is probably one of the best they will face all year.

"We performed really well, and we were staying focused on all events," she said.

Among the team's other best performers last Thursday was Cohasset's Lisa Spirito. The junior has established herself as one of the team's top scorers outside the two all-around regulars, and in this meet set a career high with a remarkable 8.8 on the floor. She also earned an 8.0 on the beam, good enough for second on the team, and a 7.7 on the bars, good enough for third.

Cohasset junior Corinna Durham was the other Nor-Coh athlete to place at an 8 or higher, scoring an even 8.0 in the vault. Others who earned points for the team were Kate Carpenter (7.5 on the bars), Melissa Murphy (7.8, vault), C.J. Himberg (7.8, floor) and Erin Kelly (7.4, beam).

The 129.4 score leaves the team with at least one purpose for the rest of the regular season.

"We're reaching for a team score of 130; that's our goal," Rosen said.

Two nights ago, the girls came up a little short in that regard, scoring a 128.6 as a team. It was still more than good enough, however, to sweep a tri-meet with Hanover/Rockland (122.3) and Randolph/Milton (118.2).

Durkin placed second in the all-around with a 33.5, including a first-place finish in the floor exercise (8.8) and second on the vault (8.2).

Battling a case of the flu that has been floating around the team in recent weeks, Rosen put up 8.3's in the floor and beam events.

Spirito and Murphy, a Norwell sophomore, tied for third place overall on the floor with a score of 8.2. Durham's 8.0 on the vault earned her third place in that event, while Kelly, a junior

The beat goes on for Cohasset wrestling.

Hosting eight other teams from across Eastern Mass, the boys dominated the tournament, placing athletes in 11 out of 14 weight classes.

The team finished with 194 points, with the second-place team, Duxbury, finishing almost 70 points behind. Rockland was right behind in third place.

Seniors Kevin Dinsmore (130-pound division), Joe Kehoe (160), Matt Casey (171) and Matt Baroudi (215) all won the title in their respective weight classes.

Dinsmore was the number-one seed in his class and performed like it, as the competition did not come close in any match. According to Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney, Dinsmore beat Duxbury's Eric Sheridan "pretty convincingly" in the final.

The score would seem to back up those words, as Dinsmore won a 10-2 decision.

Competing one weight class higher than he has been for most of the year, Kehoe stepped up his game and dominated his three matches. After winning via pin in the first round and a 13-0 score in the second, Kehoe met Silver Lake's Ryan Wells in the final and came away with a convincing win of his own, an 11-2 decision.

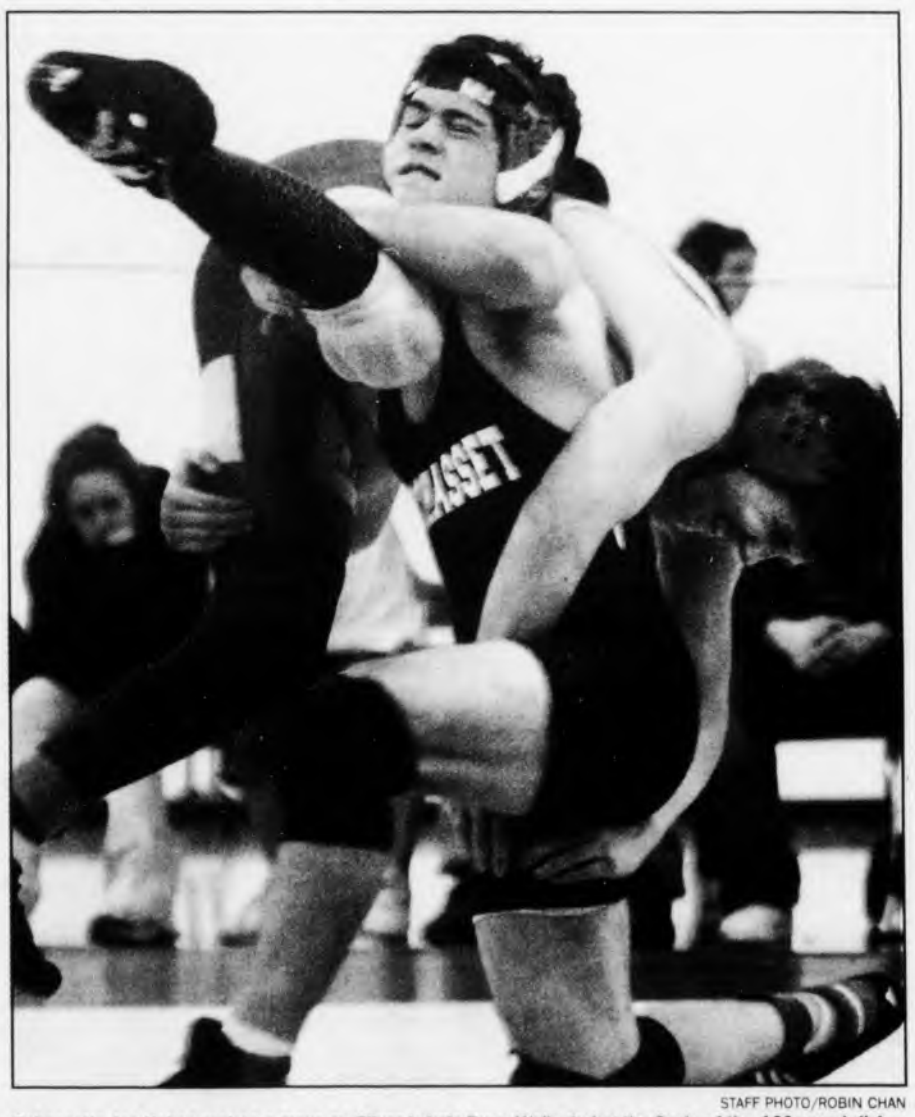
Casey, a champion at the Marshfield tournament who was on his way to doing the same at North Quincy before getting injured, continued his winning ways on the home mat. Seeded second for the tournament, he took a 7-1 decision over SL's Alex Rollins in the final.

Rounding out the winners on the day for Cohasset was Baroudi. Wrestling in the weight class in which he won a state championship last year, the senior pinned his first opponent and then won his last two matches via close, 3-2 decisions.

Baroudi's opponent in the finals was Duxbury's Andrew Knapp.

For Sweeney's team, it was their second straight tournament win, having taken the North Quincy competition the previous weekend.

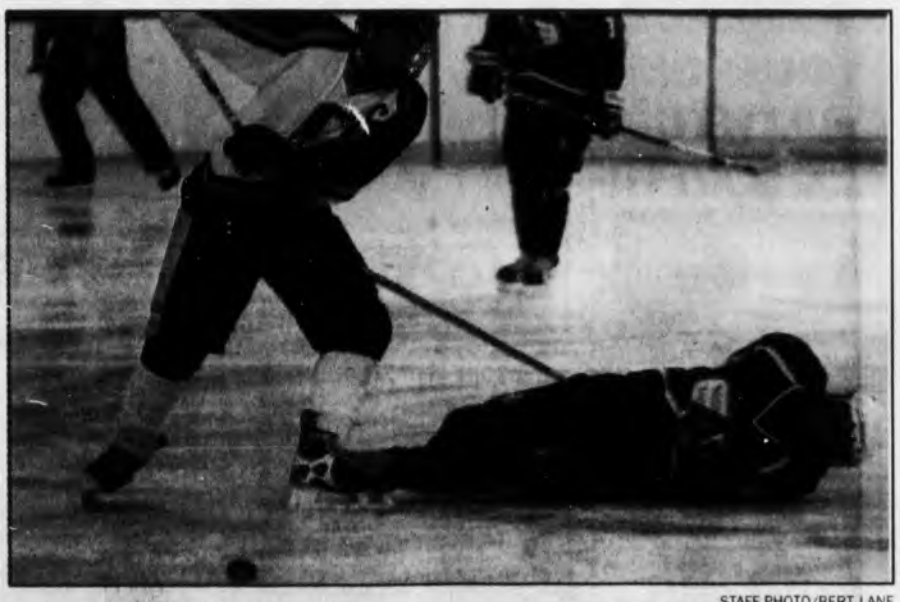
"Winning back-to-back tournaments was great for us," Sweeney said. "I'm very pleased with the way we're wrestling right now."



Junior Jake Watts (103) took second place for the tournament, losing in the finals to a good wrestler from Lynnfield, Conor Doherty.

Sophomore Ryan McLellan (112) finished second as well, losing to Hanover's Jim Egan in the final. McLellan wrestled well all day, and kept the score close in the final match before getting pinned in the third period.

Senior Jon Littauer (119) continued his excellent season with a second-place finish at Cohasset. In what Sweeney called a great match, Littauer fell to Rockland's Paul Robinson in the final. The score was 8-6 in favor of Robinson when he pinned the Cohasset senior with 10 seconds to go in the match.



Sophomore Adam Smith stepped up to the forefront with

CHS skaters play tough in loss to league-leading HP

By Mark Goodman

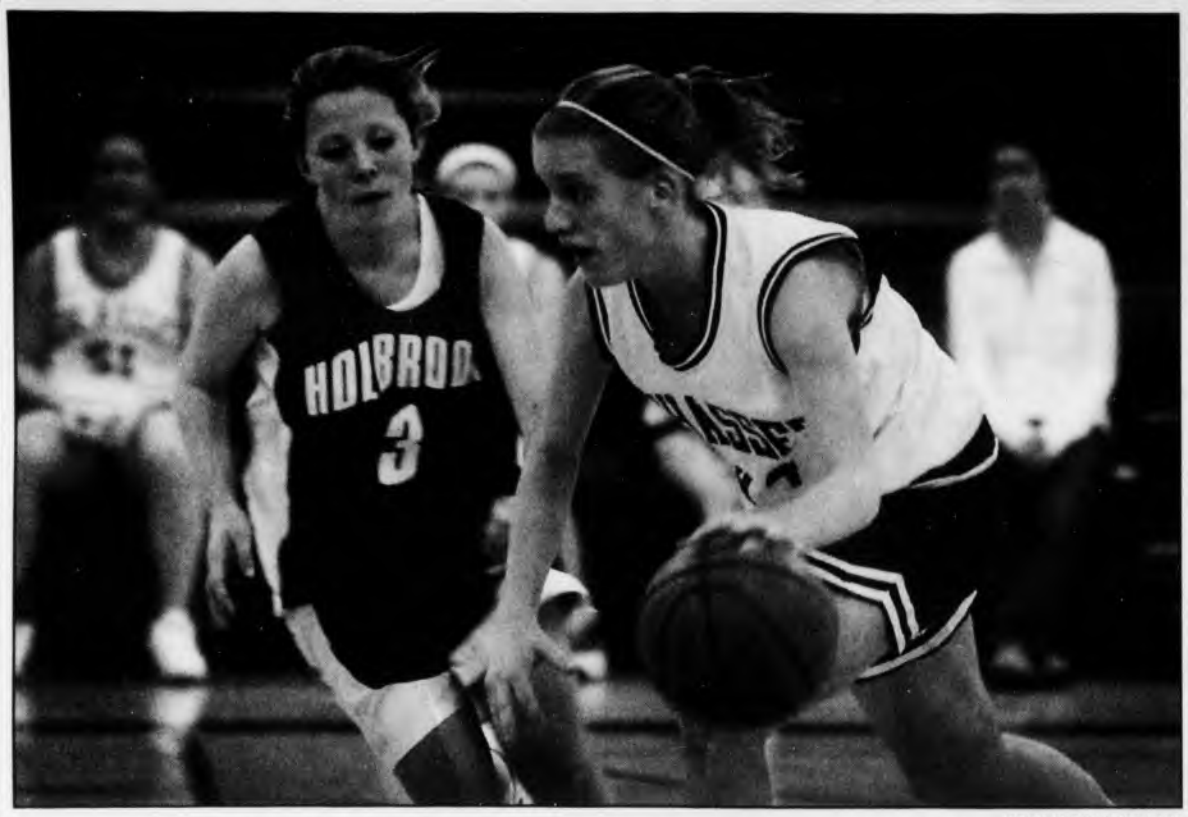
For 40 minutes, it looked as though Cohasset would draw at least a point against South Shore League leading Harwich/Provincetown.

The visitors to Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham flexed their muscle in the last five minutes, however, and returned to the Cape with a 2-0 victory Wednesday night.

HP's first goal came with four minutes left in the game at that tail end of a power play. With the Skippers scrambling in the final minutes to try and tie it back up, HP scored an insurance goal to put it away.

The loss dropped Cohasset's record to 2-5 overall, 1-2 in the league. In an interview the morning after the game, head coach Ben Virga sounded far from discouraged.

"We challenged the boys to come out flying for three periods, and that's exactly what they did," he said. "I was so proud to be their coach [Wednesday] night."



The coach praised his defensemen, Joe Durkin, Conor Holway, Charlie Czerkawski (a freshman who started the season as a forward) and Zack Murray for the way they played against a very good HP offense, which boasts the top three scorers in the league.

"Joe and Conor just left every ounce of their soul on the ice," Virga said, adding that those two played about 35 out of 45 minutes.

Senior captain Ted Straughn also played a great game, and had one sequence in particular that had Virga raving about his performance. On a penalty kill against HP's top line, Straughn at one point took the puck away and just kept it for about 40 seconds, effectively running out the opponent's advantage.

Virga also complimented the play of his young third line, Austin Lanzillotti, T.J.

Cohasset junior point guard Chelsea Grossman (white shirt) has stepped up nicely into a supporting role for her team this year.

Girls give Harwich a rough ride

Anderson's remarkable performance leads Skippers to victory

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

As we braced ourselves this week against the January freeze, the Lady Skippers turned up the heat on one of their top competitors, the Rough Riders of Harwich, last Friday.

Sullivan Gymnasium provided the backdrop last Friday for an impressive 51-42 Cohasset victory.

Cohasset needed the "W" in a big way. They walked onto the floor having lost their four previous games.

This game proved very different. Their offense was hotter than a bowling alley on a nickel night, and Cohasset controlled the game from start to finish.

The magic started with Senior co-captain Casey Anderson sinking a season-high 37 points. Her intensity and focus electrified her teammates. The forward also finished with an incredible 21 rebounds.

Every Skipper contributed to the victory. Point guard Chelsea Grossman put on a nice show for the fans by organizing some excellent offensive plays.

"We just clicked as a team," Anderson said afterwards. "Our shots rolled in. We played with intensity and we communicated well on defense. We couldn't have asked for a better game."

And on defense? Let's just say it was the usual… and that's a good thing.

They knocked the Rough Riders right off of their offensive saddles. Names like Nicole Whitney surfaced when "defensive effort" was mentioned. The whole team played a role, however, in shutting down the Rough Rider's deadly outside shooter, Katie Gonzalez.

In his interview with The Mariner, Cohasset head coach John Levangie commented, "We all needed this pivotal win to get back on track and start winning more games."

When asked about the positive turnaround, Levangie attributed the change to the girls' level of commitment to each other and to the game.

"The girls work hard every day in practice and have a special dedication to the team. Their work ethic is just unbelievable," he added.

Now at the season's half way point, Levangie reflected on what he believes must occur going forward.

"If we want to succeed in the tournament, we need more people to put up some points," he said. "If the scoring spreads out to several players on our team, I feel confidence will emerge and success will follow."

Let's hope the confidence will be flying high and another "W" will result in tonight's Norwell showdown.

CHS boys look for bigger things in second half

The boys return to league action tonight when they travel to Norwell.

The Cohasset boys basketball team have taken their lumps in their league schedule, but head coach Dorian Bryant is remaining upbeat about what he is seeing from his young team.

"I think the kids have improved since the season started," he said before his team's Wednesday practice. "We're seeing kids do some things they wouldn't have dreamed of doing in the preseason, whether it be a nice drop step for a big guy or a crossover for a guard."

The key now is for that progress to be sustained.

"With a young team, you sometimes take two steps forward and then three steps back," Bryant said. "We're trying to move forward consistently."

Cohasset got solid rebounding efforts from big men Justin Alexander, Will Pinkus and Zack Etkind.

The boys return to league action tonight when they travel to Norwell. On Tuesday, they travel to Mashpee.

Pats' dominance of Manning, Colts no surprise

There were a number of reasons why I just couldn't wait to watch the Patriots take on the Indianapolis Colts Sunday afternoon, but none were bigger than my desire to see "the Manning face."

New England has played the Colts enough times for you to know what I'm talking about. It's that ripping the strap off his helmet, throwing his arms up in the air and shaking his head in disbelief as he exits the field, all the while thinking to himself: 'But I'm Peyton Manning. This doesn't happen to me.'

True, there haven't been many opposing teams able to contain the two-time NFL MVP this year, but against the Patriots, it's become common practice. Manning is a great quarterback, but when push comes to shove, this guy chokes. Sunday's 20-3 loss to the Pats in the Divisional playoff marked the second-straight year Manning and the Colts had been ousted from the postseason by New England.

We saw the face early and often as the overly-hyped Indy offense was virtually non-existent. Still, after the game, CBS and ESPN commentators were, of course, quick to dismiss Manning as the reason for the loss. Sure, the NFL's "golden boy" put together some nice drives, but none of them ended by crossing the goal line. Basically, he was a no-show. So how is that not his fault?

Whatever the reason for the loss, no one could deny that Manning once again paled in comparison to his adversary. Pats quarterback Tom Brady was masterful under pressure, going 18-for-27 for 144 yards and two touchdowns. His performance only further demonstrated that there just isn't a better big game quarterback in the game today.

No one could deny that Manning once again paled in comparison to his adversary.

But Brady wasn't the only standout. Throughout the two weeks leading up to the showdown, all we'd heard about was Indy's offense and how a backup Patriots secondary wouldn't be able to contain its receivers. It was in fact the New England offense that shined, possessing the ball for nearly 40 minutes and compiling 325 yards of total offense in the process.

The Pats out-rushed the Colts 210—46, 144 of those yards coming from running back Corey "The Clock-eater" Dillon. The generally reliable Kevin Faulk also had a good showing, while Indy counterpart Edgerrin James rushed for only 39 yards on 14 carries. Oooh, scary!

I guess the skeptics overlooked the fact that coaching also plays a big role in the playoffs, and we have a mastermind at the helm in head coach Bill Belichick. This guy has owned Manning for the past three years and he and his staff always put together the right defensive formula…no matter who plays.

Sure, the Pats defense is a bit weakened by the absence of Pro Bowl cornerback Ty Law and defensive end Richard Seymour, but it certainly didn't show on Sunday.

Secondary backup Randall Gay and the ever-improving Asante Samuel (what a hit!) dominated in man-to-man coverage, strong safety Rodney Harrison (interception) was everywhere, and linebackers Tedy Bruschi (fumble recovery, forced fumble) and Mike Vrabel (six tackles, sack, forced fumble) were absolutely relentless.

Our "banged up" defense allowed that record-setting Colts offense only a trio of points, scored on a lone Mike Vanderjagt (a.k.a. Vanderjerk) field goal in the second quarter. (Open mouth, insert foot).

In the end, it was as it should be: Patriots moving on, Colts going home. Brady and the Pats offense studs, Manning and the Colts attack duds. New England defense on point, Indy's lame. Adam Vineteri golden, Vanderjagt a joke. Indy 0-7 at Foxboro, Pats unbeaten for two years at home.

Manning will now have plenty of time to admire those everyday heroes he praised in his popular TV commercial. Go on Peyton, "Cut that meat! Cut that meat!"

The Patriots, on the other hand, will be busy taking on the Steelers in their second consecutive AFC championship game. It will be a chance to avenge the 34-20 loss at Pittsburgh that ended our impressive year-long winning streak and see what the Steelers defense can do when they have to deal with Dillon, who didn't play in that game back on Halloween night.

Playing in Pittsburgh is never easy, but after the way the Steelers played against the Jets Saturday night (escaping with a 20-17 overtime win), something tells me their players won't be making hotel reservations in Jacksonville like they did before they even took the field against the eventual Super Bowl champion Patriots in 2001.

In Belichick we trust. Go Pats.

Cohasset skaters play tough in loss to league-leading HP

Kennedy and Corbin Faber, who were matched up with that top HP line at times and more than held their own. Virga said that line was able to carry play, be physical and frustrate HP's top scorers.

Junior goalie Stefan Parnell made 25 saves, including several great ones from close to the net to keep his team in it.

In an encouraging sign, Cohasset out-shot HP, 29-27. Virga said his team had some good shots, but simply couldn't capitalize against a quality HP goaltender.

Scituate 7, Cohasset 1

The recent loss of a couple of top players has forced Sailors coach Mike Breen to go a little deeper into his bench. This was a situation neighboring town rival Cohasset had been hoping to exploit.

Cohasset had been overwhelmed by the Sailors full compliment of players on Dec. 31, 5-1, but thought the ice surface would be a little less slanted this past Friday night when the two teams met again on the Skippers home Pilgrim Arena ice.

Things didn't quite work out the way Virga had hoped, however. The Sailors were just as dominant in go-round number two, out-shooting the host Skippers 42-18 on their way to a 7-1 victory.

The Patriot League leading Sailors improved to 7-1-1 with the win.

The lineup featured by the Skippers, with just six seniors on the roster, in this one was littered with sophomores and freshmen, particularly on the front line.

Virga had no qualms with the effort put forth by his players on the ice, saying they were simply going up against a better team, one that he calls one of the best in Div. 3.

"It was just one of those lessons in life that you get every once in a while; Scituate is just a better team," he said. "We played hard."

The Skippers got down 3-0 in the first period, and could not come back from that. Virga said he felt the game was pretty evenly played in the second and third periods, but it was the first that made the difference.

The Sailors got balanced offensive output in this one, as a forward from each of the four lines had at least one point, led by three point outings (two goals, one assist each) by first and second line wingers, respectively, senior captain Garrett Callahan and freshman Sean Travis.

The other goals were scored by first line left wing Owen Kirkbride, senior defenseman Martin Hooker and third line center Colin Donahue.

It was the play of "fourth line" seniors Brian Zona, Kevin Tufts and Kenny Ohlund, though, that had Scituate head coach Mike Breen gushing after the game.

"That line was really flying," said Breen. "You see the experience of guys like that showing on the ice. They've been playing the same system for four years, and they really do their jobs. They forecheck and backcheck like crazy. They do the little things. They keep the other team off the board and they wear them down."

Parnell once again played excellent in net, making 39 saves against the high-powered attack of Scituate.

Cohasset got on the board when junior Brian Straughn converted on a centering feed from freshman Pat Doonan with 26.1 seconds to go in the second period, making it a 4-1 game.

Scituate got its four goal edge right back, though, as Donahue won the ensuing face-off and took a lead pass from linemate and fellow sophomore Jay Milkiewicz hard over the blue line, cutting around the last man back, then wrapping a pretty shot around Parnell.

Mashpee game postponed

Due to the inclement weather last Sunday, Cohasset's road trip down to Mashpee was postponed.

The re-scheduling of this game could present a dilemma. It was unsure as of press time when the game would be made up, but the possibility exists that the date would be Feb. 6.

Not only is that Super Bowl Sunday, but it would also mean four games in four days for Cohasset (from Feb. 4-7). The Mariner should have details on the re-scheduling next week.

Next up

The Skippers will travel to Bridgewater ice Arena tomorrow night to take on SSL rival Carver (8 p.m. start).

Carver is a young team that has yet to win a game this year. They were blown out last weekend by Norwell, 9-0, and lost to Hull (a team the Skippers beat 8-1 on Jan. 12) earlier this week.

This one should go in the win column for the Skippers, and allow Virga to give his younger players some extended ice time.

Wednesday will see another long road trip, this one to Tabor Academy to take on Wareham in a non-league tussle (4 p.m. start).

Cohasset downed Wareham in their season opener, 5-3, in a very exciting game. On their home ice, Wareham will certainly be looking to get back at the blue and white.

The Skippers return to their home Pilgrim Arena ice a week from tonight for a big showdown with league arch-rival Norwell (8 p.m. start). Norwell is a solid team with three talented lines and a good, young goalie in sophomore John Collins.

Cohasset will have their hands full, but if they play as well as they did against HP, will no doubt have a chance to win. Virga is hoping to at least split the Wareham/Norwell games, as the goal remains to qualify for the state tournament. His charges will now have to go at least 8-5 in their last 13 games to do so.

Mike Spellman contributed to this story.

a second-place finish of his own in the 125-pound division. After getting the pin in his first match and defeated his class' number-2 seed in the semifinal, Smith lost to Lynnfield's talented Chris Spinelli in the final. It was still an impressive performance for an emerging young wrestler.

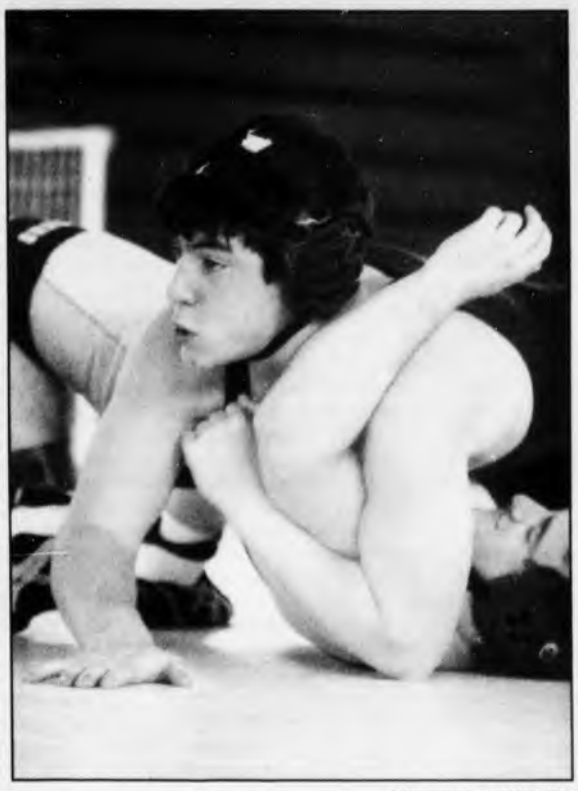
Continuing a great season of his own, Shane Dorian (140) lost a tough battle to Rockland's Jackie Erickson in the final. Erickson placed in the state tournament last year, and Sweeney has high hopes for his athlete based on what he has seen so far.

"In my opinion, Shane is probably one of the best wrestlers in the state for his weight class," Sweeney said. "Shane had [Erickson] on the run throughout the match. He really pushed him hard."

In the 145-pound division, junior Dave McKenna won his first two matches before succumbing to Duxbury's Greg Tsinzo in the finals. McKenna was handling Tsinzo well, as he was up 11-4 on the scoreboard, before making one mistake and getting caught for the pin.

The 11th Cohasset grappler to place at the tournament was senior Colin Regan (152). Regan was a little under the weather, but battled through four matches to take fourth place on the day.

Then on Wednesday, Cohasset defeated a tough Carver team by a 43-36 score. McLellan (10-4 decision), Dinsmore (pin), McKenna (13-0) and Regan (pin) were the top performers on the day for the Skippers.



Cohasset improved their meet record to 11-0 with the victory, while Carver dropped to 10-4.

Next up

That undefeated record will be on the line tomorrow, as the boys face off against Wayland, Durfee and Whitman-Hanson in a quad match.

Wayland is a powerhouse that has given Cohasset trouble in years past. The two schools have competed against one another since 1998, and Cohasset has yet to defeat them.

"We are looking forward to the challenge," Sweeney said. "It should be a great match."

from Norwell who has overcome that flu, scored an 8.0 on the floor.

Rounding out Nor-Coh's best marks were Carpenter (7.8 on the beam) and Kiersten Shontz (7.7 on the vault).

The wins improved the team's record to 5-2, a solid mark that can be at least partially attributed to the wide array of athletes head coach Kara Connerty has at her disposal.

"We continue to improve our depth, which helps when we go up against some of these really good teams," she said after the tri-meet.

The girls faced some more tough competition last night, when they hosted Notre Dame.

Sixth grade girls win pair

The Cohasset sixth grade girls travel team earned two hard fought victories this weekend, defeating Halifax, 16-5, and Bridgewater, 16-11.

In the Saturday contest at Halifax, a smothering Blue & White defense prevented Halifax from taking advantage of a cold-shooting opening half by Cohasset.

The Cohasset frontcourt play of Emma Musto, Lindsay Davis, Carly Haggerty, Kate French and Carly Martin prevented Halifax from getting good shots and any second chance opportunities. Davis and Musto hit Cohasset's only field goals, while Haggerty and Rachel Fredey sank a free throw apiece for a 6-3 Blue & White lead at the half.

Cohasset continued to display its defensive intensity at the start of the second half and for the first time this year was able to break an opponent's full-court press, a failure which has proven the Blue & White's undoing in some of its defeats earlier this season.

In the meantime, the Cohasset girls came to life offensively, with Davis, French, and Haggerty hitting from the field and Haggerty sinking two free throws. Logan Pratt put the icing on the Cohasset victory cake with a 15-footer off the glass for the 16-5 final score.

The coaching staff singled out Rachel Fredey for an outstanding two-way game. The ball-hawking Fredey proved a thorn in the side of the Halifax offense all day with a number of steals from her guard position, while offensively she made some fine moves to the basket which drew Halifax fouls.

On Sunday, the sixth-graders entertained Bridgewater, a team from the South Shore large-town division, in one of Cohasset's two crossover games this season. (The South Shore League is divided into two eight-team leagues of small and large towns. Cohasset is in the small town division with Abington, Duxbury, Halifax, Norwell, Carver, Raynham, and Hanson. Each team plays every team in its own division twice, plus two crossover games with opponents from the other division).

The Blue & White jumped out to an early lead and never looked back, although they were never quite able to definitively put Bridgewater away.

Once again a staunch defense, anchored by Carly Haggerty at center, who blocked a half-dozen enemy shots on the day, stifled the Bridgewater offense, which could muster only two free throws in the first half.

In the meantime, baskets by Haggerty, Kate French (who along with Haggerty hauled in rebounds in the double-figures), and Olivia Murphy gave Cohasset a 6-2 lead at the intermission.

Both teams began to pick up the offensive pace in the second half, but every time Bridgewater pulled within a bucket, Cohasset had an answer.

Haggerty (two second half hoops), French, and Lindsay Davis all found the range for the Blue & White from the field, but Cohasset still could manage only a tenuous 14-11 margin after a Halifax bucket with less than a minute to go.

Cohasset broke the Halifax full-court press on the ensuing possession and Emma Quigley was fouled as she crossed half court with 0:40 showing on the clock. Emma Q. then calmly sank both ends of the one-and-one for a comfortable five point edge and the 16-11 final score.

The sixth graders now stand at 4-4 halfway through the year, good for sole possession of fourth place in the SSL – and are looking forward to an even better second half now that they have sized up the competition in this, their first year in the South Shore League.

Hitters' Workshop, High School Battery Club & Softball Pitching Clinic at SSBC

As temperatures drop, the action heats up at the South Shore Baseball Club in Hingham.

The popular Hitters' Workshops return during the February school vacation, while the High School Battery Club and Barry Needham's Softball Pitching Clinic are scheduled next month.

The third of four special four-day Hitters' Workshops, under the direction of veteran SSBC instructor Rick DelVecchio, is Feb. 22-25 for players in two different age groups, 8-12 and 13-18.

"Our Hitters' Workshops have been designed to directly focus on hitting and improving all aspects of a player's hitting," SSBC president/director Frank Niles, Jr. explained. "Lectures and drills are intended to create habits that will give hitters what they need to succeed in games. Players can get plenty of at-bats and receive first-class instructions from SSBC's veteran staff at this Hitters' Workshop."

SSBC's Hitters' Workshop features daily hitting lectures, five different hitting stations, various skills work and drills, live hitting cage with pitchers, soft toss and bunting stations, two live hitting stations, and a safety station for inside pitches.

Players of ages 8-12 report at 9 a.m. to 10:45 a.m., while ages 13-18 go from 11 a.m. to 12:45 p.m.

The fourth and final SSBC Hitters' Workshop of the 2004-2005 academic year will be conducted during the April school vacation (Apr. 19-22).

High School League Battery Club

SSBC's Battery Club has been separated into three groups (Little League, Babe Ruth & High School) this year to maximize personalized instruction by SSBC's professional staff of experienced instructors

The first High School Battery Club session will be held four consecutive Tuesday nights, Feb. 15-March 8, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., for players aged 16-18.

"Our Battery Club has been designed for pitchers and catchers who want to learn and work on the finer points of baseball's two most important positions," Niles said.

Pitching instruction will concentrate on proper mechanics from the wind-up and stretch, strategy and pitch selection, different grips and its effects on the ball, pick-off moves, fielding, and positive attitude. Catching sessions focus on correct receiving and throwing techniques, pitch selection, blocking low pitches, and overall strategy.

Group size is limited in order to provide personalized instruction.

Softball Pitching Clinic

The second of three 2005 SSBC Softball Pitching Clinics, featuring veteran instructor Barry "No-Hit" Needham, starts Feb. 13. The one-hour, five-week clinic will be held five Sunday mornings in a row, Feb. 13 to March 13, either at 9 a.m., 10 a.m. or 11 a.m.

Pitchers must be at least 10 years of age and provide their own catchers. Softball pitching clinics are open to SSBC member and non-members alike (different fees) on a first come, first served basis.

"Barry focuses on the mechanics and basics of the windmill style," Niles added. "His calm manner and concentration on fundamentals have helped many young pitchers launch promising softball careers. Barry is known as one of the best softball pitching instructors in New England."

The final SSBC clinic will be offered March 20 to April 24.

Members Only Workouts

SSBC's "Members Only Workouts" continue through the middle of April for baseball players, boys and girls, between the ages of seven and 12.

Ninety-minute sessions for players aged 7-9 are scheduled Monday nights (5 to 6:30 p.m.) and Wednesday evenings (5-6:30) for 10-12 year olds.

Any SSBC member can attend, unannounced, when his age group is scheduled. They can come for as many or as few workouts as they choose. Sessions are closely supervised and designed to improve the overall level of play – pitching, catching, throwing, fielding, batting and running the bases.

Girls' Members Only Workouts

Girls' Members Only workouts, under the guidance of coaches Frank Niles, Jr. and Melissa Reynolds, are held Wednesday evenings, 6:30 o 8 p.m., through April 16.

Lectures, drills and a variety of indoor games will be featured during clinics. Girls of all ages are invited, as long as they are SSBC members, and they may show-up unannounced to participate in as many workouts as they choose. Girls of all ages are invited and groups will be split by age for drills and competition.

SPORTS NOTES

Learn to ski, snowboard at Ragged Mountain

The Recreation Commission of Cohasset is sponsoring a "Learn to ski or snowboard" program at Ragged Mountain on five Saturdays throughout the winter: Nov. 27, Dec. 11, Jan. 8, Jan. 29 and Feb. 5. The motor coach will leave at 6:30 a.m. from Cohasset Town Hall parking lot, 41 Highland Ave. and returns there between 6:30 and 7 p.m. There will be an adult chaperone on the bus and available to assist your child at Ragged Mountain.

For cost efficiency, visit Buckles and Boards Ski Shop, Route 3A, Marshfield. A rental at Buckles and Boards allows you to keep the equipment through Saturday, Feb. 5, returning it after the season ends. The price for ski equipment is $129.99 and snowboard equipment is $169.99.

The $259.99 ski package includes: luxury motor coach transportation on all five Saturdays; adult chaperone on the bus; five, one-and-a-half-hour (1.5 hours) skiing or snowboarding lessons; and six full-day lift tickets at Ragged Mountain.

This will be an enjoyable treat for first timers or for those who want to improve their skills. For more information, call 781-383-4109.

Men's baseball sign-ups

The Boston Men's Baseball League is now accepting registragtions for the 2005 season for players aged 18+, 30+ and 40+. To register, visit www.bostonbaseball.com. Or for more information, call 617-BASEBALL."

Background:

The Boston Men's Baseball League is the largest amatuer adult baseball league in New England with 51 teams and more than 1,000 players. The season runs April through September and plays a 26-game schedule, plus playoffs. 2005 will mark the league's 18th year.

New softball program for grades 7 and 8

The Cohasset Youth Baseball Softball Association (CYBSA) is pleased to announce the creation of a new seventh and eighth grade softball program for the upcoming 2005 spring season. The program is being established to help fill the void that has been created with the elimination of the middle school softball program.

The plan is to have an "in-town" league similar to the existing Major League softball program that is currently offered for the fifth and sixth grade girls. We hope to field as many as four teams and plan to play two games a week during the CYBSA regular schedule, which begins in April.

We are asking any girls interested in participating, or if you need further information, to please contact either Rob Spofford (383-1680) or Chris Haggerty (383-9930) by Saturday, Jan. 29 which will allow us adequate time to plan the inaugural season.

IT'S HAPPENING

Swamp Romp is Jan. 30

"The Swamp Romp," the annual hike through Scituate's pristine winter wonderland — the South Swamp — will take place on Sunday, Jan. 30 from 1 to 3:30 p.m. Meet at the Mt. Hope Improvement Society Building at the corner of Clapp Road and Cedar Street in Scituate. Sponsored by the First Herring Brook Watershed Initiative, the suggested donation is $3 per person and $5 per family.

This is a moderately challenging walk which is suitable for people over 10 years old. It will be led by local naturalists who will take participants through the unique environment of the frozen South Swamp, however, if there is a snowstorm or it is unseasonably warm, the walk will be postponed to the following Sunday, Feb. 6.

Call 781-545-5987 for further information and be sure to wear warm clothing and boots. Following the hike, free refreshments will be served at the Mt. Hope Improvement Society and there will be an opportunity to purchase art and photography in aid of FHBWI programs.

Blood drive Feb. 2

The Red Cross has scheduled the next Cohasset Community Blood Drive for Wednesday, Feb. 2, The Blood Drive will be at St. Anthony Parish Center at the corner of South Main St. and Summer St. from 1 to 7 p.m. As in the past, baby-sitting will be provided from 3 to 5 p.m. Ample parking is available.

The best way to give blood for the first time is to come with a friend who is experienced in the donation process. New donors usually find the procedure easy and painless and most come back regularly to donate. "The biggest obstacle seems to be overcoming that initial fear," said Cathy Pray of the Red Cross. "That's why we're counting on our regular donors to help by bringing a friend to this blood drive." The Red Cross area community of which Cohasset is a part requires more than 1,600 pints of blood per day to meet usual demand for blood and blood products. . It is a challenge to collect enough blood to meet the needs of hospital patients year round. Every blood donation is an opportunity to help an accident victim, a surgical patient, or a child battling leukemia, to name a few.

Most people can give blood through the American Red Cross. Potential donors must be at least 17 years of age, in good health and weigh over 110 pounds. In most cases, donors may give if they are on medication, but should know the names of these medications.

The Red Cross always counts on a good turnout when it visits Cohasset so please respond, if possible, when a volunteer from one of the church, civic, corporate or social organizations calls. New donors are welcome and especially needed. To register and make an appointment for donating at a specific time or if you have any questions, call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290. You can also call the Red Cross at 1-800-448-3543.

Marketing seminar offered for artists

Award-winning artist, designer, and arts organizer, Liz Haywood-Sullivan will give a one-day seminar offering insider information on presenting and promoting artwork. The workshop, "Self Promotion and Marketing of Your Art" at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset, Saturday, Jan. 29, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. will cover a range of topics that artists, from professional to student, will find helpful. Tips on how to prepare and present work for competitions, how to approach and attract galleries, how to get exposure in art publications and how to manage inventory, will be discussed. Handouts will be provided and artists will leave with new insights into the artist's experience.

Haywood-Sullivan with professional background in industrial design, commercial illustration and graphic design, is a pastel artist and educator. Her award-winning paintings have been seen in numerous local, national, and museum exhibitions and are included in private and corporate collections nationwide.

The cost for the seminar is $55 ($45 for SSAC members). For information visit www.ssac.org or to register call 781-383-2787.

Valentines Fund Dance

The Third Annual Valentines Fund Dance to benefit the homeless will be held this year at the Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor Saturday evening, Feb. 19, from 8 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. The requested donation is $20 per person for the creative black-tie event. In view of people's contributions to Southeast Asia, the donation this year has been lowered by 20 per cent.

While our hearts go out to the more than 3 million made homeless by the tsunami, we must also take care of the more than 3 million adults and children who experience homelessness each year here in America. There will be dancing to two great rock and roll bands, The Pemberton Hill Players and Shaken Not Stirred. There will also be auctions of art works and a drumhead signed by all five members of Aerosmith, along with silent auctions and raffles of local artists' works, gift certificates and merchandise from local and Harvard Square merchants and restaurants.

Absolutely all proceeds go to benefit Bread & Jams, Inc., a Self-advocacy Center and day shelter located in Harvard Square, Cambridge. Hors-d'oeuvres will be provided by Atlantica staff. For dinner reservations pre-event call Atlantica at 781-383-0900. To reserve tickets for the event call 781-383-6568 as a limited number of tickets will be available at the door.

Ensemble concert at St. Stephen's Jan. 23

As part of it's Sunday concert Series, St. Stephen's Church is presenting the Ensemble Chaconne (Peter H. Bloom, baroque flute; Carol Lewis, viola da gamba; and Olav Chris Henriksen, baroque lute and English guitar) in concert on Sunday, Jan. 23, at 3 p.m. The church is located at 26 Highland Ave. is handicap accessible, and ample parking is available at the village car park a short distance away. The program is titled A Musical Portrait - Thomas Gainsborough and His Circle (music of J.C. Bach, Abel, Giardini, Straube, and Fischer).

Created for the Boston Museum of Fine Arts as part of its landmark exhibition of Gainsborough's painting in 2003, the concert celebrates the great English painter's passion for music. The program features works by leading European composers who were colleagues of Gainsborough in mid-18th century London: Johann Christian Bach, Carl Friedrich Abel, Italian violinist Felice de Giardini, lutenist and harpsichordist Rudolf Straube and oboist Johann Christian Fischer, who eloped with Gainsborough's oldest daughter.

The concert also includes music of African composer Ignatius Sancho, who was born on a slave ship and rose to become a London composer and a man of letters. Like all of the other composers on the program, Sancho had his portrait painted by Gainsborough. Performed on historical instruments, the concert showcases the seldom-heard English guitar along with baroque flute, viola da gamba, and baroque lute.

Admission is free. For more information, call 781-383-1083.

Wine tasting brunch to benefit Alzheimer's

On Sunday, Jan. 23, Bridgemans Restaurant in Hull will host a Wine-Tasting Brunch by the Sea at noon. A wine will accompany each course with wine commentary by an expert who will explain the art of blending food and wines. Paul Wahlberg, the young and passionate chef at Bridgemans, promises an exciting menu. Bridgemans received Zagats Review 2004 an "excellent" rating and "Best New Restaurant South of Boston" in Boston Magazine's "Best of Boston." A raffle for baskets of wines and goodies will add to the fun, along with the amazing view of the beach.

Above cost proceeds of this event underwrite ADSGSS Inc. activities, which are entirely supported by donations and volunteered staffing. Since 1938 the monthly newsletter, mailing costs, outreach brochures, packets of information, help line and Family Respite Assistance Program (1991), which helps families pay for local day-health programs, are part of the ADSGSS mission to help local families cope with Alzheimer's disease.

"A Wine-tasting Brunch by the Sea" will delight your palate as well as benefit those local families who depend on ADSGSS for information and support.

Reservations are a must. Seats are $65 per person. Call JoAnn Mitchell, 781-749-5417 for reservations.

HSO Discovery Concert

When did an orchestra first come together? Why? How has classical music changed over the 300 years since Bach first played? How does jazz fit into the picture? And just how long is the tube in a tuba?

On Jan. 22, at 4 p.m. join the Hingham Symphony Orchestra and conductor Jin Kim in a guided musical tour that explains the development of an orchestra. HSO will perform Britten's Young People's Guide to the Orchestra, as well as selected highlights from Bach to Beethoven at the Chapman Middle School, 1051 Commercial St. Weymouth.

Members of the Cohasset High School Jazz Band will perform a jazz set, with HSO musicians sitting in, and members of the Hingham High School Chamber Orchestra will join the string section of the HSO for a suite by Grieg. Listeners of all ages will take away a new appreciation for this timeless music and the devoted musicians who perform it.

After the musical journey, audience members can meet each musician and learn more about their instruments in the Instrument Showcase.

Hingham Symphony Orchestra is composed of top-level professional musicians from around the world, who have made the Boston music community their home. Come share their passion for great music, become inspired to learn more, and perhaps even decide to take up an instrument yourself.

Tickets $20 adult, $15 senior, $8 youth through age 18. Available at the door, and at Weymouth Main and Hingham Libraries; Noble's and La Petite Maison, Hingham Square; Buttonwood Books, Cohasset; Front Street Book Shop, Scituate; and Marsh's Liquors, Norwell, or call 781-740-5694.

No need for gardeners to hibernate

GREEN THUMBS UP

January is a month for gardeners to dream!

When the ground is frozen and free from snow, I continue to clip back lingering lifeless twigs and rake the dead foliage and debris from my gardens. I avoid treading on thawed, soft, damp earth in my borders to prevent compaction of my relatively heavy soil. For those who may have discovered a package or two of spring-flowering bulbs in the garage or simply ran out of time to plant, January thaws offer a second opportunity to plant these miracles of spring. There should still be an adequate cooling period to afford spring bloom although the blossoms may be delayed.

For an early touch of spring indoors, plant an elegant amaryllis bulb (Hippeastrum spp.). This popular holiday gift is easy to grow and usually produces four to six huge, spectacular lily-shaped flowers clustered at the top of a tall sturdy stalk in shades of pink, red, and white. Larger bulbs often produce multiple stems that may appear simultaneously or emerge one after another.

Keep amaryllis bulbs cool until ready to plant and then soak in lukewarm water for a few hours prior to planting to rehydrate the bulbs and to accelerate their root development. Select a container that is just slightly larger than the width of the bulb (2 inches wider than the diameter of the bulb is ideal); be sure the container has drainage holes. Fill the bottom of the pot with sterile potting soil and place the bulb in the container at a depth that will bring the neck of the bulb within an inch of the rim. Cover the bulb with soil, leaving the neck and shoulders of the bulb exposed. Water thoroughly and place the potted bulb in a warm, bright location; then water sparingly until the flower stalk emerges.

When the amaryllis flowers fade, cut the bloom stalks close to the base as the long, strap-like leaves start to emerge. Water the plants when the soil feels dry to the touch and feed regularly with a dilute liquid soluble fertilizer or apply a teaspoon of Osmocote to the soil surface. Amaryllis bulbs will enjoy spending the summer outdoors in a bright but partially shady locale. In autumn, prior to killing frosts, bring the bulbs indoors and discontinue watering. Once the leaves turn brown, move the dormant bulbs to a cool (40-50 degrees), dark location for a minimum of 6 to 8 weeks. Re-pot in fresh soil and enjoy your amaryllis for another holiday season. Blooms appear approximately 8 weeks after planting.

When "the weather outside is frightful", I look for signs of spring among the pages of gardening magazines, catalogs, and books. Filled with tempting photographs of beautiful bulbs, annuals, perennials, trees and shrubs, I find it necessary to exercise tremendous self-control, especially when I am looking out the window at a winter wonderland.

Years of overbuying and recent time constraints, however, have made me a wiser shopper. I use most catalogs as reference material and order new introductions from a select few that have proven reliable over the years. As a result of the recent popularity of gardening, even scarce, unusual plants are often available from local sources. I prefer to spend the chilly months making lengthy wish lists knowing that our local nurseries will be able to supply more than enough new plants to supply my insatiable need to grow every perennial on the market.

Despite the wintry weather outside, the arrival of springtime seems only weeks away, the dormant gardens below brought to life through the glorious pages of colorful catalogs. Browsing through gardening books and magazines during these cold winter months brightens even the dreariest days and helps the winter season pass more quickly.

Suzanne Mahler is an avid gardener, photographer and lecturer who has been developing the 1.5-acre property surrounding her home in Hanover for more than 25 years. Her weekly gardening column 'Green Thumbs Up' has appeared in the Mariner newspapers for nearly a decade. She is a member of two local garden clubs, past President of the New England Daylily Society, an overseer for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and is employed at two garden centers.

MLK Day breakfast draws community-wide support

Event raises generous sum for Tsunami relief

Nancy Gray and Nancy Robertson sell tickets for the third annual Martin Luther King Jr. Day breakfast. This year's event was held at the First Parish House.

More than 120 adults and children gathered in the Parish House of First Parish Unitarian Universalist on Monday morning to celebrate the birthday and legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., 20th century activists to civil rights, peace, and the abolition of poverty.

The mood was celebratory and serious as participants dined on pancakes and more prepared by volunteer chefs from First Parish, while Cohasset High School student, John Coffey, set a fluid tone for the event with his keyboard jazz.

Co-sponsored by the Cohasset Clergy and the Cohasset Diversity Committee, this was the third annual breakfast honoring the life and legacy of Dr. King. The cost of the breakfast was covered by a contribution from a First Parish memorial fund honoring Samuel Hassan, whose life emulated the ecumenical principles of Dr. King. David Bigley and Alix White of Cohasset's new natural food store, "All the Best", contributed Fair Trade coffee and teas.

Events of the day generated close to $700 for relief efforts in the wake of the Tsunami devastation. As residents streamed into the Parish House on this snowy morning, they were first greeted by a bake sale, presided over by Cohasset youngsters Frannie Genello, Sarah Karp, Ryan McCarthy, Suzanne Reichardt, and Abby Slanetz. This veritable rainbow of goods, ranging from chocolate covered pretzels to blueberry bred, raised $150, thanks to the thoughtful action of the children and their parents. Yet another $540 was generated from ticket sales. The total proceeds will be contributed in equal shares to C.A.R.E. and Save the Children and directed to Tsunami relief.

The morning's program was textured and timely. First Parish minister, Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull, offered the opening prayer. Allison Moskow, Chair of the Cohasset Diversity Committee, and Charles Tebbetts, First Parish member, extended a joint welcome.

All present raised their voices to the rousing strains of "Lift Every Voice and Sing" and "We'll Build a Land." The Very Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, Rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, read from Dr. King's antiwar speech delivered at New York City's Riverside Church on April 4, 1967, just one year to the day before King's murder in Memphis.

The Rev. Gary Ritts, Minister of Second Congregational Church, led participants in a responsive reading on "an inescapable network of mutuality," also the words of Dr. King.

Table by table sharing was led by Rev. Beth Wheatley-Dyson, Assistant Rector at St. Stephen's; and "birthday gifts" — sharings from each table — concluded this segment. The entire assembly closed with a rousing round of "Happy Birthday to Martin," as a rainbow of candles glimmered from the tables.

From start to finish, this birthday breakfast embodied those words of Dr. King recalled by Rev. Cutler: "We are confronted with the fierce urgency of now."

The annual Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Day breakfast held at the First Parish House drew a large crowd.

OBITUARIES

David G. Coogan

David G. Coogan died Saturday, Jan. 15, 2005, at St. Clare's Hospital/Denville, New Jersey, following a brief illness. He was 82.

Born in Madison, N.J. he lived in Mountain Lakes for 19 years, before moving to Boonton 30 years ago.

Over a 50-year career, Mr. Coogan, a municipal bond specialist, worked for a number of companies, including his own, Coogan, Gilbert & Co., in Ridgewood, N.J. a company he co-founded and operated for ten years.

He retired in 1997 from Seelaus & Co., Summit.

He served as a captain with the Marine Corps during both World War II and the Korean Conflict.

He attended Brown University in Providence, R.I., and received his investment banking certificate from New York University in 1948.

He was a descendent of the family that owned Coogan's Bluff, former site of the old Polo Grounds, and his great-grandfather, Theodore Havemeyer, was the founder of the U.S. Golf Association.

He was a founding member of St. Catherine of Siena Church, Mountain Lakes, N.J., a founder and former co-chairman of the St. Clare's Harvest Festival, and served on the board of directors of the St. Clare's Hospital Foundation.

He was a former trustee of the Wilson School in Mountain Lakes, a past-president of the Mountain Lakes Club, and a member of the board of directors of the Rockaway River Country Club in Denville.

He volunteered as a driver with the American Cancer Society.

As an avid sportsman and former tennis professional in New York City, Mr. Coogan skied until he was 80, and as a proficient golfer, scored three holes-in-one.

He was a member of the U.S. Golf Association, the New Jersey Seniors Golf Association, the New Jersey Golf Association, and the Metropolitan Golf Association, and with the latter two, served as a rules official.

He was a member of the National Association of Securities Dealers and served on their Ethics Committee.

He was a member of the Mountain Lakes Squadron.

He leaves his wife of 55 years, Mary (Keating); a son, David G. Jr. of Palm Harbor, Fla.; three daughters, Mary C. Macina of Rockaway Township, Dede C. Beardsley of Boulder, Colo., and Patty Smith of Cohasset, Mass.; a brother, Richard of Studio City, Calif.; a sister, Patricia Lindsley of New York, N.Y.; ten grandchildren, Kelly and Maggie Coogan, Alexander, Jill and Emily Macina, Drew and Ali Beardsley, and Reed, Devin and Gordon Smith; and his great-granddaughter, Fiona Beardsley.

The funeral Liturgy was celebrated Wednesday, Jan. 19, at St. Catherine of Siena Church, Pocono Road, Mountain Lakes, with interment to follow at Greenwood Cemetery, Boonton.

The Mackey Funeral Home, 107 Essex Ave., Boonton, N.J. handled the arrangments.

Memorial contributions in Mr. Coogan's name may be made to either the St. Clare's Hospital Foundation, 75 Bloomfield Ave., Suite 16, Denville, N.J. 07834-2734 or to the Marine Corps Law Enforcement Fund, P.O. Box 37, Mountain Lakes, N.J 07046.

Peter G. Whitman

Peter G. Whitman 61, of Cohasset, died on, Jan. 16 2005 at the South Shore Hospital in Weymouth after a brief illness.

Mr. Whitman was born in Boston and was raised and educated in Hingham. He was a 1962 graduate of Hingham High School and was a Hingham resident until moving to Cohasset 33 years ago.

For the past 41 years, he was an institutional trader in the securities business. For the past 17 years, Mr. Whitman was associated with Bear Stearns & Company, Inc. of Boston and recently retired as Senior Managing Director of the firm.

He was a past president of the Cohasset Gridiron Club, a past president of Cohasset Little League and a member of the Cohasset Yacht Club.

An avid sports fan, he especially enjoyed fishing, horse racing, the New England Patriots and the Boston Red Sox.

He leaves his wife Blanche L. (Jones) Whitman of Cohasset; seven sons, Eric J. of Hull, Adam G. of Pembroke, Joel G. of Hanson, Joshua S. of Abington, Jason D. of Vero Beach, Fla., Mark E. of Boston and Chad W. of Holbrook.; three Joan G. Sullivan of Virginia Beach, Va., Nancy L. Blutt of Melrose, Susan G. Whitman of Weymouth; one brother Robert G. Whitman of Randolph.

He was the brother of the late David G. Whitman and the late Richard G. Whitman.

He also leaves nine grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

A Memorial Service will be conducted on Thursday, Jan. 20 at 11 a.m. at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset. The interment is to be private.

The Downing Cottage Funeral, Hingham, handled the arrangements.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in his memory to The Autism Center of the South Shore, 210 Winter St., Weymouth, MA 02188 or to The Cotting School, 453 Concord Ave., Lexington, MA 02421.

WORSHIP NOTES

Media program at St. Stephen's

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is again offering a faith-based program called Via Media starting Wednesday, Jan. 26 from 7-9 p.m.The objective is to create an open and inclusive environment that appeals to people wondering about how the Episcopal Church approaches issues of faith. People are encouraged to bring their ideas and questions, informational resources will be provided and a place to exchange your thoughts and voice your opinions.

Over a period of eight weeks, St. Stephen's invites those seeking a spiritual community to enter both the journey and the conversation. Each week will begin with dinner at 7 p.m. and will be followed by a short video. Small and large group discussions will allow you to share your thoughts, reactions and questions to the topics presented in the video.

Using this combination of learning styles, they will encounter the basic principles of Christianity through the Anglican approach of Scripture, Tradition, and Reason. All people are encouraged to ask questions, and to learn how to answer their questions of faith.

This program is open to the public and is free. They hope you will consider joining for dinner and conversation. To register, call St. Stephen's at 781-383-1083 no later than Jan. 24.

Shawl ministry

The Shawl Ministry of the South Shore, will meet on Saturday, Jan. 22, from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Trustees Meeting Room of the Hingham Public Library. The group meets the fourth Saturday of every month and is open to anyone interested in knitting or crocheting as a way to express the love of God to people in need of care. The sessions close with a blessing over the works in progress and the finished shawls. New participants are always welcome and can be taught the needlework basics if necessary. Rev. Victoria Gaskell is the facilitator.

Participants are welcome to create shawls for any person or project they desire.

Hingham Public Library is off Route 228 at 66 Leavitt St. The entrance is in the rear on the lower level and is handicapped accessible. For information call Gaskell days at 617-353-3036.

Knitters should bring size 11 or 13 needles and 3 skeins of yarn. Crocheters need a size M,N, or P hook and 4 skeins of yarn. For suggested yarns and more information about The Shawl Ministry go to www.shawlministry.com.

Second Congregational hosts book discussions

The Second Congregational Church located at 43 Highland Ave., in Cohasset, will be hosting a two-evening discussion series on the book: "The Gospel of Mary Magdalene" by Jean-Yves Leloup. The meetings will take place on Wednesday, Jan. 26, and Feb. 2, at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome...older teens, young adults, singles, couples and Seniors.

Come discuss a great book over a steaming hot cup of coffee. If you are interested in attending, contact the church office at 781-383-0345 or just stop in. Books are available for purchase at Buttonwood Books on Rt. 3A in Cohasset.

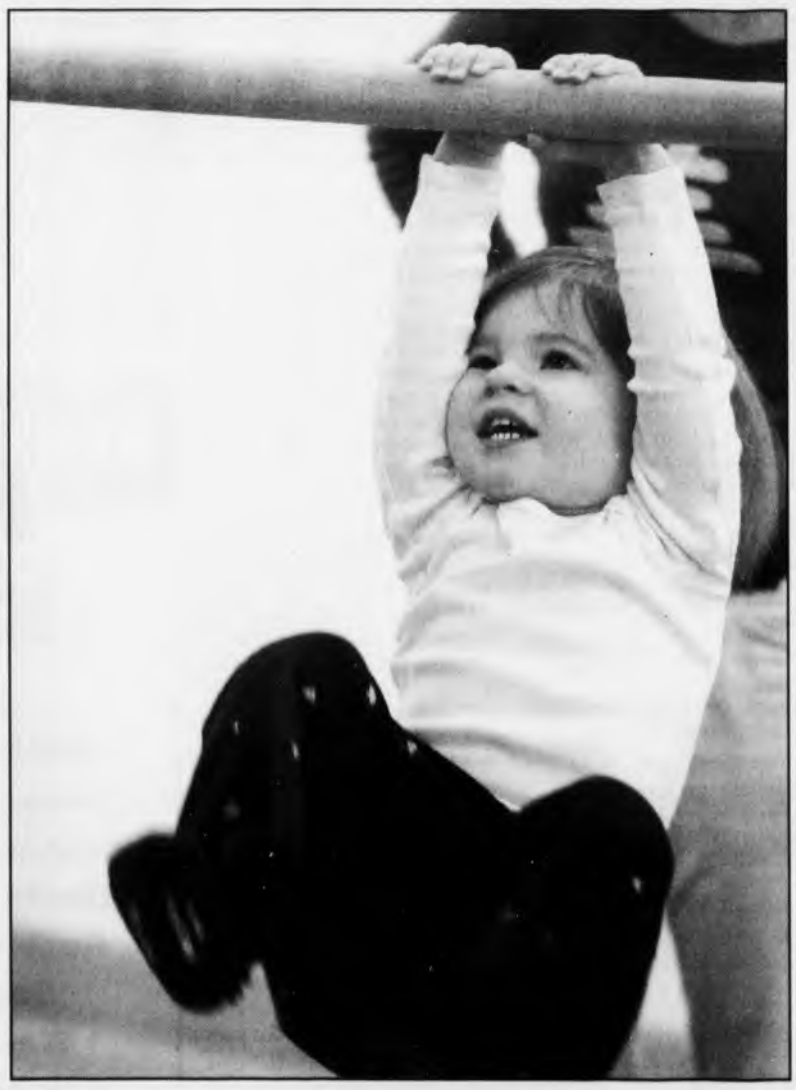
Just Gym Dandy!



Toddlers, tumblers roll around

Clockwise from top right, Jeffrey Blake and his twin sister, Maggie, 2-1/2, surprise their mom in Gym Dandy class at the South Shore Community Center. Children sit in the parachute as their parents help twirl them around. Kate Strong, 2, swings on the uneven bars. Lenna Pellegrini, 2-1/2 crawls through the tunnel. Christine Cunning watches as her daughter Kate, 2, crosses the bridge. Maxwell Jurgel, 2, screams out in joy as the kids make a tent out of the parachute.

BUSINESS NOTES

Music Circus Web site

The South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset announces the debut of its newly redesigned and expanded Web site.

In addition to providing access to show listings and ticket purchasing, the totally redesigned site (www.themusiccircus.org) features new and expanded content, including a photo gallery; more about the history of the Music Circus; answers to frequently asked questions about shows and the venue; and an Around Town section to help familiarize patrons with other local area businesses and activities.

Music Circus General Manager Vincent G. Longo says "We are excited about the redesign of our Web site, making it easier for our on-line visitors to interact with and learn more about our venue and our scheduled performances."

The site offers customers on-line opportunities to join either the Music Circus ticketing club; to sign up for e-mails featuring special offers, news alerts, contests, promotions and show updates; and to purchase gift certificates .

Cohasset Stop & Shop helps feed the hungry

The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company announced the Cohasset Stop & Shop Store raised $1,926 for the Cohasset Food Pantry and local food pantries to help provide hunger relief to area residents.

All Stop & Shop stores raised money this holiday season as part of the annual Food for Friends campaign. Through the sale of paper turkeys and fundraising events held at the stores, Stop & Shop associates and customers supported the effort to provide assistance to local hunger relief agencies. In total, Stop & Shop raised nearly $1.4 million to benefit local hunger relief agencies and Second Harvest Food Bank partners.

John W. Steinmetz is elected partner

John W. Steinmetz

The law firm of Robinson & Cole LLP announces the election of John W. Steinmetz to the partnership. "It gives me great pleasure to welcome to the partnership this talented lawyer," said Eric Daniels, Robinson & Cole's managing partner. LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

THE COMPLETE STORY

Completely-in-the-canal (CIC) hearing instruments offer the cosmetic advantage of being barely noticeable because they reside completely in the ear canal. Aside from cosmetics, CIC instruments also provide wearers with a hearing benefit. The placement of the instrument's microphone within the entrance of the ear canal most closely resembles the natural form and functioning of the ear's hearing system. Thus, the outer ear (pinna) is left free to perform the function for which nature designed it - to gather sound waves and funnel them into the ear canal and eardrum. As a result, CIC instruments enable users to better localize sounds. Among other things, this enhanced sound localization helps wearers hear conversations better in noisy environments.

You may have come to realize you need a hearing aid, but you might not be aware of the many kinds available. It takes the knowledge and experience of a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist to match your individual needs with exactly the appropriate device. We care about you and your hearing abilities here at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, and we'll use all our training, experience and resources to bring back the sounds of life to you. Call us at 781-337-1144 for an appointment at 534 Main St. (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, or at our office in Abington.

P.S. Completely-in-the-canal hearing instruments may not be suitable for those with compromised dexterity (due to arthritis, for example).

Cozumel goes all out with family-friendly Carnaval bash

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW

COZUMEL, Mexico -The words "Mardi Gras" and "family entertainment" don't often go together. But on the Mexican island of Cozumel, known as a snorkeling and diving destination, the pre-Lent "Carnaval" festival has become a kid-friendly extravaganza that celebrates civic pride and local traditions as well as giving tourists and natives alike a chance to let down their hair. The event æ this year from Feb. 11 to 16 æ is an extra treat for travelers to this small island, located off the Yucatan coast, south of Cancun. If the timing seems unusual æ after, instead of before, Ash Wednesday æ it's because there was a scheduling conflict this year with the State Constitutional Elections. Carnaval, traditionally the period before Lent, long has been marked in the Catholic country of Mexico, but Cozumelenos (as island residents are called) have been adding their own traditions and customs for nearly 100 years. "Carnaval is one of Cozumel's grandest celebrations. Families and businesses prepare many months in advance for the parades and dance competitions," said Fernando Ferrez, a 20-year Carnaval planner and historian. "It's a wonderful time for visitors to come to Cozumel."

Even the very young participate in the 'Carnaval' celebrations in Cozumel, Mexico.

Exotic themes and shimmering costumes mark the floats in one of the 'Carnaval' parades in Cozumel, Mexico.

HERALD PHOTOS BY STEPHANIE SCHOROW

Children in brightly colored costumes participate in the Children's Parade in Cozumel, Mexico.

Visitors who arrive by ferry or cruise ship will know something special is planned when they step off the dock near the main thoroughfare of San Miguel, Cozumel's only town and the hub of activity. Dozens of mammoth, brightly painted heads line the boardwalk, their glittering eyes and flamboyant turbans setting the tone for the days to come. Schools, clubs and families feverishly work to sew costumes, choreograph and practice dance routines and build floats for a series of parades, competitions and balls. Night-owl visitors can get a close-up view of this all-out community spirit by venturing out of the tourist zone to attend the main dance competition Feb. 11 in the oddly named Moby Dick convention hall, a short cab ride from the hotel zone. The event begins at 11:45 p.m., so be prepared for a long night (it goes on for hours). Cost: $8 U.S. Rivalry is fierce but friendly; dance teams include parents, grandparents, youngsters, teenagers and more than a few awkward boys, slightly uncomfortable in sequin and satin but trying gamely to keep up with their older sisters. Presiding over the event are the King and Queen of the festival, chosen every year.

But you don't have to stay up all night to enjoy Carnaval. Indeed, you should get an early jump on staking out a viewing spot for the main parades, which begin, more or less, as the sun is setting along San Miguel's main waterfront thoroughfare. Well before nightfall, the waterfront begins to fill with paradegoers, sometimes painted or bejeweled for the occasion. In a roar of glitter and pounding music, floats and dance teams pass through downtown, tossing candy and beads into the excited crowd. Float themes range from traditional to contemporary. An Egyptian-themed float might come after a faux Chinese pagoda or an homage to the late great salsa singer Celia Cruz followed by a motorized "Mad Cow" that makes children scream with delight. The shimmy and shake of the enthusiastic participants rock the floats so much that if they were boats on water they would be in danger of sinking. But although the costumes are often skimpy, the parade is strictly rated PG. What might be more jarring to American eyes is the tradition of performing in blackface with bushy wigs or polka-dot scarves. The masquerade of "Negritos" reflects the history of Carnaval, when many early celebrants blackened their faces as a kind of mask. Some of the island's dance groups still follow the custom.

Three parades will be held Feb. 12, 13 and 15; and the award ceremony for crowning the King and Queen of Carnaval will be held Feb. 16 at Benito Juarez Park, which is near the waterfront. Not to be missed is the children's parade, which begins at 5 p.m. on Feb. 14 and puts the "ah" in adorable. Additionally, through the week, dance groups congregate in San Miguel's main square or on side streets for spontaneous performances. In Cozumel, even if you don't go to Carnaval, Carnaval will come to you.

If you go

What to see: Cozumel has white-sand beaches, world-class hotels and restaurants, a golf course and Mayan ruins. It is also a popular port of call for cruise ships. Getting There: Several airlines offer direct flights to Cozumel via hubs such as Dallas and Charlotte, N.C. You also can get to the island from Cancun via a short flight or on one of the nearly hourly ferries out of Playa del Carmen. For more information: Go to www.isla-cozumel.com.mx

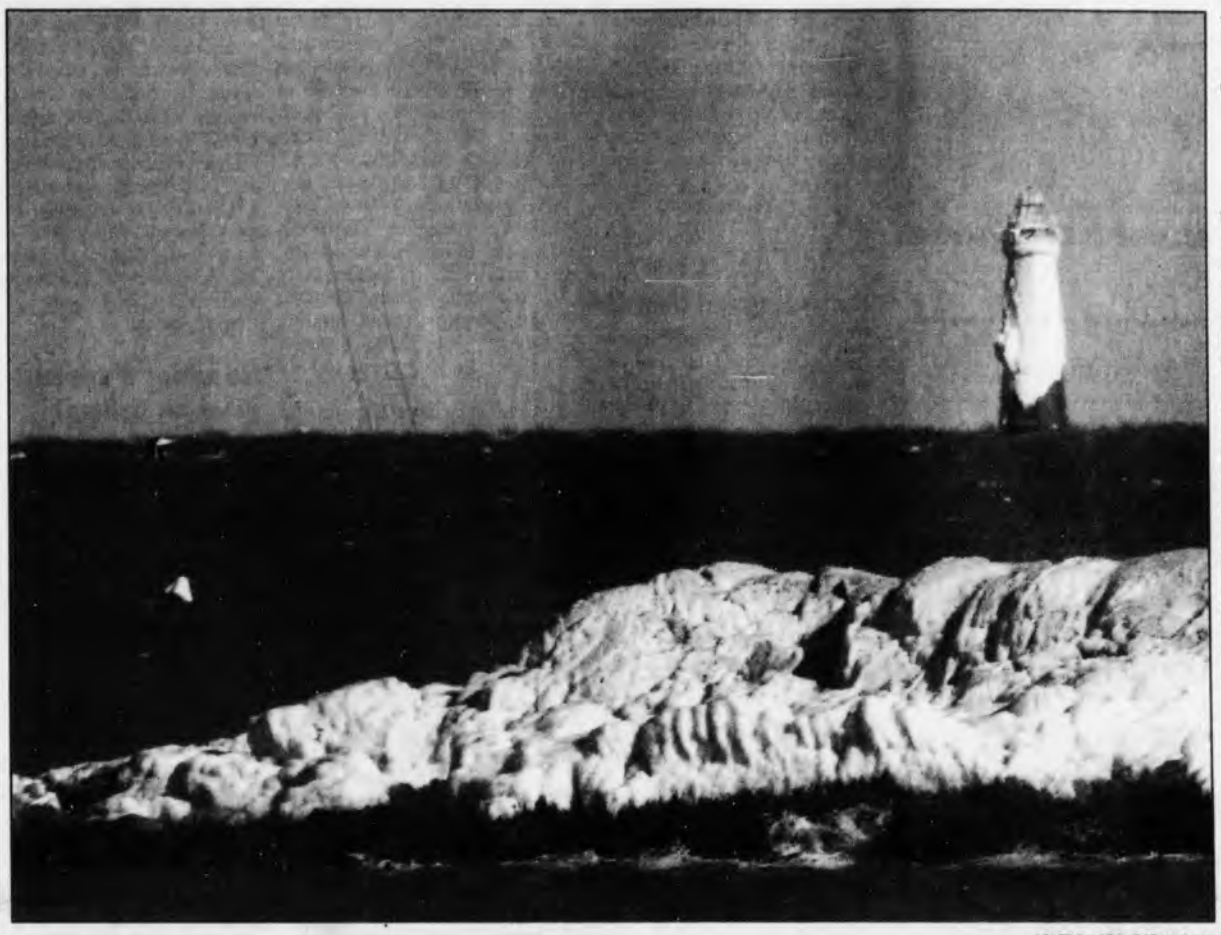
McMorris won't seek fourth term

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM



Selectman Ronnie McMorris has announced she will not be seeking a fourth term at the April Town Election. Selectman Fred Koed, who had been mum on his plans, said he will seek reelection and planned to pull papers today (Friday).

McMorris' announcement should create some election excitement for the Board of Selectmen as "open seats," meaning those being vacated by an incumbent, usually draw interest from potential candidates who might not want to challenge someone running for reelection.

After nine years of service on the board, during which time she spent several years as Chairman, McMorris said her life has changed very much, and the time has come to concentrate on other things. She said last weekend, with everyone snowed in, she had a lot of time to think about where she wants her life to go, and at this point, serving on the board

Location, location, location!

While those three words are usually reserved for Realtors selling a hot property, they also pertain to a rather larger piece of real estate – Cohasset.

The rocky ledges that provide so much character and beauty to this coastal town, may also keep the community from suffering the similar fate of its neighbors, Scituate and Hull, whose Nor'easter stories fill history books.

This past weekend's blizzard and subsequent snowstorm Wednesday while draining snow removal monies and tiring out DPW workers and contractors – luckily turned out to be a problem but not a catastrophe.

Case in point is a report from David Graves, spokesman for Mass Electric that serves Cohasset, which responded to four separate power outage incidents during the weekend blizzard affecting roughly 66 customers.

Schools seek 8 percent hike

Salaries make up 70 percent of $13M

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Planning for the fiscal year 2006 budget has the school department relying on its new Strategic Plan to build a needs based budget from the bottom up. A draft of the budget to date currently reveals an 8.1 percent increase from FY05, which will focus on maintaining class size, ensuring currency in curriculum, expanding the pre-k and kindergarten programs and increasing professional development opportunities.

School Financial Assistant Karen Park said currently, the FY06 proposed operating budget is $13,081,447, an increase of $981,397 from what was appropriated in FY05. Although the actual needs of the district total $14,122,142, various offsets including circuit breaker reimbursement from the state for special education, Medicaid reimbursement, grants which cover salaries, new potential grants for the proposed kindergarten and preschool programs, as well as their tuition charges, reduce the department's needs by $1,040,695.

Park said of the proposed increase, 4.3 percent, or $517,775 would need to be spent on out of district tuition increases for special education. "Any other increase is only 3.8 percent over the FY05

Student center gets grant

Roy Herzfelder presents award

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Since its doors opened in the summer of 2003, the Center for Student Coastal Research has been providing young scholars with the resources to conduct research in biology. Now, word about the good work at the Center as spread beyond the borders of Cohasset.

The state recognized the Center's accomplishments by presenting the non-profit organization with $27,000 in grants at a ceremony last Friday.

Through the Coastal Nonpoint Source Pollution (CNPS) Grant Program, Secretary of Environmental Affairs Ellen Roy Herzfelder can award grants to various South Shore coastal communities which are taking steps to address critical water quality problems.

Friday's recipients included the CSCR, Massachusetts Bay Estuary Association, and North and South Rivers Watershed Association. The event also attracted local legislators, state Sen. Robert Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley.

The Center for Student Coastal Research, located on Parker Ave in the former Hagerty House building, provides a laboratory setting on the water for students to conduct various coastal research project, providing data which has been used by both the town and the state. By receiving the $16,000 grant from the state, students will be given funding to assess, identify, and characterize non-point source pollution within a sub-watershed of the Gulf River in Scituate and Cohasset.

"It is a vital resource for our community," said Herzfelder of the Gulf River. The Center will also receive locally matched funds of roughly $7,000 for the project from local organizations such as the Cohasset Education Foundation, and Gulf Association.

Non-point source pollutants include fertilizers, oil, grease, and toxic chemicals carried by runoff, sediment from construction sites, salt from irrigation practices, and bacteria and nutrient loads from livestock, pet waste, and faulty septic systems. Full day kindergarten information coming

As the liaison to the Osgood School Council, School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts said she has been attending meetings and has heard the concerns of many parents, who would like more information on the possibility of a tuition-based, full-day kindergarten, which has been proposed by the school department.

"There are some parents who will have a child in kindergarten in the fall of 2005, and some need more information about the pros and cons of full-day kindergarten," said Tebbetts, adding that information is in the process of being compiled.

"Rest assured," she said that in the weeks ahead the schools will be able to offer much more detailed information about the possibility of offering the program, including educational and financial implications.

Half-day kindergarten will continued to be offered at no charge, school officials said.

New swings at Deer Hill

School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said new swings, installed in December behind the Deer Hill School, will be ready for action this spring. The project, which was completed as a result of fund-raising from the Deer Hill PSO, and generous donations from the Clark Chatterton Fund and residents Hap Pompeo and Mark Picot, will result in a much needed new set of equipment for children in grades three through five.

Adams scholarship recipients announced

Nineteen Cohasset High School seniors were recognized at the Jan. 20 School Committee meeting, as they have been named recipients of the John and Abigail Adams Scholarship, available for the first time to this year's graduating class. According to the Department of Education, the Adams Scholarship provides a tuition waiver for eight traditional semesters of undergraduate education at the University of Massachusetts, the seven state colleges, or 15community colleges. In order to use the tuition waivers, students must first apply to the colleges or universities and be accepted. Students who receive the Adams Scholarship must complete their college studies in four years or less and maintain a 3.0 grade point average. The scholarship is awarded based on the student's MCAS performance as well as class rank.

Recipients include: Matt Casey, Cecelia Chapman, Elizabeth Condos, Jeannette Daley, Jim DeGiacomo, Alison Fludder, Lucy Gardner, John Grimm, Danielle Hajjar, Andrew Jerz, Lindsey Kennedy, Molly Kirk, Jonathan Littauer, Toby Norman, Molly Ogrodnik, John Roth, Mary Silvia, Elizabeth Stone, and Christina St. Pierre.

Snow postpones budget summit

The budget summit, which was slated for Wednesday, Jan. 26, was cancelled due to the snow. The meeting will be rescheduled for an evening next week at 7:30 in the Selectmen's meeting room at Town Hall. Members of the Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee and School Committee will be present at the meeting, as will new Town Manager Bill Griffin. All are welcome to attend.

Please call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for the date, which was not available by press time.

Town receives recycling grant

The Executive Office of Environmental Affairs and Department of Environmental Protection have awarded the town a Municipal Recycling Grant. Cohasset will be receiving 20 home composting bins and 20 kitchen scrap buckets, valued at $669. Since 1990, the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs and DEP have granted more than $41 million in recycling equipment, household hazardous waste equipment, educational materials, and technical assistance to municipalities throughout the Commonwealth.

No sewer treatment plant on ballpark

Chairman of the Board of Health Steve Bobo said his board has no intention of trying to build a sewer treatment plant on the Beechwood Ball Park. Renovations are planned for the park which will make much needed improvements to the site, and Bobo said he hopes the contractors responsible for the upgrade will only consider the value of the property, which is a great site for a leeching field. Treated water could serve as irrigation for the field, making the area very environmentally friendly. "You can plan for something like that and decrease costs," he said. Bobo said he is very interested in holding a public meeting with the residents of the Beechwood area of town, as many people are interested in providing input for the project. For more information, please contact the Board of Health office at (781) 383-4116.

Ballpark committee

A committee to help finalize plans for renovations to the Beechwood Ballpark was appointed by Selectmen Tuesday night. There will be nine voting members on the committee and five alternate members who will be available to assist as needed. Voting members include Ronnie McMorris, Merle Brown, Glenn Pratt, Adrienne MacCarthy, Faye Sargent, Nancy Snowdale, Fred Siegel, Lillian Curley, and Lynne DeGiacomo. Assistant members include Jack Worley, Michael Buckley, Carl Sestito, Ron Ford, and Steve Bobo.

Strategic planning volunteers sought

The school department has sent out materials on the strategic planning initiative for the district, which outlines various goals for the future. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said it is critical to have community input moving forward, especially as the fiscal year 2006 budget process gets underway. There will be a meeting to discuss strategic planning Feb. 8. Anyone interested in being part of the process is encouraged to contact the superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111, or via e-mail at dwalsh@cohassetk12.org.

Sale of surplus ladder truck

The sale of the 1978 Seagrave Aerial Ladder Truck was completed on Friday, Jan. 7, 2005. The ladder truck was purchased and driven away by William J. Horan of Rockwell City, Iowa. The payment of $5,000 had previously been wired to the town's bank account with confirmation to the Town Treasurer.

ZBA vacancy

Jane Goedecke has resigned from the Zoning Board of Appeals, leaving one vacant seat on the board. Residents who would like to be considered for the position are asked to send a letter of interest to the Board of Selectmen at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

Co-chair: Cost of post-prom party decorations overstated

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A resident involved with planning decorations for last year's post-prom party says her committee worked diligently to cut costs.

Susan Turgiss, co-chairman of the 2004 post prom decorating committee (a sub-committee of the post prom committee) said the $20,000 figure for decorations tossed about at the Jan. 13 School Committee meeting, which was also reported in last week's Mariner, is incorrect.

During discussion at that School Committee meeting — which included Principal Jack DeLorenzo, Assistant Principal Michael Gill, members of the School Committee and a new group of senior parents who would like to use the high school for this year's party — it was stated the former decorating committee had spent $20,000 on decorations for a night which ended with some members of the senior class getting drunk and pulling a fire alarm to break out of the school.

Both School Committee members Rick Flynn and Adrienne MacCarthy chaperoned the event. Both administrators and members of the School Committee said they were not sure they could allow the event to be held on school property again this year after last year's events.

But Turgiss, who did not attend the School Committee meeting but has received numerous phone calls from upset parents who read the Mariner story, said the cost for the entire event was less than $10,000 which included roughly $3,600 for decorations, roughly $4,000 on entertainment, as well as the mandated cost of fire and police department presence. Turgiss said the committee left a roughly $4,400 balance to be used by the following class.

"The decorating committee, a wonderful, caring, cross-section of about 30 parents, was shocked by the amount recorded in the article and saddened to think that the readers now think we would be so indulgent. This is so far from the truth," Turgiss said.

The post-prom party, which has been a tradition for the past eight years, is held from 11 p.m. until 5 a.m. on the night of the senior prom. Following the dance, prom-goers head to Cohasset High School where parents have transformed the cafeteria, gymnasium, and upper lobby area with decorations. There has also been a food area, dance area, a "chill room" with a video playing, a casino/game area, a gym with a moonwalk, and a few other theme areas.

"The decorating committee, a wonderful, caring, cross-section of about 30 parents, was shocked by the amount recorded in the article and saddened to think that the readers now think we would be so indulgent."

— Susan Turgiss, 2004 decorating committee

Parents working on the 2004 post prom party "met their goal through creativity, hard work, and borrowed materials from supportive merchants and citizens. The decorating committee also cleaned the school afterward," Turgiss said. She added all the materials were approved by the fire department and can easily be reused by the next senior class. In 2004 parents agreed there was no need for extravagance and wanted to leave money in the budget for the following years, Turgiss said.

"The negative publicity caused by the actions of a small group of students has been upsetting for the rest of the class who voiced they were appreciative of the post-prom party. Unfortunately, those voices have not been heard," Turgiss said.

While Turgiss acknowledges there will be some students who will try to get away with drinking at the event, she explained many parents were not aware of any inappropriate behavior until weeks later. Turgiss said parents of intoxicated students should have been notified that night so they could pick their son or daughter up. The main priority of the event is safety of the students, she said.

Turgiss, who did not chaperone last year's party but has in past years, doesn't think future senior classes should be penalized for the actions of a minority of students at last year's party.

"We're all working really hard to be good parents," Turgiss said. "No one wants their child to be intoxicated at an event or act inappropriately toward a chaperone.

"It's a very positive event the parents and kids really appreciate. We have great attendance, sometimes 100 percent, and it shows you the kids are buying into this."

If there are problems which need to be ironed out, Turgiss said last year's committee is willing to work with the new committee to come up with suggestions. She said there are also many parents of last year's seniors who have been through the post-prom experience and would be willing to help chaperone this year's event.

"I love kids and I have a lot of faith in them," said Turgiss, who adds there needs to be a strong chaperone presence and potentially a police presence to ensure if anything does happen, there are plenty of adults to handle the situation.

However, she said the students need their space to have fun and enjoy themselves. "Kids are kids and if you turn it into a military experience, they won't come," she said.

Storm keeps snow budget in the red

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Before last weekend's snow storm, Town Manager Michael Buckley said he received a memo from Department of Public Works Superintendent Carl Sestito, which informed him the department was $4,733 overdrawn from its $45,000 snow and ice control budget. However, with the weather the way it has been in town, both last weekend and again during Wednesday's additional snowfall, Buckley said he wouldn't be surprised if together the two storms cost the town $100,000.

Under state law, towns are able to overspend their snow removal budgets. The money can be made up through free cash or the town's reserve fund, Buckley said.

Buckley said because a state of emergency was declared as a result of the weekend storm, Governor Mitt Romney has requested $10 million to help with storm cleanup efforts. "We may need to get on the horn," with state Rep. Garrett Bradley and state Sen. Robert Hedlund, he said.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said for the amount of snow the town received, he was amazed at how quickly the DPW was able to clear the streets. "They did an incredible job," he said, adding downtown Cohasset was in very good shape when he went through Tuesday. "To be cleaned up in a day and a half is really commendable," he said.

Buckley echoed Sullivan's sentiments and said he too couldn't believe the cleanup was done so quickly, and added members of the department worked extremely hard, completing one 24-hour work day, followed by at least another 18 to 20 hour day. In addition, crews were back on the job clearing snow Wednesday morning.

As a result of the snow, Town Hall was closed all day Monday per the Governor's orders, to help keep people off the streets to allow more time to clean up. Only essential personnel, such as Buckley and a few others came in to work. In addition, Wednesday's storm caused those employees who live in far away towns such as Plymouth or Pembroke to be sent home early, and Buckley closed Town Hall for the day at 2 p.m.

McMorris won't run, but Koed will seek reelection will have to take a back seat.

"It's kind of amazing to me to look back over the nine years," she said, adding at the time she was originally elected, she had young children in the school system and one of her main objectives in getting elected was an interest in working with the Parent School Organization. She said it has been wonderful to see the town through the building of the Osgood School and the renovations to the Deer Hill School and middle high school. She said it has been quite a process to see the phases progress and watch the town "tackle a laundry list of projects. I'm very glad to have been a part of it," she said.

Now, with three of her four children off at college, she said her situation is very different than it was when she came on board, and she is finding her priorities are changing. She said her friend has recently opened Rooms In Bloom in downtown Cohasset, and she has been helping get the business off the ground. But she has always enjoyed being involved with politics at the local level, and said she may not rule it out again in the future, although she must put it on hold for now.

"It has been a great privilege to serve on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen and I want to thank everyone for the opportunity. I would also like to thank my family and my friends for all the support, especially during the campaigns," she said.

"It has been a great privilege to serve on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen and I want to thank everyone for the opportunity."
— Selectman Ronnie McMorris

Fellow members of the Board of Selectmen wished McMorris well and said they would be sorry to see her go.

"You were a big influence on whether I'd run (for selectman) or not," said Selectman Rob Spofford, who will soon complete his first year on the board. He told her she "sets high standards," for everyone on the board, and time and time again, "I have seen you put the community ahead of your own personal interests," he said.

Spofford added even when they haven't seen eye to eye, he always felt he could disagree in a collegial manner. "I'm very sorry to hear this," he said of her departure from the board.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan echoed Spofford's sentiments. "It has been a pleasure to work with you," he said, and thanked McMorris for her service to the town, as did Selectman Fred Koed. "We wish you the best of luck in your future endeavors," Koed said.

McMorris said she hopes with her departure from the board, another mother with children in the school system will step up to fill that role. However, Sullivan joked they know where to find her if they ever need her. "I'm changing my number," McMorris quipped.

In other election news, Pamela Wilson, 80 N. Main St., has pulled papers for the one year remaining of Chartis Tebbetts' term. Tebbetts recently resigned from the School Committee.

Nomination papers for the Annual Town Election for 2005 are available at the Town Clerk's Office. The last day to take out nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 17. In order to hold an elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. Please note that you are not running for office until you take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies your signatures.

Valentine Tea Party at Senior Center

A Valentine Tea Party will be held Friday, Feb. 11 at 2 p.m. at Second Congregational Church, Bates Hall.

The event is sponsored by Cohasset Elder Affairs and will feature Marie Frasier Dunn, Tea Historian, Specialist, and Lecturer who will present an afternoon Tea Seminar, including History of Tea, Legend of Tea, Customs of Tea, Tea Leaf Readings, The Finale. Tea and desert will be served.

Call 781-383-9112 or come into the center to sign up. As seats will be limited. All seniors welcome.

There is more to a nice cup of tea then people are aware of. Tea has played a part of History, Health, and even Politics.

School Committee wishes Tebbetts well

School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts, who recently announced her intention to resign from the board before the expiration of her term, received many warm wishes from fellow members at her last meeting Thursday, Jan. 20.

School Committee Chairman Rick Shea recalled the first time he met Tebbetts – at a neighbor's tea. At that point, he said Tebbetts was very involved with politics at the state level, and he said as a result, "no one knows the state regulations better than Chartis." He said her expertise has been a wonderful resource, as many of the issues they discuss on the board deal with decisions made by the state. "In a short time, I guess I'll be joining you on the sidelines," he said, as he will not run for re-election in April.

Member Rick Flynn, who came on board at the same time as Tebbetts roughly six years ago, presented Tebbetts with flowers to mark the occasion, saying things wouldn't be the same without her. "I will definitely miss Chartis on the committee," he said.

Member Jamie Williams, who will soon complete her first year on the board, said in the short time she has been a member, she has come to know Tebbetts on both a professional and personal level, and said not only have they worked well together, they have become great friends, and Tebbetts' presence will be greatly missed.

Member Adrienne MacCarthy, who came on board at the same time as Williams, said as a new member, she will greatly miss having Tebbetts there to share her expertise. "I will really miss learning from her," she said.

Supt. Denise Walsh echoed the board's sentiments and said Tebbetts is a woman she greatly admires. She said she sees Tebbetts as an advocate not only for the children who attend Cohasset schools, but the community as a whole. "I always say, positions are filled, but people are never replaced," she said.

Selectmen want town to speak with one voice on wastewater

Want sewer meetings televised

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Several town officials held a powwow with the Department of Environmental Protection last Friday to talk about the town's plans to tackle its wastewater problems.

Although held behind closed doors — the gist of the discussion was a topic at Tuesday's selectmen's meeting — where Selectman Rob Spofford stressed the various town boards need to get on the same page in dealing with wastewater issues.

Members of the Board of Selectmen, Sewer Commission, and Board of Health attended the DEP meeting in Boston. While Selectmen say they would like to speak with Town Counsel before reporting back on the specifics — which includes the town's plans for sewering the Little Harbor area — the DEP talks may lead to the drafting of a new "master plan" on wastewater issues.

The town is under a court order, dubbed the Second Amended Final Judgment, to come up with a plan to solve its wastewater problems that date back more than 25 years. Selectmen and Town Counsel have said the town has a plan and therefore meets the requirements of the Judgment. But in a recent letter to Selectmen, the DEP said it finds the town's current wastewater plan "woefully inadequate," and it has also not been implemented. DEP said it would like to meet with town officials to discuss the matter.

Spofford said with boards acting independently and not in a cohesive manner, it makes it difficult to move forward with the wastewater issues.

Selectmen think combining the existing Wastewater Committee with the proposed Sewer Study Committee —floated last fall but not appointed — could be a positive step.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said members of the Wastewater Committee have been working diligently to compile information regarding the wastewater in town, and it make sense for the new committee to build on that information.

He said the town is still looking for three residents to participate on the Sewer Study Committee, which will also include the current Wastewater Committee as well as members of the Board of Selectmen, Planning Board, Advisory Committee and Sewer Commission.

Sullivan said it is the intention to have a committee where every board which has a stake in the future wastewater plans of the town can participate because the town needs to bring a coordinated vision forward to the state.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer praised the work of the Wastewater Committee, but said its analysis has not been as quantitative as he would have liked. He hopes this new committee will be able to expand on the work which has already been done.

Spofford said he thinks forming this committee, "is a great first step," but reminded the board it must be careful not to step on the toes of any other boards. "I don't think we'd appreciate the Planning Board or any others coming in to oversee the work we should be doing," he said.

He added as long as Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz is in favor of the committee, he thinks it is a great idea. However, Spofford reiterated that moving forward, the town will need a Wastewater Master Plan which will be much more detailed than the Wastewater Management Plan the Wastewater Committee has been working on. He said in the Sewer Commission's charge, it is responsible for coming up with a Wastewater Master Plan, and "If the Sewer Commission doesn't have the time or the inclination, we need to find someone to help them complete their work," he said.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she wants wastewater issues brought to the forefront for more public vetting, suggesting the Sewer Commission should hold its meetings in the Selectmen's meeting room in front of the cameras.

"The Sewer Commission needs to meet here with the cameras so the residents can follow. Everyone needs to be involved and understand," she said.

Members of the Board of Selectmen, Board of Health and Sewer Commission are slated to meet with the DEP again Feb. 22 in Boston. The Board of Selectmen will meet with Town Counsel next Tuesday, Feb. 1 in executive session to discuss the first meeting with the DEP and may come out of executive session to give an update that night. For more information, please contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Schools seek 8 percent budget hike appropriated amount," she said, or $463,622.

Salaries make up 71 percent of the proposed FY06 budget, and total $9,311,814, which does not include any raises for teachers at this time. The school department is currently in the process of negotiating teacher contracts. However, Park said raises for administrators, who did not receive an increase in salary last year, have been factored in.

The proposed FY06 budget for the Osgood School totals $1,697,677, and includes the addition of a tuition-based full-day kindergarten program as well as a new preschool to be run by the school. It will cost $15,000 to begin the preschool program. In order to accommodate for the kindergarten program, Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan is asking for one additional kindergarten teacher.

Sheehan is also asking for an additional grade one teacher and funding for a grade two teaching position which is currently being paid for with funds raised by a parent organization. She said by adding the grade one teacher and keeping the grade two teacher on board it will help keep class size down — one of the initiatives of the Strategic Plan.

Total teacher salaries in the Osgood budget total $1,149,089. In addition, salaries which have been factored in include $120,097for the principal and secretary, $202,106 for instructional aides, one clerical aide, and one activity aide salaries total; $54,053 for the librarian salary and $62,198 for an adjustment counselor.

The proposed FY06 Deer Hill budget is $1,711,692 and its budget also has to accommodate for a teaching position which was paid for during the last budget season with funds raised by a parent organization. The total teacher salary budget is $1,213,520. Other salaries include the principal and secretary at $117,646, one library aide and two activity aides as well as instructional aides for $232,227, and an adjustment counselor at $59,235.

Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley is also looking for $1,971 for student activities and awards. He said he would like to purchase incentive awards for the reading and math programs as well as end of the year certificates. In addition, he said he sometimes students are rewarded with a lunch with the principal, and he would like to be able to give out a "principal's medal" to those students.

Other items in the Deer Hill budget include $12,370 for instructional materials, and $3,600 for professional development.

The middle high school went through some changes this year, as the sixth grade moved up from the Deer Hill school, turning grades six through eight into a true middle school. Middle-high school principal Jack DeLorenzo said in light of the changes, he is recommending an assistant principal for the middle school.

In addition, because the number of students in the middle school continues to grow every year, DeLorenzo is recommending an additional guidance counselor. He said with three grades in the middle school, there is a ratio of 380 to one with the present staff, and additional help is needed.

At the high school, DeLorenzo said due to increased enrollment as well as new state regulations, he would like to be able to offer more course choices. He recommended changing the senior English course to a semester instead of three quarters, which would enable the school to add semester English electives, to better prepare students for the future. In addition, with changes to the MCAS test fast approaching, DeLorenzo said the school would like to begin implementing the requirement of two years of US history, which will allow the school to meet state frameworks, as well as prepare students for the US history MCAS test, which will be piloted this May.

In addition, DeLorenzo said the school would like to add three math courses, including AP statistics, AP computer science, and principals of finance. Statistics has been offered for the past two semesters and is very popular with the students, and the staff has a strong interest in advancing the course to the advanced level. When a previous teacher retired, the AP computer science course went with him, and at this time DeLorenzo said the school feels it has the staff available to teach the course, as well as the student interest. Financial planning for students who will be going off to college is something the school would love to be able to offer, which is why it would like to begin a principals of finance course.

To accommodate for the proposed changes, DeLorenzo said the school is requesting a math/science teaching position and an English/social studies teaching position. The exact need will be determined once students have made their course selections. The total teacher salary line item in the proposed budget for the middle high school is $3,320,589.

To date, the FY06 budget is not yet finalized, and there will be much discussion before the April 2 Town Meeting where residents will be asked to approve it. A budget summit, slated for Wednesday night, at which the Advisory Committee, School Committee and Board of Selectmen were planning to attend, was cancelled due to the weather and will be rescheduled for sometime next week. For more information, please contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105 or the Superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

LET IT SNOW!

Let it snow, let it snow, let it snow! Ok, even I am getting a bit tired of all of this but it is very pretty, don't you think? This weekend is supposed to be snow-free and we can get most of our snow issues resolved. The DPW, Police and Fire Departments and all of the extra contracted people who have worked these storms should all be commended on a lot of long, hard and tiring days and nights but a great job being done by all. I know for some of us in town, the work is not done as quickly as you would like or when you want it done but the overall job by everyone has been great.

Please make sure to keep all walkways, driveways and other areas that may be used by mailmen, paper deliverers and others as well as not sitting in your cars while it is running. We need to work together to keep everyone as safe as we can. Also, make sure that your children understand how important it is to stay safe around the roads as it is so hard to see with some of the piles and drifts. Just remember as I said last week, only a few more months until Spring.....

DEAN'S LIST

Congratulations go out to Amanda D. Watts, a member of the class of 2006 and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Watts as she was named to the dean's list for the first semester at Saint Anselm College in Manchester, New Hampshire. Amanda maintained a 3.0 or higher GPA. Super work Amanda, keep it up.

Also earning college honors is Cohasset's Jason P. Moore, who is a student at Champlain College in Burlington, Vt. Jason, a CHS graduate and son of Robert and Margaret Moore, has been named to the dean's list for the fall semester. Jason is enrolled in Champlain's business program. Congratulations, Jason!

HONOR SOCIETY

Christopher P. Barber, a senior at Boston College High School, was among the 80 seniors and juniors inducted into the Robert J. Fulton, S.J. Chapter of the National Honor Society at an evening ceremony January 10 at Boston College High School's McNeice Pavilion. Congratulations to you Christopher for this honor.

COOKIE DRIVE

The Girl Scout Cookie Drive is still in full force. The scouts will be selling door to door during this time and make sure to look for the girl's at Stop and Shop during January and February school vacation week. You may also contact Beth Marsden-Gilman at 383-1811 or Lorraine Healey at 781-923-1212 to order directly if no one comes by!! Thank you for supporting the Girls Scouts!

WINE DINNER BENEFIT

Who says that Cohasset rolls up the sidewalks at dusk? - not on the harbor! Atlantica will host a wine dinner to benefit Our World, Children's Global Discovery Museum on Thursday, Feb. 3 at 7 p.m. This will be held at the Atlantica Restaurant at 44 Border Street and will have a Chef's Wine Dinner featuring a four course meal - each course matched with a glass of wine. Also on hand will be a wine and food expert to discuss each course. This event will benefit Our Word, Children's Global Discovery Museum in Cohasset and tickets are:$75 per person. To reserve a ticket, please call Atlantica 781-383-0900.

MARK YOUR CALENDAR

The Red Cross has scheduled the next Cohasset Community Blood Drive for Wednesday, Feb. 2, The Blood Drive will be at St. Anthony Parish Center at the corner of South Main St. and Summer St. from 1 to 7 p.m. As in the past, baby-sitting will be provided from 3 to 5 p.m. Ample parking is available.

The Red Cross always counts on a good turnout when it visits Cohasset so please respond, if possible, when a volunteer from one of the church, civic, corporate or social organizations calls. New donors are welcome and especially needed. To register and make an appointment for donating at a specific time or if you have any questions, call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290. You can also call the Red Cross at 1-800-448-3543.

That is all the news this snow-filled week. Send me anything that you would like to see printed in this column no later than Tuesdays by noon.

Center for Student Coastal Research gets grant award

tion is a great concern, Herzfelder said.

The Gulf River project grant will fund a student-centered water quality assessment, analysis and research of NPS pollution control in the Gulf River, as well as an ongoing public education and outreach program. In addition to the $16,000, the state also awarded a second non-point source pollution grant to the CSCR for $11,500, which will pay for training, enabling students to better perform their duties.

"There is so much pressure on our coastal resources," said Herzfelder, adding she recognizes the work students are conducting at Center for Student Coastal Research is producing much needed reports on the health of the town's environment.

"We all know how beautiful it is," she said of the coastal landscape of Cohasset, adding it is wonderful to see the town proactively working toward maintain that beauty. "Congratulations. You deserve some credit for all you have done," Herzfelder said.

Center president Jack Buckley, who is also a teacher at Cohasset High School, said receiving the grants "represents an acknowledgment of our success and of the model we've created. It's a great opportunity to expand student involvement much more on a year-round basis."

Buckley also said he had only anticipated receiving one grant, but at the ceremony when the Center was presented with two, he couldn't have been more thrilled. "I am doubly excited," he said.

"Congratulations. You deserve some credit for all you have done."

—Ellen Roy Herzfelder, Secretary of Environmental Affairs

However, receiving the funds to complete water quality assessments means students at the Center have a long road ahead.

"The good news is, we got the grant. The bad news is, we got the grant," joked Buckley, as the Center must now tackle some ambitious projects head-on. However, he said the experience for the students is worth all the hard work.

"This gets the kids involved in doing some real scientific work," said Buckley, adding students realize it is not a class project, but an authentic assessment which will be used by the town, so they must learn how to complete all testing properly and compile real results.

"This represents a challenge for us, but it will give the kids the experience and training they will need to yield a valuable product."

In addition to the Center for Student Coastal Research, Herzfelder presented grants to both the Massachusetts Bay Estuary Association and North and South Rivers Watershed Association in the amount of $10,000 and $35,000, respectively.

Grant recipients Paula Jewell of Mass Bays Estuary Association, Jack Buckley of the Center for Student Coastal Research, and Wendy Garpow and Kathy Quigley of the North and South Rivers Watershed Association stand with Secretary of Environmental Affairs Ellen Roy Herzfelder and state Sen. Robert Heldund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley during last Friday's grant award ceremony.

The Massachusetts Bays Estuary Association will use its $10,000 grant to pay for materials necessary to conduct a regionally specific, baseline survey of Massachusetts Bays residents regarding storm water. The information collected will build on previous information compiled as part of its "Storm Windows" program – a mass media/advertising campaign that "markets" storm water as a significant problem which can be addressed by individuals.

"People living on the coast very likely love the water," said Paula Jewell of the Massachusetts Bays Estuary Association. She said by putting out the survey, the organization will gain a better understanding of the different perceptions the public has regarding storm-water runoff, as well as whether the community would be willing to pay for some of the improvements necessary to reduce pollution.

The North and South Rivers Watershed Association was awarded $35,000 to enhance its "Greenscapes" program, which teaches consumers how to have healthy landscapes without using excess fertilizers, pesticides, herbicides, or water. It is a program which has been made possible through a multi-stakeholder partnership, which also includes the Massachusetts Bays National Estuary Program, UMass Cooperative Extension, and roughly 16 municipalities in the South Coastal Watershed including Cohasset, Kingston, Marshfield, Plymouth, Hanover and Weymouth. Several other towns are still working to find the funds to participate, including Norwell, Scituate, and Pembroke.

This year, 10 grants totaling roughly $215,000 will be awarded to various organizations for non-point source pollution programs. Julie Conroy, an environmental analyst for the Office of Coastal Zone Management, the office which awarded the grants, said each proposal received is reviewed by an evaluation committee and grants are awarded based on the merits of the project as well as the proposal's meeting the goals of the office. The Coastal Zone Management Office anticipates it will solicit applications for the next round of grants in September 2005.

Traveling igloos

We're not sure if it's a nationwide problem or unique to New England.

But why do so many motorists drive with snow all over their cars?

Could it be many houses don't have garages? Could it be those that do are so cluttered the family car is parked outside? Could it be laziness?

We admit to being totally perplexed about this and there isn't a great deal written about the practice.

Granted this week's blizzard and Wednesday's snowstorm are events that are putting even self-proclaimed "snow lovers" near the edge. They're considering becoming "snow birds" by looking in the travel pages for a warm oasis.

In addition to cabin fever, those fans of winter — like the rest of us — are coping with tons of snow to remove from walkways and driveways and extra no-school days for children that aren't always a vacation for working parents.

But there are SUVs out there that cost upwards of $60,000 whose owners are driving them around with nary a peephole to see the outside world and upwards of a foot on snow on the hood and roof. We have news for them: anti-lock brakes and four-wheel drive aren't going to protect you or the motorists and pedestrians around you if you can't see out the windows.

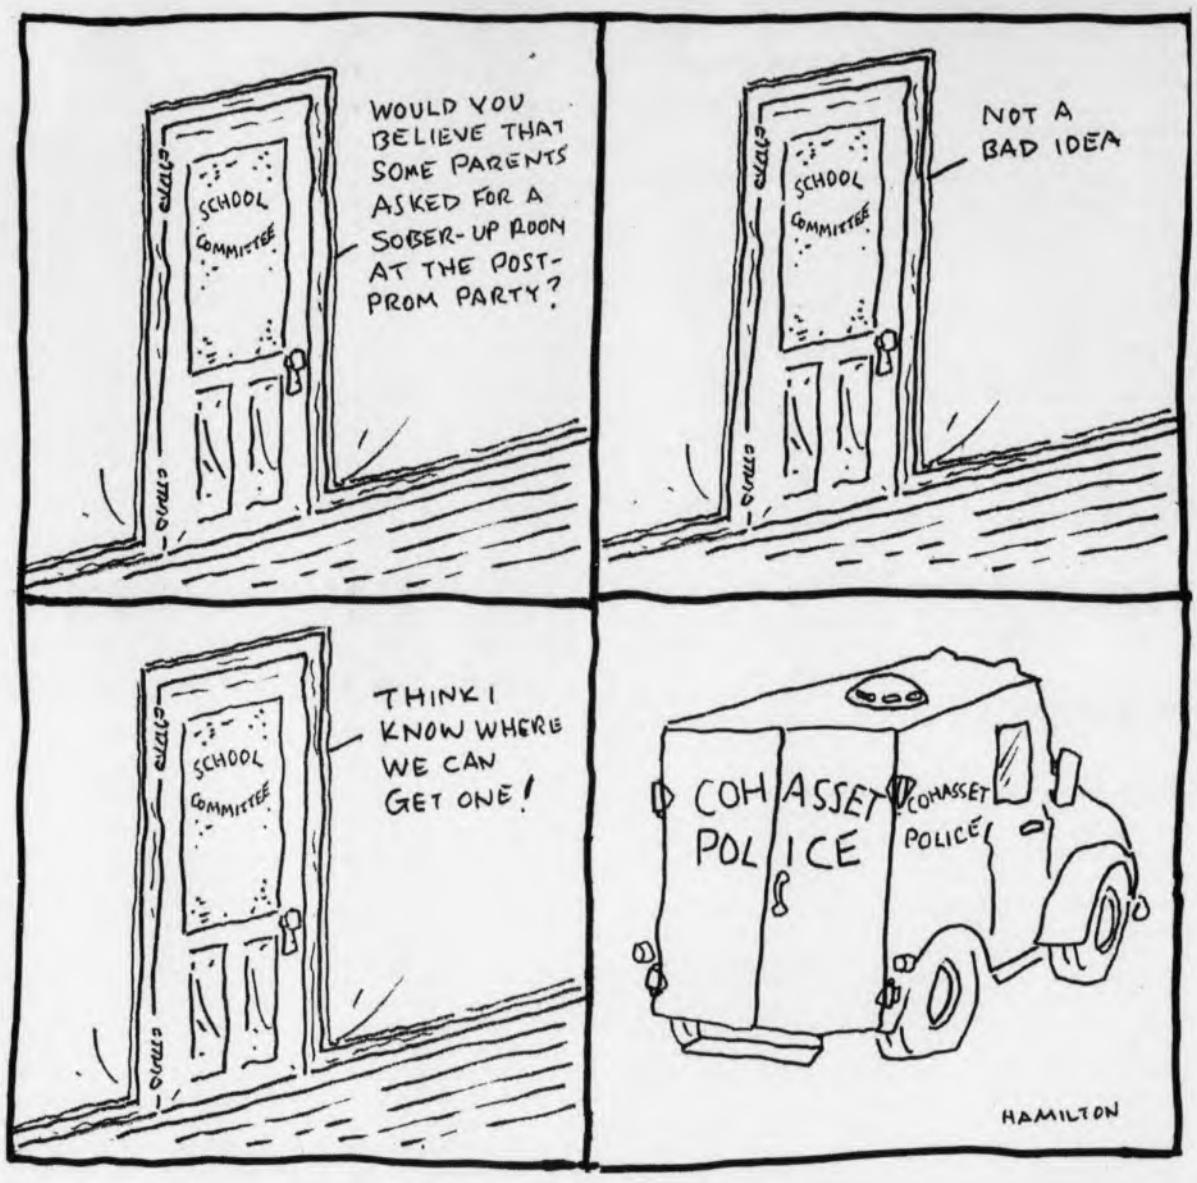
Flying snow and ice can also hit another vehicle causing that motorist to crash.

It's just commonsense: lack of visibility and huge pieces of ice and hardened snow flying through the air are safety hazards. Even light, powdery snow coming off a car or truck causes a fog-like condition for other vehicles.

One Internet Web site put it best. According to Car Talk's Official Winter Driving Tips at: www.cartalk.com: "You need visibility in poor conditions, because you have to keep your eye peeled for every other knucklehead on the road."

Tom and Ray Magliozzi of Cambridge (a.k.a. "Click and Clack, the Tappet Brothers"), who also host a talk show on National Public Radio member stations, offer these suggestions:

"Make sure every glass surface is clear and transparent using a snow brush and/or ice scraper. Your side-view mirrors and all lights should be brushed and cleared as well.



"Now if you haven't been smart enough to do so already, clean the snow off the rest of the car. Why? Because the rest of the snow will either (a) slide off the roof and cover your windshield as you're slowing down; or (b) fly off onto someone else's windshield and cause him or her to smash into you."

So let's not see any more travelling igloos out there – they know who they are!

If those drivers are not going to listen, then we hope they take the following advice.

Among myriad other winter driving tips ranging from tune ups to keeping windshield wipers in good shape, the Magliozzi brothers also add this: "Our best tip is still this: move to Hawaii!"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Disgusted by post-prom behavior

TO THE EDITOR:

How many of you saw the tragic picture of State Trooper Ellen Englehardt on the front page of the Globe and Ledger this week? Her life and that of her boyfriend and family forever destroyed by a spoiled, drunken 18-year old who was given too much and excused too often. Finally, the system gave him a 2-1/2 year jail sentence which may be lessened for "good behavior." Small solace to Ellen Englehardt.

When I was on the Cohasset School Committee, the same disgusting behavior was all too common by the student body. Even a former School Committee chairperson tried to brush aside expressions of concern by alluding to the "rite of passage." Another School Committee chairperson could not understand the need for a strong Cohasset School District policy manual that would be taken seriously and another School Committee chairperson endorsed a ski trip(subsequently withdrawn and the trip cancelled) that the Cohasset School District prohibited in bold type because of the history of misconduct on such trips.

Cohasset has a huge problem because of parental denial and cover-ups by the School Committee and administration. Based upon the Mariner story, it certainly sounds as if the Assistant Principal and two School Committee members present at the post-prom party were well aware of the misconduct.

School Committee member Rick Flynn is quoted as saying: "By-law, alcohol does not exist on a school campus." If that is so, why was not there a stream of police cars booking the offenders and a stream of parents at the police station to drive the offenders home? Why were not the names of those 16 and older included in the police log report that is published by the Mariner?

You have another article in the same edition of the Mariner: "Cohasset police, school department get on the same page." I think the new Chief of Police and the new Superintendent should write a joint letter for publication in the Mariner that spells out what was done wrong at the post-prom party and how the new Memorandum of Understanding would improve the handling of such a situation.

I am sure that the spoiled, bored youth of Cohasset dislike any function chaperoned by adults. I do not think relocating the Post-prom party off campus is the solution. It would only increase the likelihood of students and innocent residents being mowed down by drunken drivers. Suspensions, removal from eligibility for scholarships, non-participation in graduation ceremonies, and a public record of those arrested would be deterrents that are more effective. Parents who defend such misbehavior should be horsewhipped.

Town Census forms due

The Town Census for 2005 has been mailed to each household. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2005. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible although you may have recently renewed your 2004 license. If you did not receive your census, call the Town Clerk's Office at 781-383-4100.

Taking carbon monoxide exposure seriously

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

No doubt, you've read of the death by Carbon Monoxide (CO) poisoning of an eight-year-old in a car, waiting for it to be shoveled out, in the recent snow storm; the near death of an entire family in Plymouth, and the death of a cab driver in Boston.

Carbon monoxide poisoning is not an uncommon occurrence. According to the CDC, every year, more than 200 people in the United States die from CO poisoning and several thousand people go to hospital emergency rooms for treatment for CO poisoning.

The exhaust from a car in a snowdrift can accumulate under the car body and, through vents and other openings, leak into the passenger compartment. Seepage can occur in new cars as well as older vehicles. In older vehicles, the exhaust system can leak if the tailpipe is plugged by snow and CO may be present even if snow is not otherwise blocking the vehicle.

Most people die from CO produced by fuel-burning appliances (furnaces, ranges, water heaters, room heaters). Others die from CO produced while burning charcoal or wood inside a home, garage, vehicle or tent. Still others die from CO produced by cars left running in attached garages. The family in Plymouth became ill in a new dwelling because an outside gas furnace vent was blocked by snow.

Carbon monoxide (CO) is a colorless, odorless, poisonous gas. It is produced by the incomplete burning of solid, liquid, and gaseous fuels. Some CO can be produced by virtually every process in which combustion occurs: appliances fueled with natural gas, liquefied petroleum (LP gas), oil, kerosene, coal, or burning and charcoal all produce CO.

Initial symptoms of CO poisoning are similar to the flu (but without the fever). They include: headache, fatigue, shortness of breath, nausea, dizziness. Many people with CO poisoning mistake their symptoms for the flu or are misdiagnosed by physicians, which sometimes results in tragic deaths. The health effects of CO depend on the level of CO and length of exposure, as well as each individual's health condition. The concentration of CO is measured in parts per million (ppm). Health effects from exposure to CO levels of approximately 1 to 70 ppm are uncertain, but most people will not experience any symptoms. Some heart patients might experience an increase in chest pain. As CO levels increase and remain above 70 ppm, symptoms may become more noticeable (headache, fatigue, nausea). As CO levels increase above 150 to 200 ppm, disorientation, unconsciousness, and death are possible.

Many people with CO poisoning mistake their symptoms for the flu or are misdiagnosed by physicians, which sometimes results in tragic deaths.

Take action immediately if you think you are experiencing any of the symptoms of CO poisoning, get fresh air. Open windows and doors for more ventilation, turn off any combustion appliances, and leave the house. Call your fire department and report your symptoms. You could lose consciousness and die if you do nothing. It is also important to contact a doctor immediately for a proper diagnosis. Tell your doctor that you suspect CO poisoning is causing your problems. Prompt medical attention is important if you are experiencing any symptoms of CO poisoning when you are operating fuel-burning appliances. Before turning a fuel-burning appliances back on, make sure a qualified service person checks it for malfunction.

Prevention — Make sure appliances are installed according to manufacturer's instructions and local building codes Most appliances should be installed by professionals. Have the heating system (including chimneys and vents) inspected and serviced annually.

Install a CO detector/alarm; however a CO alarm can provide added protection, but is no substitute for proper use and upkeep of appliances that can produce CO.

Never ignore a CO detector/alarm. If the detector/alarm sounds: operate the reset button; call your emergency services (fire department or 911); immediately move to fresh air — outdoors or by an open door/window.

Never leave a car running in an attached garage, even with the garage door open.

Never operate unvented fuel-burning appliances in any room with closed doors or windows or in any room where people are sleeping, or burn charcoal or use portable fuel-burning camping equipment inside a home, garage, vehicle, or tent.

Do not use gasoline-powered tools and engines indoors. If use is unavoidable, ensure that adequate ventilation is available and, whenever possible, place engine so as to exhaust outdoors.

The Cohasset Fire Department encourages the installation of CO detectors/alarms in all new single-family homes and in existing single-family residences that have oil or gas furnaces. Many cities also require CO detectors/alarms in apartment buildings and single-family dwellings.

CO detectors/alarms are available for boats and recreational vehicles and should be used. Seriously consider CO alarms for all boats, motor homes and towable recreational vehicles that have a generator.

Put merit into teacher contract

COMMENTARY

JOE MCELROY

While Cohasset is as beautiful as it was 20 years when we moved here; it certainly is not as affordable. During that same period, the corporate world has increased productivity and regained its competitive edge as compared to EU countries. The corporate world has primarily realized productivity gains by outsourcing, computerization/robotics and eliminating or reducing or its defined retirement plans and benefit packages(particularly demanding that employees assume a larger share of health care premiums).

Cohasset schools were academically excellent 20 years ago and remain so today. They are not any better and not measurably worse. Twenty years ago, Cohasset schoolteacher pay and benefits were in the lower-middle range, now they are in the upper range. Pay increases have exceeded other school districts and fringe benefits have increased while in other sectors of the economy fringe benefits have decreased. School unions have fought off every attempt to include "merit" as a factor in contract negotiations.

Pay increases have exceeded other school districts and fringe benefits have increased while in other sectors of the economy fringe benefits have decreased.

Therefore, what you have is a situation where schoolteachers want to be treated as professionals, but they want the protection of labor contracts. Good teachers will continue to work the hours necessary to help each student reach his/her maximum potential. Poor teachers will hide behind the protective blanket of their contracts and gain all the benefits of their more dedicated counterparts. When teachers complain about their work hours, they should take a close look at the travel demands and work hours that the corporate world demands of its professionals.

As I understand it, the School Committee is in the final stages of contract negotiations. It is time the School Committee and Teachers' Union put "merit" into the next contract. At the same time, wage increases should be very modest and fringe benefits should either be stabilized or shared. Good pay and benefits are nice, but the Cohasset School Committee should leverage the advantage that it has as a small School District with a high achieving student body. There are other priorities in Town, not the least of which is keeping Cohasset affordable and spending another $15 million to sewer the 400 homes in the Little Harbor area.

A history lesson from CEES along with some serious concerns

COMMENTARY

LISA LOJACONO

The following was sent to the Board of Selectmen with a copy to the Mariner for publication.

I am writing this for three specific reasons: First, to express my serious concerns about comments made during your (Board of Selectmen) last opening meeting (Jan. 18) and subsequent comments made by other town officials with respect to the integrity of the town's engineering firm, Tutela, and Mr. Dan Coughlin.

Second, I am writing to address disturbing comments made by several of your board members regarding the legality of the CEES-sponsored article which was passed overwhelmingly at the December Town Meeting.

Third, I am writing to advise your board of the serious consequences of their continued and ill-advised position that Cohasset has satisfied the requirements set forth in the Second Final Amended Final Judgment (SAFJ). Your citizens encourage you to embrace the opportunities available to you by negotiating an agreement between the Town and the State, and secure the many benefits being offered to us.

In addressing the first issue, it is important to note that in 1997, when CEES (Citizens for Equitable Environmental Solutions) was founded, there was no trust between the Sewer Commission or Tutela Engineering and the citizens who comprise CEES.

CEES was suspect of every position that Tutela advocated, and we scrutinized their actions carefully. CEES was a major force in getting a Town review of Tutela and other professional firms that could take on tasks assigned by the Sewer Commission. It was through this process that CEES learned that Tutela Engineering and their chief engineer for the project, Mr. Dan Coughlin, were excellent resources for the Town.

Mr. Coughlin's professionalism and expertise has not only earned him the trust of CEES, but the respect he deserves. For any member of the Board of Selectmen or any other Town board to question this is hypocritical.

In July, when Cohasset was asked by the DEP to document its progress on the Wastewater Management Plan which the town had submitted to the DEP in 2000, your Board as well as the Board of Health, had no problem requesting Mr. Coughlin to compile documentation that the Town should have been doing over the previous four years, as set forth in the requirement by the DEP. Further, in response to a DEP request made of your Board, you had no problem directing Mr. Coughlin to respond on behalf of the Town. In fact, Town Counsel advised all parties that having Mr. Coughlin sign would afford the Town an avenue to "escape" enforcement should the State require Cohasset to act on this plan, something which CEES and most recently the DEP have said is an unacceptable and ineffective maneuver.

So now that the Town has learned that the DEP had determined its efforts to be (in their words) "woefully inadequate," members of your Board and others have decided to point the finger of blame and suspicion at Mr. Coughlin. (See letter of 12/22/04 from Deputy Regional Director Madelyn Morris.) If Mr. Coughlin's work was good enough to pass the scrutiny of a professional review, which concluded Tutela's credentials were superior to their competition, and Mr. Coughlin was qualified enough to respond on behalf of the Town in a serious matter with the State, then it should follow that his work was not at fault: the town is. The people of this town deserve better and citizens will recognize these claims for what they are, a refusal to accept responsibility.

Focusing on the next round of disturbing comments from your Board, those regarding the legality of the CEES citizens' petition, it is important to state that neither CEES counsel (which included the town moderator of Brookline),nor the State Attorney General's Office, nor our own Town Moderator share your Board's position. The citizens should see this tactic, used by your Board and our Town Counsel, as one would view a cry of "fire" in a crowded auditorium — a cheap maneuver meant to scare people, and an unproductive way to interact. Further, when the lame argument of illegality was put to rest by our moderator during Town Meeting, at least one member of the BoS attempted to stop the vote.

Fortunately, the voters saw through this tactic and proceeded to support overwhelmingly the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue Sewer project, yet we are still listening to similar rhetoric about the article being "illegal." This should be seen as another tactic to de-rail the will of the people at Town Meeting. Certainly the voters of Cohasset will see these comments for what they are — inaccurate and blatant refusals to accept the will of the citizens.

Finally, the third area that should prompt your Board and others to re-evaluate your actions as being decisively incorrect deals with the issue of compliance with the SAFJ. If there is anyone reading this who questions the positive, working relationship between CEES and the DEP, they should read the 12/22/04 letter from the DEP sent to Cohasset. In it, the DEP clearly defines the same position that CEES put forth in several public meetings throughout 2004. CEES stated that the DEP was not going to accept the Wastewater Management Plan documentation submitted to them as being a sufficient demonstration that Cohasset has satisfied the Second Amended Final Judgment. The State shares CEES's position that Cohasset has not complied with the SAFJ. Your board is following an ill-advised legal opinion and is taking the Town in a dangerous and costly direction. The only winner here will be the accounts receivables office of the law firm that represents the Town.

There are many positive reasons to cooperate with the State and adjust our adversarial position toward the State and DEP. If Cohasset agrees to commit formally to the schedule that they generated and submitted to the State last February, the State has expressed its willingness to offer valuable amnesty for all Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue homes that do not meet Title V requirements. The entire Town will benefit from stopping the financial hemorrhaging from the mounting legal bills that this Town has been paying to avoid satisfying the SAFJ.

In addition to the substantial savings from both of these, such an agreement brokered between Cohasset and the State puts Cohasset on a priority list to access funds available through the State Revolving Fund (SRF), which are loaned at very low rates. The State has offered its free services regarding the application for SRF funds to ensure that our Town has the best chance to receive assistance for the project. Also, the State has indicated that they could include language in the agreement that would protect the town if there was some unforeseeable holdup in funds that would stall the project (i.e. school funding experience).

Another advantage, of which I believe you are aware, is that the State would be willing to stipulate in the agreement a variety of projects that could be addressed with any unused capacity resulting from the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue treatment plant expansion. To most residents, it would seem prudent that your Board act immediately to seize this opportunity and broker an agreement that would address the existing residents in various areas of town before affording sewer opportunities to developers. Certainly, the positives of incorporating the schedule to sewer Little Harbor and Atlantic Avenue into the SAFJ far outweigh the negatives.

Let's review recent events: First, the CEES article was unfairly labeled illegal — the voters saw through this. Then there was an attempt to stop the vote at Town Meeting — the voters saw through this, too. Now, despite a resounding opinion voiced at Town Meeting, members of your Board continue to question the article's legality. The voters see through this as well.

At a recent meeting some of your members made statements attacking the credibility of the work of our Town's engineering firm. Clearly the voters will see through this as an attempt to blame someone else for the Town's current assessment by the state as "non-compliant." Despite recent correspondence and a meeting last week with the DEP, this Town continues to embrace the opinion that it is in full compliance. Despite offers from the State to address each of the Board of Selectmen's concerns about incorporating the Town's own schedule into the SAFJ, and the State's willingness to go above and beyond to secure a settlement, some of our officials continue to put up roadblocks, ignoring the benefits that such a settlement will give our citizens.

While this situation could be turned into an opportunity to create many positives for our town, your Board's resistance in negotiating with the State, the refusal to accept the will of Town Meeting, and your attempts to impugn the creditability of our own engineers is a complete disservice to our citizens. Recent statements and events demonstrate an unwillingness to own up to our responsibility and a lack of accountability by various boards, as well as a blatant disregard for the will expressed at Town Meeting.

There are many potential benefits for the citizens at stake, such as resolution of a serious pollution issue in one of our most valued resources, amnesty for non-compliant systems, and a real chance to secure sewers for existing residents, including many seniors, before new developments. I encourage your board to LISTEN to the message of Town Meeting and work with the State to formalize its commitment to resolving the SAFJ in a manner that will benefit all the residents of Cohasset.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

My first real job was as office boy/sports writer/reporter at the Quincy Patriot Ledger in 1946 for which I was paid $23 a week before deductions. I was so happy to get it that I went right out and bought a round of 10-cent beers for the bar in Upjohn's Cozy Café at the corner of Elm Street and the railroad tracks.

I was reminded of those good (?) old days the other day when I stumbled across an envelope of clippings from 50 years ago, the year 1955, when by this time I was making nearly $100 a week and had graduated from dime beers at Upjohn's to $1 bottles of beer after-hours at the Stork Club in Charlestown.

Nurses at Quincy City Hospital made $55.75 a week, coffee was 95 cent a pound and Delmonico-style steak was 39 cents a pound at Capitol Markets...

What caught my eye among the 1955 clips was a story of how the Bethlehem Steel Company's Fore River Shipyard had agreed to a new contract with the CIO Shipbuilders' Union giving them a 19-cent an hour raise so that first class mechanics were making $2.27 cents an hour.

The Fore River Shipyard is a used car lot now but I suspect that first class mechanics are still in demand and if their hourly wage is much less than $22.70 then I'd find them a new union. After all, isn't the minimum wage something like $6 or $7 an hour now. I don't recall that there was a minimum wage in '55.

The discovery of the 50 year old clippings set me off on one of my favorite ventures — comparing today with yesterday and bemoaning the fact that things have changed from the good (?) old days when I was young and ice covered most of the earth and not necessarily for the best.

What's that you say? Fifty years was a long time ago. Indeed it was. Did you know that was the year Chief Iron Hail died. In case you didn't know, he was the last survivor of the Battle of the Little Big Horn where the Indians treated General Custer and the Seventh Cavalry so badly.

Nurses at Quincy City Hospital made $55.75 a week, coffee was 95 cent a pound and Delmonico-style steak was 39 cents a pound at Capitol Markets, a can of tuna was 21 cents at Curtis Farms Supermarkets and a club sirloin steak dinner was $1.95 at the best restaurants. You could buy a four-year-old Chevvy for $695.

There was a price war going on among gasoline stations on the South Shore and you could gas up at some stations for 22.9 cents a gallon. The last time I looked at the ticket on a gasoline pump it was $1.79.9 a gallon, down from $2 and due to go back up as soon as the heavy driving season starts.

A disc jockey named Bill Randle was giving a new "rockabilly" singer named Elvis Presley his first exposure on his program over WERE in Cleveland, television viewers were talking about the debut of the new situation comedy "The Honeymooners," starring Jackie Gleason.

The National Hockey League suspended Rocket Richard of the Canadiens for hitting a linesman and Montreal fans rioted, setting fires and looting stores in downtown Montreal; The Syracuse Nationals beat the Fort Wayne Zollner Pistons, 4 games to 3, to win the National Basketball Association championship.

Like I say, that was a long time ago.

Terrorist plot lets Romney operate in bipartisan mode

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

Last week's terrorism scare provided Gov. Romney with a stretch in which he could operate in nonpartisan mode, at exactly the time he's trying to transition to that orientation for the rest of his term.

Word that the FBI was searching for six possible terrorists, who might be headed to Boston, broke oddly. Public safety officials constantly field phone calls like the one that prompted so much attention and anxiety: an anonymous call claiming specific people might be planning an act of terrorism, and might be intending to carry it out in Boston.

But this phone call leaked, and once that happened, a story consisting mostly of "rumor and innuendoes," to use Boston Mayor Menino's phrase, was off and running. Romney decided to fly back home from Washington, and that gave the story a sort of circular heft: however nebulous its facticity, it was important enough to prompt the governor to come back, and the fact that he came back made it more important. By the time last Thursday afternoon arrived, it appeared hysteria was a more pressing public safety menace than terrorism because so much treatment had been given to so thin a threat. Thus, the governor and US Attorney Michael Sullivan were more focused on delivering the message, "this isn't that worrisome" than they were with telling people to be on the lookout.

In handling the crisis, the governor coordinated with Republicans on the federal level, a Democratic mayor and legislative leaders on the city and state level, and party labels didn't matter. It was an interesting moment for him to be transcending the "us vs. them" that drove public life in 2004.

For one thing, Romney had an unusual political choice to make, and made it quickly.

Word of the FBI hunt came the same day (Wed., Jan. 19) he was scheduled to host as partisan an event as one could imagine: a "Celebration of Massachusetts Republicans" featuring Milton native George H.W. Bush, whose son was to be re-inaugurated the next day. The governor reportedly originally intended to remain in Washington, but changed his mind after the volume of concern became a crescendo. Romney wanted to assure people he felt safe being in Massachusetts – and the specter of Attorney General Thomas Reilly holding forth on his rival's absence no doubt played a part in the governor's change in plans.

Romney happens just now to be engaged in the largest and most important repositioning of his career. Having essentially declared "the mess on Beacon Hill," in his words, to be cleaned up, he now has begun talking rather enthusiastically about working more closely with some of the very the people who made it.

It will be interesting to see to what extent he mimics Bill Weld. Weld came into office saying the huge deficits and candor shortage in state government called for an assault on the status quo, but after working with the status quo on a daily basis for a time, discovered he could get more done, and get more credit, by embracing it.

Weld learned the math of Massachusetts quickly. The side with the votes is right. Romney tried and failed to put more allies in front of the voting buttons in the House and more names ending in (R) on the Senate roll call. Now he's ready to explore a more Weldian path. Up to a point: Weld's party identification became so malleable he wound up playing a weird "rebel moderate" role in the national GOP, and ended up an outcast. In more ways than one, Romney wants to be able to go back to Washington.

• Members named to draw up sweeping changes in rules and committees — With the naming of House and Senate members to temporary committees, work on major revisions to legislative rules and committee structures can begin in earnest. House Speaker DiMasi named to the Temporary Committee on Joint Rules Reps. John Rogers, Thomas Petrolati, Lida Harkins and Angelo Scaccia, along with Reps. Frank Smizik, Stephen Tobin, and Eugene O'Flaherty, who chaired the Judiciary Committee last session. They'll join Sens. Frederick Berry, Robert Havern, Joan Menard, Stanley Rosenberg and Marian Walsh. Anticipation in the building is running high as lawmakers and staffers ruminate about potential change in their professional lives. Rep. Jay Kaufman, who's on the ad-hoc task force working on new procedures in the House, said the new rules will allow the rank-and-file much more control over the pace of deliberations and the fate of legislation, much of which is now consigned to doom in procedural "black holes" controlled by leadership.

• Senate tests administration declaration on sick leave bank — Senate Bill 18 wouldn't have gotten a second glance last year, but this year may portend the first legislative/administrative showdown of the session. The bill sets up a "sick leave bank" to take care of an employee in the Supreme Judicial Court. The governor's office announced it no longer supports such who-you-know based altruism because a statewide system for transferring sick days has been established. Sharp eyes will be scanning to see if the objection turns into a veto.

• Gay marriage: mass. Unions don't cross state lines, judge says — A federal judge in Tampa, Florida said the federal Defense of Marriage Act gives states the right to reject the validity of marriage licenses granted gay couples in Massachusetts. That decision apparently was the first of its kind, and is virtually certain to go to the US Supreme Court. The ruling came the same day newly-minted Rep. Carl Sciortino joined national gay rights advocates to say he is one of many candidates for State House seats nationwide who succeeded with a pro-gay message. More to the point, Human Rights Campaign and the Equality Federation said 94 percent of candidates who "voted against discrimination" won re-election. Gay rights advocates are trying to reassure members of the House and Senate as the pivotal vote approaches on a constitutional amendment that would prohibit gay marriage but allow civil unions in Massachusetts.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week. This week's report previews the 2005 legislative session and the controversial and important issues and events that are likely to dominate Beacon Hill.

THE BIG THREE- Gov. Mitt Romney, Senate President Robert Travaglini (D-Boston) and House Speaker Salvatore DiMasi (D-Boston) are the Big Three on Beacon Hill. DiMasi took over the reins of the House upon the departure of former Speaker Thomas Finneran last September and has presided over the House for only a few months. He is viewed as more socially liberal and slightly more fiscally liberal than Finneran and will add a new component and dynamic to the Big Three. The 2006 gubernatorial election will also cast a big shadow over the events and strategies on Beacon Hill. Romney has announced his intention to run for re-election and the Democrats are eager to regain the chief executive's seat that they have not occupied since former Gov. Michael Dukakis won re-election in 1988.

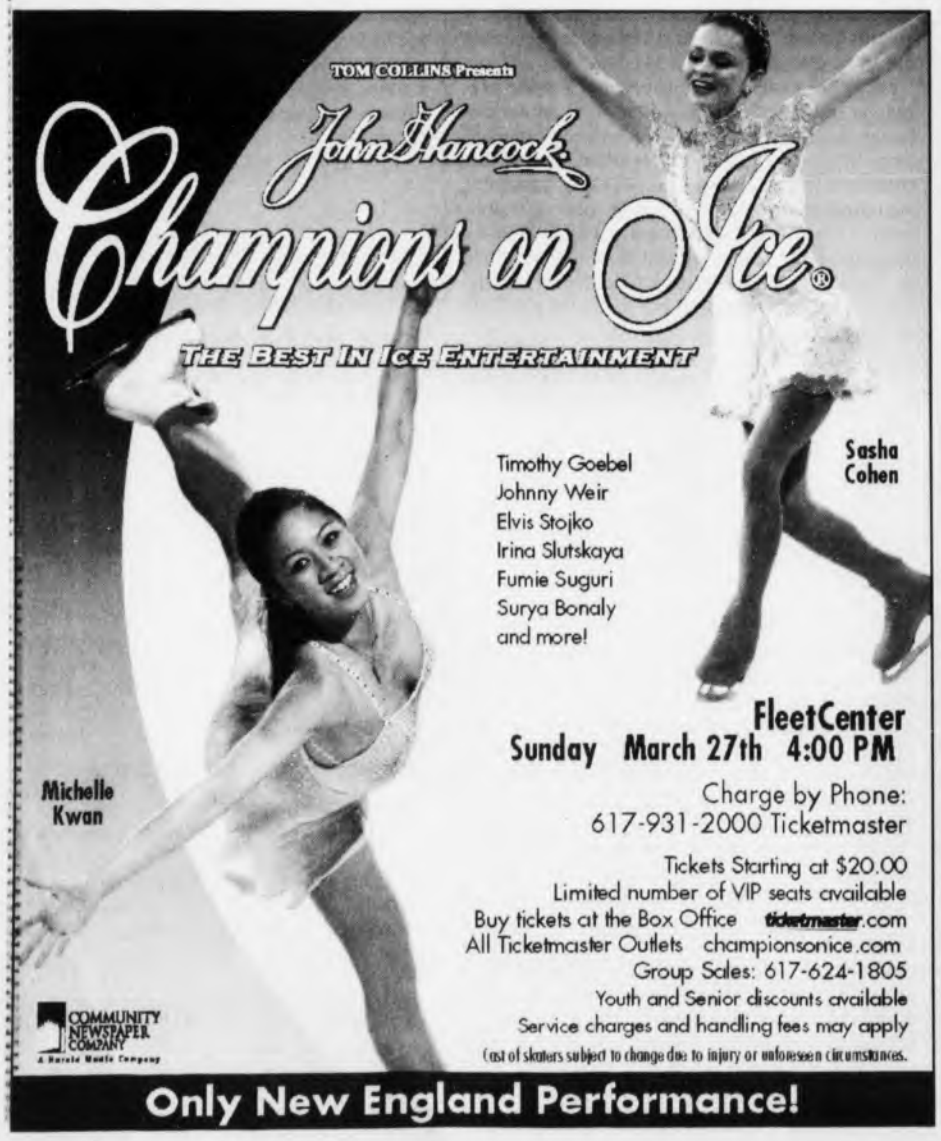
THE BUDGET- Beacon Hill's so-called experts estimate that the state will face a budget gap of $800 million to $900 million which will necessitate the reduction of funding for some programs and/or the raising of one-time revenues to cover the gap. Gov. Mitt Romney will soon file House Bill 1- his proposed fiscal year 2006 state budget. Romney's proposal is the first of three that will be considered on Beacon Hill. The House will offer its own package followed by the Senate version. After each branch approves it own package, a House-Senate conference committee will eventually craft a plan that will be presented to the House and Senate for consideration and then sent to the governor.

GAY MARRIAGE- The House and Senate will again consider the proposed constitutional amendment that bans same-sex marriage, gives same-sex couples the right to form civil unions with all the same benefits, protections, rights and responsibilities granted to couples who are married and recognizes that under present federal law same-sex persons in civil unions would be denied federal benefits available to married persons. It also allows the Legislature to enact laws that are not inconsistent with the amendment in order to carry out the purpose of the amendment. The 2003-2004 Legislature approved the amendment by a slim seven vote margin on a 105-92 roll call vote. The election of 13 new representatives and four senators leaves the fate of the amendment too close to call. There are also three vacant seats in the House that will be filled in special elections in April. The proposal can no longer be amended and can simply be voted up or down on one roll call vote. If it is approved, it would go on the 2006 state election ballot for consideration by the voters. No one is sure of what happens to the status of gay couples that have already married in Massachusetts if the amendment goes on the ballot and voters approve it. Other amendments proposed last year included language that would have converted all gay marriages into civil unions. The pending amendment makes no reference to gay couples that have already married.

EDUCATION- The topic of education is always on the agenda on Beacon Hill. The Senate last year approved a new funding plan for the distribution of some Chapter 70 Education Aid. The $1.2 billion proposal creates a new category of "Target Aid" that increases Chapter 70 aid by an estimated $175 million per year over seven years. The measure also provides that each community would see its aid grow by at least $50 per pupil and that the state begin in fiscal year 2006 to provide 100 percent reimbursement to regional schools for the transportation of pupils. The House did not take any action on the measure but it is likely to resurface in some form this year. Education advocates are also expected to push to fund last year's early childhood education initiative that created a Department of Early Education and Care to serve as the lead agency for the administration of all public and private early education and care programs and services in Massachusetts. The measure also created a Board of Early Education and Care to oversee the development and implementation of a program of voluntary, universally accessible high-quality early childhood education for all preschool-aged children. A pending decision by the Supreme Judicial Court on the Hancock vs. Driscoll case is also looming on Beacon Hill. The court is expected to rule on this complicated case and to ultimately decide whether the state is meeting its constitutional obligation to adequately fund education or whether it is shortchanging some poorer communities. The ruling could result in the Legislature being forced to invest million or even billions more in education.

HEALTH CARE- Hundreds of bills dealing with health care have been filed. The one that may get the most attention is a proposed constitutional amendment that provides universal health care to all Massachusetts residents. The proposal was already approved last year on a 152-41 roll call vote and would become part of the state's constitution if approved by 25 percent of the 2005-2006 Legislature and then ratified by the voters on the 2006 ballot. It requires the Legislature and governor to approve laws to ensure that no Massachusetts resident lacks comprehensive, affordable and equitably financed health insurance coverage for all medically necessary preventive, acute and chronic health and mental health care services, prescription drugs and devices. Another provision provides that the actual laws approved by the Legislature and the governor take effect only if approved by voters at a statewide election. Sponsors say that skyrocketing premiums are making health care unaffordable for many families and for employers who fund coverage for their workers. They noted that some 600,000 Massachusetts residents do not have any health care coverage and argued that it is time for the state to ensure that each citizen is provided with this basic right. Some opponents say the measure is well intentioned but vaguely worded and could result in the courts deciding the meaning of words like "comprehensive" and "affordable." Others said the proposal would cost taxpayers $3 billion and argued that the federal government, not the state, should develop a solution to the health care problem.

THE BIG DIG- The legal battles over the Big Dig will continue on Beacon Hill. Attorney General Thomas Reilly is set to be designated by the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority to lead the cost recovery program of the $14.6 billion Big Dig. Reilly will spearhead the effort to collect money from contractors charged with mismanagement, cost overruns and shoddy work. Congressional hearings into the matter are also on the horizon.



STEM CELL RESEARCH- Senate President Travaglini addressed the opening session of the Senate a few weeks ago and made it clear that swift passage of legislation advancing stem cell research in Massachusetts is one of his main priorities. He said this would allow the state to regain a competitive edge in this important area. Former Speaker Finneran was the main stumbling block to passage of this type of legislation. Finneran is now working for the Massachusetts Biotechnology Council and favors passage of this legislation.

TUITION RATES FOR ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS- Gov. Romney vetoed last year's budget section that allowed illegal immigrant students to pay the in-state tuition rates and fees at Massachusetts colleges and universities if the students have attended a high school in Massachusetts for at least three years and have graduated or received the equivalent of a diploma. The Legislature did not act on the veto. Supporters of the reduced rate have refiled the legislation. They say that many of these students are unable to afford the higher tuition and end up skipping college and working in low-pay, low-skilled jobs. Opponents say it is unfair to offer these reduced rates to illegal immigrants under any circumstances and particularly when the Legislature may reduce funding for other important programs because of the projected budget gap.

OTHER ISSUES- Other issues that will likely be debated on Beacon Hill this year include repealing the statewide ban on smoking in workplaces; legalizing casino gambling; accelerating the removal of the cap on the amount of local aid from the State Lottery that goes to cities and towns; merging the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority with the Massachusetts Highway Department; making changes to a current state law, Chapter 40B, which essentially exempts low and moderate income housing developers from local zoning bylaws in communities in which less than ten percent of the housing is deemed affordable by the state; and banning the sale, lease or transfer of assault weapons and large capacity feeding devices owned prior to 1994— an expansion of the current ban that only applies to post-1994 weapons.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

FROM LETTERS, PAGE 8

Takes issue with Bobo's comments

TO THE EDITOR:

After reading the "Bobo" article in the Jan. 21 Mariner, I felt sad that several of our wayward Town leaders continue the pursuit of their personal, anti-resident, anti-Town agendas — agendas that were rejected by the voters in a landslide vote at the December 6 Special Town Meeting.

The statements quoted in the article by the Chair of the Board of Health, Selectperson McMorris, Town Counsel DeRensis, and Selectman Spofford are misleading at best, untrue mostly, and libelous at worst. Selectmen Chair Sullivan is not quoted, reflecting his apparent latest strategy of using willing attack dogs.

Many residents are well aware that our Town faces a number of crises — financial crises, a leadership crisis, an honesty/openness crisis, and, transcendingly, a moral crisis. Those who govern serve at the will of the governed, and that will is rapidly changing.

We all know what's behind the unfounded attack on Tutela Engineering Company — to try to make the Sewer Commission look bad because the Commission had the wisdom and the courage to resist the scheme of a couple of selectmen, led by the Chair and facilitated by Town Counsel DeRensis, to grab the sewer allocation authority away from the Sewer Commission so that they could award all of the future sewer capacity to the private developers leaving the1,500 residents, including children and more than 400 seniors, that live in the Little Harbor watershed to continue to cope with the decades of fecal coliform pollution. These few Cohasset officials don't care if they libel Tutela and its employees. All they want is retaliation and delay. How pathetic!

We also know why Town Counsel and these few wayward Town officials continue the false claim that the "Sewer Existing Residents First" Article, which was passed at Town Meeting in a landslide vote, was "illegal." Several reasons, the most outrageous of which are to try to diminish the voters' overwhelming rejection of their misplaced eagerness to serve the developers and brush off the townspeople and, as unbelievable as it was, to try to deflect attention from Town Counsel's secret, last minute attempt to substitute a totally different Article in place of the valid, legally approved Article.

By legally approved, I mean prepared by the expert municipal law attorneys at Foley, Hoag, one of the top Boston law firms, and then reviewed and approved by Cohasset's expert Town Moderator, Attorney George Marlette, all prior to Town Meeting. We asked Town Counsel, in writing via Chairman Sullivan, to work with us on this Article well before Town Meeting, and the request was ignored, so we engaged real independent, professional experts. Town Counsel's belated verbal opinion is dead wrong.

Finally, I can partially agree with Chairman Bobo's statement that the fecal coliform pollution levels in the coastal and Little Harbor waters are still as high as they have been in past years — which means still 20 to 200 times above the limit allowed by law! It totally escapes me why he is pleased with this finding.

The point that Chairman Bobo is missing here is that such data puts the lie to the claim that the so-called "Wastewater Management Plan" has resolved the area's pollution problem and sewering is not needed to comply with the Court Order against the Town. The cited data shows that the "Wastewater Management Plan," which the Town tries to claim it has been implementing over the past five years, has not made one iota of reduction in the high pollution levels!

I am not surprised that the DEP and the Attorney General dismissed this extremely suspect claim out of hand! This "plan" exists mostly on paper and not in practice. To try to scam the DEP with this fabrication was naive, indeed foolish!

I remind all concerned that in February of 2004, the Selectmen and the Sewer Commission, including Town Counsel, reviewed and approved a detailed Town Status Report submitted to the DEP/Attorney General's Office pursuant to the Second Amended Final Court Judgment. In this report, the Town stated that based on previous studies and evaluations, the Town was continuing implementation of the sewering of the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue watershed given "that it was the most economical and environmentally sound way of eliminating existing sources of pollution to the adjacent water resources." This report cited all of the pollution and other professional studies that had been conducted and the initial implementation steps the Town had taken during the period March, 2000, through January, 2004. Cited and attached was a detailed funding and implementation schedule showing the LH/AA sewer expansion being operational by the summer of 2009.

The DEP and the Attorney General's Office approved the report and the implementation schedule contained therein, and requested that all parties (Town, DEP, and AG) incorporate the plan and schedule into the Second Amended Final Judgment. Amazingly, the Town officials then refused!

What led to this abrupt, unexpected default by a couple of Cohaset's selectmen and Town Counsel DeRensis, a default that distressed the DEP and the AG's Office? I think we all know the answer to that question — the Cook Estate fiasco!

What happened was that shortly after the March, 2004, Town Meeting, just about 10plus weeks after the February, 2004, Status Report was submitted to the DEP/AG, it was "discovered" that the sewage from the proposed Cook Estate housing development could not be treated on-site, as promised at Town Meeting by Selectmen Chair Sullivan. He elected, for whatever reasons one can only conjecture, to renege on the sewering of LH/AA, to defy the DEP/AG, to abandon the symbol 187 \f "Symbol" \s 12 ∪1,500 residents of LH/AA, and to divert the limited future Central Treatment Plant sewage capacity and give some of it to the developer of the Cook Estate. This diversion was shortly expanded with proposals to use all of the future capacity for other developers as well.

So here we are, early 2005, just a few weeks after Town Meeting voters overwhelmingly rejected these nefarious betrayals by a few of our selectmen, and we still have to read the trash they spout to the Mariner, indeed to anyone (left!) who will listen—about how the voters are wrong, the Article voted was "illegal," LH/AA does not need to be sewered, the sewer commissioners are bad actors, the engineering firm is corrupt and its professional employees are liars, etc., etc. For shame! And now another abuse of office — which selectman told Mike Buckley not to pay Tutela Engineering invoices in order to stop the Sewer Commission's work to obtain cost estimates for the April 2 Town Meeting LH/AA sewering funding articles?

Enough! Are they not embarrassed when they look into a mirror? Are they ignoring all of the other problems, wasted spending, and divisiveness that they caused in our Town throughout 2004? Continued escalating malfeasance of office is not acceptable. The public trust is being trampled.

Disputes Bobo's remarks

TO THE EDITOR:

I'm writing this to respond to the article published in the Mariner on Jan. 21, 2005, headlined "Health Board Chairman Unhappy with Engineering Firm." The article includes many quotes from individuals who apparently have set out to cripple the planned sewering of Little Harbor and Atlantic Avenue.

There are those on the Board of Selectmen who are committed to using available capacity to service new pollution sources created by the Avalon Bay, Cedarmere and Northland developments. Certainly the environment will not benefit by their being sewered before we take care of existing pollution. One sure beneficiary of that policy is the developers' profit.

Let me illustrate why many of the statements quoted have absolutely no foundation in fact and others are misleading at best.

First, some facts:

The DEP requested that the Town provide an update on progress toward satisfying the conditions/actions that Town officials agreed to when they signed the Second Amended Final Judgment. Mr. Coughlin of Tutela was requested to provide that update, because no one else had the knowledge and expertise to do it. It was necessary work, properly authorized and efficiently carried out.

Mr. Coughlin was asked to sign the letter of transmittal, because the Board of Selectmen and the Acting Town Manager did not want to sign it, perhaps because the facts set forth could be detrimental to their position regarding the Second Amended Final Judgment (SAFJ). Their position is the SAFJ was already satisfied.

Mr. Coughlin is correct in stating that any interested or involved Town official had plenty of opportunity to review the contents of the update long before it was transmitted to the DEP. (For example, I, as a Sewer Commissioner, reviewed the attachments over a month before they were finally sent.) The Sewer Commission (contrary to Mr. Bobo's claims) has always been fully aware of any activity Tutela undertakes on its behalf. Mr. Coughlin is a professional engineer held in the highest regard by all who serve on the Sewer Commission, past and present. This respect is engendered not only by his professional competence and specific expertise, but his personal integrity as well.

It is not true that Tutela was chosen without considering other firms. In 2001, the Town Manager issued a Request for Qualifications (RFQ) regarding "Wastewater Management Planning for the Little Harbor Collection System Expansion." The RFQ was comprehensive in scope and drawn up by the Town Manager. I served on the panel that interviewed respondents to the RFQ. The panel consisted of the Town Manager, representatives from the Planning Department, Sewer Commission, Board of Health and interested citizens, not all of whom were favorably disposed toward Tutela.

Tutela was the only firm that actually met all the qualifications, but two of the other firms were also invited to be interviewed and were asked how they would address the area(s) where they did not meet the qualifications. After questioning all three firms, the panel recognized that maximum efficiency, in terms of both time and cost, would be achieved by continuing to use the most qualified and experienced engineer to complete the design engineering work in support of the Little Harbor sewer expansion. Tutela was selected unanimously. The Town Manager subsequently negotiated the terms and conditions with Tutela.

Most, if not all, of Mr. Bobo's comments, beliefs and innuendoes are contrary to the facts. My opinion is that Mr. Bobo was a party to a campaign waged by some other Town officials to discredit Mr. Coughlin and his firm, mainly because he told the truth in his report — a classic case of "Shoot the Messenger!" I find it hard to believe that Mr. Bobo doesn't understand that the reason fecal coliform counts in Little Harbor rise after storms is that the storm water washes over failing septic system leach fields.....not just bird and other animal droppings; they have always been there, even when the clam beds were open. Once sewers are in place and further flow into those leach fields is stopped, continuing storm run-off eventually will cleanse the areas and the coliform count will diminish. Sewering is the environmentally sound thing to do.

Mr. Spofford's comments about the need to follow prudent business practices in selecting contractors are correct, and this is exactly what was done when the 2001 RFQ was issued and Tutela was selected. As to his remark that the "town needs to make sure it feels confident coming before the state with reports Tutela compiled," I suggest that he and other interested officials read the report, which has been gathering dust in the Selectmen's office since it was submitted to the DEP.

Further, I believe Mr. Spofford distorts the potential for the Town's being subjected to fines should the BoS add the schedule for sewering Little Harbor to the SAFJ and find itself unable for some unforeseen reason to meet that schedule. The Town is most in danger of being fined if it continues to violate the provisions of the judgment by failing to make progress in addressing the continuing pollution of our waters. The BoS knows that appropriate language can be added to the Judgment to protect us from the unknown and uncontrollable. The DEP simply wants Cohasset to take effective measures to reduce our pollution.

Every study has shown that the most cost effective and environmentally effective thing we can do for the Little Harbor watershed and the Atlantic Avenue coastline is to install a sewer. Cost estimates were made a few years ago, before the delays in school building fund reimbursements from the state. The numbers are being updated and should be less than $15 million with all contingencies included. It certainly is not a case of "people willing to blindly support it," as Mr. Spofford suggests. The residents of all the areas of town where sewers are needed are well informed about them; that's why they have voted since 1997 to authorize the North and Central Cohasset sewers and the planning for Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue.

This letter is a personal one and my opinions may not be those of my fellow sewer commissioners, although I know them to be sympathetic to much of what I have offered as my opinion. The facts speak for themselves.

Christmas tree pickup help appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The Project Safeguard committee would like to thank the community volunteers who helped with our annual Christmas Tree Pickup, along with the loyal customers who gave us their business. The proceeds from this fundraiser will go toward Project Safeguard-sponsored programs for preteens and teens and their parents to deal with issues such as stress, bullying, and substance abuse prevention.

Thanks to the following volunteers who picked up trees over the first two weekends in January: Bill Chisolm, David Game, Coleman Nee and Wallace St. John from Cohasset; and Steve Gammon and Joe Spangenburger from Scituate. Thanks, too, to the Moskow and Oronte families for lending their pickups trucks.

Project Safeguard is a community group comprised of parents, clergy, and school representatives. In addition to its annual Christmas Tree Pickup, it receives funding from the Cohasset PSO, the Social Service League, and local churches.

This month as Sally steps down and Coleman comes on board, the committee is looking for new community members to help with its programs. For more information, please contact Rev. Cliff Cutler (ccutler@ststephenscohasset.org) or Nancy Oddleifson (FIVEodds@aol. com).

Town should commit to sewering Little Harbor

TO THE EDITOR:

It's rare when the Town has the opportunity to do the best it can for the environment and in the process, save significant unnecessary expenses for hundreds of its residents. Now that opportunity is staring Cohasset right in the face!

For much of the past year, the Selectmen and other boards have been considering adding the schedule for the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue sewer project to the Town's agreement with the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) to clean up pollution in those areas. If they agree to do that, there are two big potential savings for the owners of 450 Cohasset homes:

People who sell their homes may not have to upgrade their septic systems to meet Title V requirements, as long as they are not a public health risk. The DEP granted amnesty to several other towns in similar situations, because they didn't feel it made sense to put in an expensive septic system to cover the gap of a few years. They said they didn't want to see homeowners have to pay twice. Cohasset would receive more "points" in the competition for low interest loans from the State Revolving Fund (SRF). This means that we could move up the list for state loan funds, and the interest rate likely would be lower. Thus, the sewer project could be cheaper for the Cohasset citizens who ultimately pay the bill.

On the other side of the coin, if our officials continue to avoid committing to the project, the State could again call for fines from the Town or immediate inspections and replacement of all systems in our area that don't meet Title V (a big chunk of them). The latter solution undoubtedly would consume a lot of our famous ledge, not to mention our eardrums!

While I understand that our officials are worried that some unforeseen financial problem could interrupt the schedule, I believe the DEP is willing to consider a clause that would allow for an unavoidable delay.

I hope that all the environmentalists in Town, and everyone who likes to save money, will get together and encourage our Selectmen to sign an agreement with the State to finish the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue sewer. It's one of those rare times to "just do it!"

Community Blood drive is Feb. 2

The Red Cross has scheduled the next Cohasset Community Blood Drive for Wednesday, Feb. 2, The Blood Drive will be at St. Anthony Parish Center at the corner of South Main St. and Summer St. from 1 to 7 p.m. As in the past, baby-sitting will be provided from 3 to 5 p.m. Ample parking is available.

The best way to give blood for the first time is to come with a friend who is experienced in the donation process. New donors usually find the procedure easy and painless and most come back regularly to donate. The Red Cross area community requires more than 1,600 pints of blood per day to meet usual demand for blood and blood products. Every blood donation is an opportunity to help an accident victim, a surgical patient, or a child battling leukemia, to name a few.

Most people can give blood through the American Red Cross. Potential donors must be at least 17 years of age, in good health and weigh over 110 pounds. In most cases, donors may give if they are on medication, but should know the names of these medications.

The Red Cross always counts on a good turnout when it visits Cohasset so please respond, if possible, when a volunteer from one of the church, civic, corporate or social organizations calls. New donors are welcome and especially needed. To register and make an appointment for donating at a specific time or if you have any questions, call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290. You can also call the Red Cross at 1-800-448-3543.

Skippers sink Clippers' ship

Lady hoopsters pull out a tough one against SSL rival Norwell

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

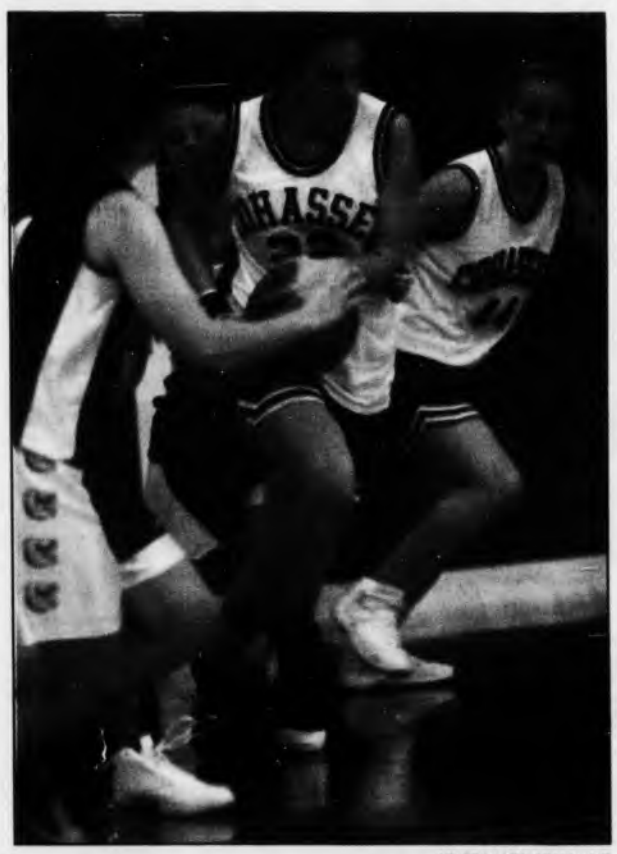
The unpredictable insanity of South Shore League girls basketball continues.

Last week, it appeared as though Norwell was set to make a run toward first place on the heels of an impressive win over Harwich.

Cohasset, however, had other ideas.

Led by Casey Anderson's 21 points and solid supporting efforts from the likes of Lacey Richardson, Chelsea Grossman and Nicole Whitney, the Skippers came away with a 42-39 win on their home floor last Friday night.

The result leaves Cohasset, Norwell and Carver all tied for second place with a 4-2 SSL record entering this week's action - whenever the snow decides to let said action commence. Abington is one game ahead with a 5-1 league mark.



The Clippers had a chance to send the game into overtime with a three in the closing seconds. The defense of Cohasset's Mia Lieb-Lappen forced a tough shot, which Anderson rebounded as time expired.

Sophomore Katelyn Stravinsky had 18 in the loss for Norwell, while classmate Elizabeth Ropi and senior Rachel Lewis each had nice games with eight points apiece.

Norwell head coach Bruce Emerson thought the difference between the two teams came on the glass.

"I thought Cohasset outrebounded us tremendously," he said. "For pretty much the whole night, we were held to one shot on each possession. On the other hand, Cohasset had a lot of offen-

Grapplers get a wake-up call

Old nemesis Wayland hands CHS its first dual meet loss

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

"Wayland is good at all three phases: neutral, down and on top. It shows us that we have to be good at all three as well, which we usually are, but there is definitely room for improvement."
Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney

A usual nemesis struck again for Cohasset wrestling last Saturday.

As they have done each of the last six years in dual meet action, Wayland defeated the Skippers, this time by a 40-25 score.

The loss was Cohasset's first on their dual meet record this year. Cohasset and Wayland were part of a quad meet that also featured Whitman-Hanson (whom Cohasset beat, 60-12) and Durfee (45-22, Cohasset).

The Skippers' dual meet mark is now 13-1.

The good news is that, while Wayland may have the upper hand in the head-to-head meets, Cohasset has come back to outscore them in the state tournament every single time.

Head coach Torin Sweeney is hopeful that will be the case again this year. He also said the loss should serve as a wake-up call to his team to let them know that, while they are very good, they are not invincible and have some things to work on.

"Wayland showed us what we need to improve on. We need to work on the little things, such as finishing our moves," Sweeney said. "Wayland is good at all three phases: neutral, down and on top. It shows us that we have to be good at all three as well, which we usually are, but there is definitely room for improvement."

Six Cohasset wrestlers won their matches against Wayland. The difference on the scoreboard came as a result of a couple Cohasset forfeits and Wayland earning a couple more pins.

The top performers against Wayland for the Skippers were senior Jon Littauer (119-pound weight class) and sophomore Nick Cambi (215), both of whom won via pin.

Also dominating against Wayland were senior Kevin Dinsmore (130), junior Dave McKenna (145) and senior Joe Kehoe (152). Dinsmore won via a 16-7 decision, with McKenna (9-1) and Kehoe (8-1) also winning easily.

The sixth winner was Tim Toomey in the 135-pound division. Toomey won two meets on the day, the latest sign that he was turning into a pretty solid wrestler.

Unfortunately, Toomey broke his elbow in practice Tuesday, a development Sweeney was lamenting the day after.

"He picked up his fifth and sixth wins of the year, and was really coming along," Sweeney said. "[Assistant] coach [Pete] Buckley and I were just talking about him the other day, saying how Toomey was really starting to turn the corner."

The injury leaves the Cohasset coaches in a bind when it comes to their line-up for remaining dual meets. They had been juggling Dinsmore and Toomey between the 130- and 135-pound classes, with Dinsmore taking on the tougher opponent between the two.

Now, Cohasset will have to forfeit the six points in one of

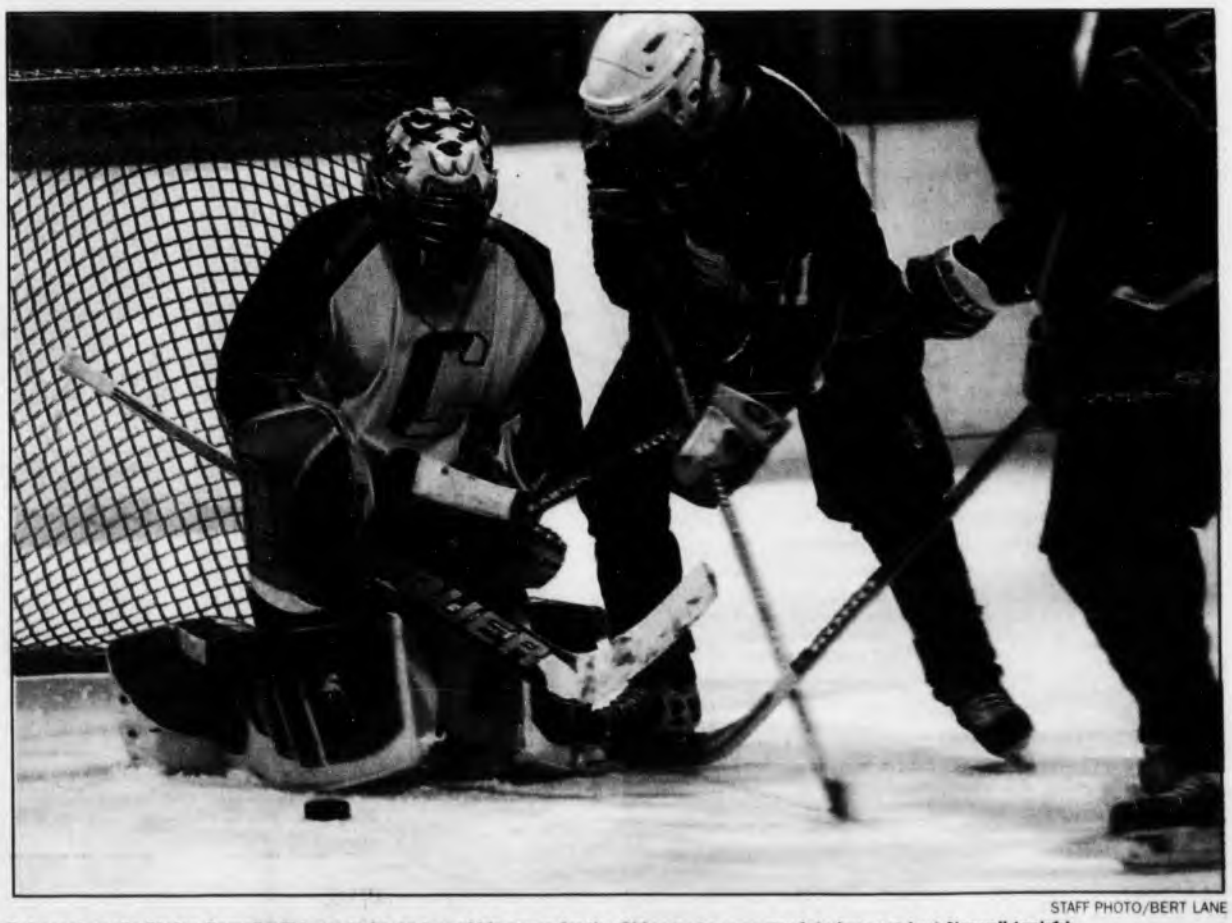
Cohasset vs. Norwell
Tonight, 8 p.m.
(weather permitting)
Pilgrim Skating Arena

When Norwell and Cohasset square off on the ice tonight, both teams will have something to prove.

The Clippers are coming off of a lopsided 7-2 home loss to Latin Academy last Friday, and will be looking to get back on track with a vital league win.

The Skippers, meanwhile, are 2-5 (1-2 in the South Shore League) and essentially already fighting for their tournament lives. Cohasset head coach Ben Virga says his team's game against Norwell is a must-win if his team is to have a reasonable shot of qualifying for the postseason.



"The time for motivational talks is over," Virga said Tuesday. "It's time to win."

The Skippers coach says the key for his team will be to outskate and move the puck faster than their opponents. He says he does not want to see his team get into an overly physical affair, saying such a contest "can drag us into our bad habits."

From the Norwell perspective, head coach Paul Hurley says his team needs to play strong from the start. Such was not the case against Latin Academy, where Norwell found themselves down 5-0 after one period.

"We just have to come out aggressive," Hurley said. "If we don't come out ready to play in that first period, we're going to those classes for the remainder of their dual meets.

The Skippers got some good performances in the other two matches against Whitman-Hanson and Durfee. Dinsmore and Littauer both finished off 3-0 days with wins over their opponents from those two schools.

Jake Watts (103) picked up wins over W-H and Durfee, with Ryan McLellan (112) getting a victory against Durfee. Adam Smith (125) went 2-1 on the day with wins over opponents from Durfee and W-H. Toomey also defeated his W-H opponent.

Shane Dorian (140) picked up a couple pins, while McKenna and John Keniley split victories against W-H and Durfee in the 145-pound class. Kehoe was 2-0 on the day against Wayland and W-H.

At 160, Colin Regan and Stephen Hurlbut, the squad's only freshman, combined for three wins. For Hurlbut, it was the first win of his varsity career.

Matt Casey (171) and Cambi both earned pins against W-H, while George Miller won at 215 against W-H and Durfee.

All in all, Sweeney said he was pleased with what he saw.

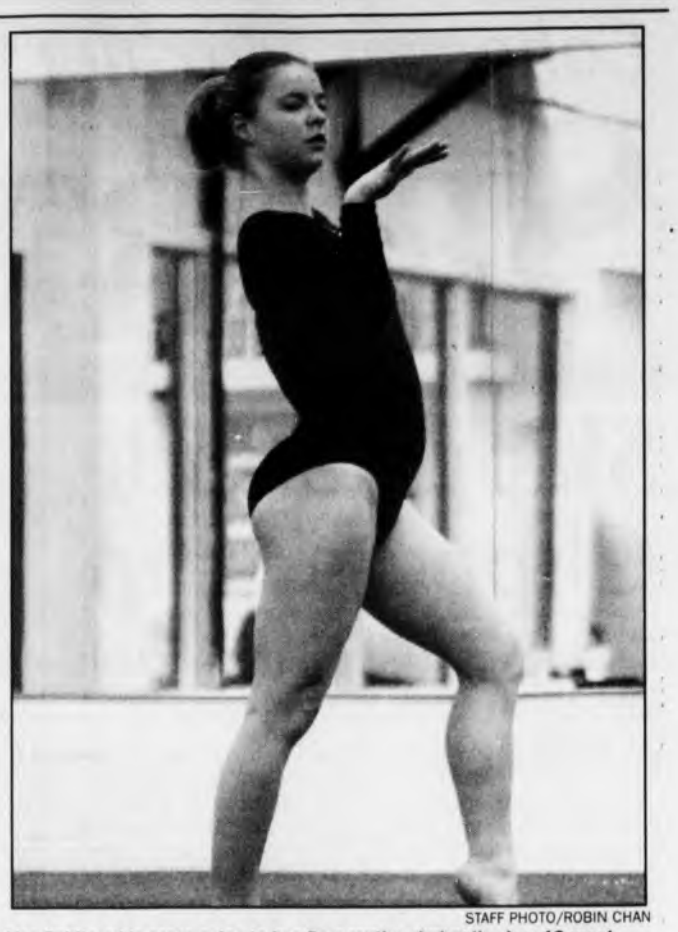
"We wanted a win against Wayland, but as usual, they just have 14 solid kids in 14 weight classes," he said. "Even [Cohasset] kids that won were pushed really hard, which can only help us in the long run."

Next up

The Skippers have another tough quad this weekend against Marshfield, Middleboro and Rockland. Sweeney described all three opponents as good, state-level teams having good dual meet seasons.

North Quincy and Pembroke will also be at the event, taking place at Cohasset High School. Dual meets start at 4, 5:30 and 7 p.m.

The action should include some great individual match-ups. Among those will be at 152, with Kehoe taking on Middleboro's Nick Kelly. The two squared off in the finals of last month's Marshfield tournament, with Kelly handing the Cohasset senior his only loss of the season.



Kehoe is one of several Cohasset wrestlers who have put sparkling individual records this season. Kehoe leads the way with a 23-1 record. Not far behind are Littauer (22-2), Dinsmore and Casey (both 20-2).

Rounding out the Skippers' top season-long performers are Dorian (20-4), McKenna (12-3) and Cambi (13-4).

Lisa Spirito adds some spice to her floor routine during the Jan. 13 meet against Sandwich. Spirito placed in three events in last week's win over Notre Dame.

Another notch in the belt

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

As we get closer to the league and state competitions, the Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team tuned up with another team victory last week.

Going up against a quality team in Notre Dame, Nor-Coh received good scores from a number of gymnasts to earn a 126.75-121.1 team win.

In the all-around, Nancy Durkin earned a 32.7. As has been the case all season long, the Cohasset senior stayed very consistent, scoring in the low 8's in all four events.

Norwell's Erin Kelly and Samantha Rosen were among the team's other leading performers. Kelly placed in all three events she participated in, including an 8.2 on the floor exercise and a 7.9 on the beam. Rosen's best scores came in the vault (8.15) and bars (8.0).

Lisa Spirito also placed in her three events, earning 7.7's on the bars and beam and a 7.9 on the floor.

C.J. Himberg, Corinna Durham and Kiersten Shontz rounded out Nor-Coh's top scorers from the meet. Himberg and Durham each received a 7.9 on the beam and vault, respectively, while Shontz scored a 7.8 on the vault. Gymnastics coach Kara Connerty said Shontz also showed some potential on her first ever appearance on the balance beam.

In general, Connerty was pleased with the win over Notre Dame, which ran her team's meet record to 7-2 overall.

"Once again, consistency from Nancy and Sam was key," she said. "We came into this one knowing we were going against a very competitive team; I felt like we had a pretty good meet."

The team's goal of reach 130 points in a meet is still yet to be achieved. The girls have three regular season meets - against Sandwich, Marshfield and Carver - in which to do it.

COASTAL STARS

Neil Conway scored a hat trick, Mike Carbone added two goals, and Trevor Salmon had three assists as the Squirt A Coastal Stars put on a passing clinic and skated to an 8-1 decision over Cape Cod Canal.

Early on, Cape Cod's goaltender robbed Stephen Harrington and then Patrick Burchill on the rebound. But the Stars' passing paid off when Harrington hustled to the puck in the corner, skated behind the net, and gave a wraparound pass to Chris Carpenter in front.

Early in the second, D.J. Evans kept the puck in to Chris Carpenter. Carpenter fired from the corner to Mike Carbone in front, and Carbone tucked it into the right side. Connor Maher made two brilliant glove saves, one on a break, and denied a flurry out front, to maintain the lead.

With 6:45 left, Dan Leblanc kept the puck in to Mike Carbone in the corner. Carbone found Jonathan Spitz in the right circle, and Spitz fired into the right side for a 3-1 lead.

A couple minutes later, D.J. Evans passed to Trevor Salmon in the corner. Salmon found Neil Conway in front, and Conway went five-hole. Less than a minute later, Kevin McDougall passed to Chris Carpenter coming out of the zone. Carpenter made a nifty pass to Mike Carbone at center ice, and Carbone broke in for a backhander into the right side.

With two minutes left, Carbone scored a shorthanded goal when Trevor Salmon found him in front and Carbone tucked it into the right side.

The Stars consistently found the skater breaking out of the zone or in front of the net, and the score would have been more one-sided except for the Cape Cod goaltending. Chris Carpenter, Trevor Salmon, and Jake Durkin were all robbed of goals on stellar saves.

Early in the third, E.J. Culhane sent Neil Conway on a break with a pass to center ice. Conway danced his way past two defenders and went to the top of the net for the 7-1 lead.

With 1:34 left, Trevor Salmon set Conway up out front with a pass from the corner, and Conway again went up top for

SPORTS NOTES

Learn to ski, snowboard at Ragged Mountain

The Recreation Commission of Cohasset is sponsoring a "Learn to ski or snowboard" program at Ragged Mountain on five Saturdays throughout the winter: Jan. 29 and Feb. 5. The motor coach will leave at 6:30 a.m. from Cohasset Town Hall parking lot, 41 Highland Ave. and returns there between 6:30 and 7 p.m. There will be an adult chaperone on the bus and available to assist your child at Ragged Mountain.

For cost efficiency, visit Buckles and Boards Ski Shop, Route 3A, Marshfield. A rental at Buckles and Boards allows you to keep the equipment through Saturday, Feb. 5, returning it after the season ends. The price for ski equipment is $129.99 and snowboard equipment is $169.99.

The $259.99 ski package includes: luxury motor coach transportation on all five Saturdays; adult chaperone on the bus; five, one-and-a-half-hour (1.5 hours) skiing or snowboarding lessons; and six full-day lift tickets at Ragged Mountain.

This will be an enjoyable treat for first timers or for those who want to improve their skills. For more information, call 781-383-4109.

Attention Hoopsters!

Attention all 5th and 6th grade basketball players, the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club is sponsoring exhibition games during halftime of select varsity basketball games. Come join the fun and spread the word!

On Friday, January 14th, during the Varsity Girls game, the 5th grade girls will play at halftime. The 6th grade girls will play on Friday January 21st. All Cohasset residents are invited free of charge to the Varsity game on the 21st. Please come and support the girls !

On Friday, January 7th, 5th grade boys will play some exhibition ball during halftimeo f the Boys Varsity game and on Friday February 4th, 6th grade boys will demonstrate their basketball prowess at halftime of the Boys Varsity Game. The CBBC invites all Cohasset residents, free of charge, to the action on February 4th.

All exhibition players should arrive at Sullivan Gym, prior to the start of the Varsity game. Wear appropriate attire and bring a parent. These games are not limited to Recreation or Travel league participants, but are open to all in the 5th and 6th grades.

Check out www.cohassetbasketball.com for all varsity game details.

New softball program for grades 7 and 8

The Cohasset Youth Baseball Softball Association (CYBSA) is pleased to announce the creation of a new seventh and eighth grade softball program for the upcoming 2005 spring season. The program is being established to help fill the void that has been created with the elimination of the middle school softball program.

The plan is to have an "in-town" league similar to the existing Major League softball program that is currently offered for the fifth and sixth grade girls. We hope to field as many as four teams and plan to play two games a week during the CYBSA regular schedule, which begins in April.

We are asking any girls interested in participating, or if you need further information, to please contact either Rob Spofford (383-1680) or Chris Haggerty (383-9930) by Saturday, Jan. 29 which will allow us adequate time to plan the inaugural season.

Wrestling Boosters thanks its many sponsors

The Cohasset High School wrestling team recently hosted its 14th Annual Wrestling Tournament on Jan. 15.

This year a total of eight teams from across the region participated in the all-day event. The Cohasset Wrestling Booster Club provides concessions and T-shirts for the team participants and fans at the tournament.

The proceeds from these sales all go to the Booster Club to provide uniforms and equipment, as well as senior scholarships for the wrestling team. The Booster Club is generously supported by numerous community organizations, businesses and individuals.

We would like to acknowledge and thank our many sponsors who have so generously supported us throughout the years.

Our thanks go to:

Atlantica Restaurant, Atlantic Bagel, Baystate Equipment, Cohasset Collision, Cohasset Harbor Marina, Cohasset Pizza House, Cosmos Cafe, Curtis Liquors, Dunkin Donuts, Fiori's Exxon Tiger Mart, Good Fella's Pizza, Good Sport, Hub Construction, Hurlbut Consulting, Joseph's Hardware, Kehoe Excavation, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, Pizza Box, Regan and Associates, Red Lion Inn, Shaws Supermarket, Silver Spoon, Stop and Shop Supermarket, Victoria's Pizza, West Corner Package Store and any and all individuals who have devoted their time, and energy to help our Cohasset Wrestlers.

Skaters ready for Norwell showdown

be in trouble."

The Clippers' goal is to win their league games between now and Feb. 5, when they play current league leader Harwich/Provincetown. HP beat Norwell 2-1 on Jan. 12 to give them a one-game advantage over the Clippers.

Hurley wants that Feb. 5 rematch to have an impact on the league championship picture.

"We need to win all the rest of our league games, so that Harwich game means something," Hurley said. "If we don't do that, we've dropped the ball."

Cohasset will be pleased enough to beat Norwell in hopes that it will propel them to more wins and at least a top-two finish in the SSL, which would automatically qualify them for the state tourney regardless of their overall record.

"If we can beat Norwell, we have a legitimate chance to finish in the top two [of the league], which is always our goal," Virga said.

Something has to give. The puck drops tonight at 8 p.m. at Pilgrim.

Lady hoopsters pull out a tough one against Norwell

sive rebounds."

Norwell jumped out to a quick 10-1 lead, but Cohasset head coach John Levangie made some defensive adjustments during a couple early timeouts that allowed the Skippers to get back in the game. The Clippers were up by only three at the half.

The second half was back-and-forth until the end, when Cohasset stepped up with the big plays. Big baskets from Grossman and Richardson and a critical free throw by Whitney with nine seconds left let the home team squeak out a victory.

The Skippers have come back from a three-game losing streak to win three in a row, and now stand at 7-4 on the season. Another three wins mean a return trip to the state tournament, and there appear to be enough winnable games left on the schedule to make that happen.

The loss drops Norwell to 6-6 on the year. With 10 games remaining on the schedule, Emerson knows goal for the rest of the year is pretty clear-cut.

"I'm hoping we can go .500 to finish the season," he said. "I think a legitimate goal for us would be to qualify for the tournament."

Selectmen to revisit Cedarmere LIP units application

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Roughly one year ago, the Board of Selectmen said it would not bring forward an application for the affordable portion of the Cedarmere development to the Department of Housing and Community Development. Although the project had already been granted a special permit from the Planning Board, the board voted unanimously to deny the project's request, saying it did not feel comfortable sending the application forward when it did not believe the project — at that time without a wastewater disposal plan — was complete.

However, while the project is still seeking a municipal sewer connection as the preferable method of wastewater disposal, it was granted a permit for an on-site system from the Department of Environmental Protection in December, which could affect a second review of the application. The board said Town Counsel will attend its Feb. 1 meeting to discuss the issue.

Bob Sturdy, Stuart Ivimey, and Michael Westcott of the Planning Board attended the Jan. 25 meeting of the board and had expected to discuss the matter in detail. However, due to a problem with communication, the board said it did not realize the Planning Board was on the agenda to discuss Cedarmere. However, the two groups began a dialogue which showed an obvious difference of opinion, which could mean next week will yield a lengthy conversation.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said there has been a difference of opinion regarding whether the board's approval of the units is required for them to "count." Currently, the town is trying to meet and affordable housing threshold set by the state and Cedarmere's affordable units could help the town meet the guidelines.

Cedarmere is the first project to file under the town's Senior Multi-family Overlay District bylaw. The 105-unit senior housing project is slated to be built on the 41-acre former Hayes Estate on Beechwood Street. Under the bylaw, projects are required to have an affordable component, and Cedarmere has plans to build its affordable building as a Local Initiative Program "units only" project. LIP projects have been described as being a "friendly 40B" which allows towns to make decisions based more on their individual needs, including everything down to the design of the buildings and the landscaping plans.

"This is the first time it's been done," said Sullivan, adding there have been many questions along the way. He said in order to help set the standard moving forward, it is important for Town Counsel to get involved.

The DHCD regulates all LIP projects, and as the highest elected official of the town, the Board of Selectmen is responsible for signing the application and sending it to the state for approval. Although the Selectmen have said without their endorsement the project won't move forward, developers as well as the Planning Board believe the project will satisfy the requirements of the town's bylaw, even without Selectmen approval. They have interpreted the bylaw to mean the board's endorsement is a prerequisite only to the actual counting of the units by the DHCD and not to their eligibility to be counted. In other words, for the units to "count" the selectmen need to sign the application, but currently, without the board's endorsement, the units are eligible to be counted in theory, which is all Cedarmere and the Planning Board says matters in order to build.

Sturdy said the Cedarmere developers have brought their plans to the state and have been given verbal approval for their affordable units. He explained the project is currently fully permitted and it will move forward with our without the board's signature.

However, Sullivan reiterated he would like to have Town Counsel present for the discussion, and it has not been his understanding the project can move forward without the board's endorsement.

Members of the Planning Board were frustrated the conversation was not going to take place as they had thought that night, and Westcott said while there had obviously been some miscommunication about the meeting, the board has known about he situation with the affordable portion of the project since last year. He said in his opinion, the issue has been "unnecessarily politicized," and the project is going to be built whether the board likes it or not.

Sturdy said in his view, it is apparent, "The selectmen don't really like this (Cedarmere), they like Cook," which he believes has held the board back from signing off on the units.

The town has been working with developers from Northland Residential to build a senior housing project on the Cook Estate, located on Sohier Street, which would be the second project to be filed under the town's Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw. The project has been having trouble finding a wastewater solution, as it had been thought the soil on site could support a system, but testing has revealed it cannot. The project has begun trying to gain a municipal sewer connection, but has been denied by the Sewer Commission twice. The project is hamstrung without a means of wastewater disposal.

Ivimey said if the units are approved by the selectmen, it will have no affect on the Cook project. Westcott added when the project is signed off on by the state, the town will be able to take advantage of 27 units of affordable housing which will be able to ward off future 40B projects from coming into town. "What is the obstacle?" he asked.

Town Counsel will be brought in to discuss the matter at the Tuesday, Feb. 1 meeting of the board, which will begin at 7:30 in the Selectmen's meeting room. All are welcome to attend.

Rugged ledge helps Cohasset weather the storm

Cohasset's Joe McElroy is all bundled up for a frosty winter walk with his dogs, Hershey and Sophie, at Stodders Neck Park in Hingham last Friday.

No one wants to lose power even for a few minutes never mind several hours, so those affected on Forest Avenue, North Main Street, Mt. Hope Street and Atlantic Avenue were inconvenienced to say the least.

But over on Glades Road in Scituate where people had to be evacuated, high winds downed power lines and the salt spray froze the wires to the ground and to the houses.

Mass Electric workers had to chip through the ice to make repairs and weren't able to finish until late Monday, Graves said.

Here in Cohasset, news of the impended blizzard sent people by the droves off shopping rivaling the pre-Christmas rush.

Both Super Stop & Shop and Shaw's were inundated with shoppers early Saturday as predictions said the storm would hit late that afternoon.

Sandy Litchfield, assistant grocery manager at Shaw's said, the store shifts workers around to have enough help on hand for the surge in customers, who stock up on necessities like bread and milk. Litchfield, who lives in Bridgewater, ended up spending the night at the supermarket, which was open Sunday despite the storm.

Bob Dunbar, a manager at Blockbuster, said the store had long lines on Saturday as customers rented movies – mostly new releases – to keep them entertained during the blizzard. He said people were in line outside before the store opened at 10 a.m.

Wilkens Jeanty, general manager at Papa Gino's in Cohasset Plaza, said the restaurant stayed open until 7 p.m. Saturday and 6 p.m. Sunday. During the blizzard on Sunday, Jeanty said at least 20 people called to ask for delivery but couldn't be accommodated because he didn't have the manpower. Most popular pizza during a blizzard Pepperoni because it's the easiest to make, he said.

Andy Hailer, manager at Curtis Liquors in Tedeschi Plaza, said the store is always packed before a storm because people panic. He said people stock up on "their favorites." He said Curtis Liquors closed early Saturday and didn't open Sunday – a decision he could help make after a drive out for a different kind of beverage.

During the height of the storm Sunday morning, Hailer drove from his home on Branch Street in Scituate to Leo's Exxon to get a cup of hot Dunkin Donuts coffee. It took him two hours, but it was worth it, he said.

"I couldn't see through the snow," he said. "That's why I knew we wouldn't be open that day."

Police Chief James Hussey said there were no major problems and praised the hard work of the DPW in keeping Cohasset streets passable.

He said a couple of police cruisers slid into snow banks while on patrol and one of the vehicles had some minor damage. The police have two, four-wheel drive vehicles that were called into action during the storm because even with chains on the wheels, the cruisers were having trouble on the slippery roads.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said the storm did take a toll on his department.

"The storm didn't go well for us," said Fire Chief Roger Lincoln, at Tuesday's Selectmen's meeting, although he said he didn't care to elaborate. "Let's just say we pulled it out and there was no damage. We'll leave it at that."

DPW Supt. Carl Sestito said the town's10 trucks and roughly 10-12 private contractors hired by the town worked around the clock during the blizzard. The DPW plows 37 miles of accepted roads and 11 private ways. The state takes care of Rte. 3A, Sestito said.

He said when the snow starts, the trucks put a mix of sand with a little salt on the road that creates a brine that cars chew up. Then, when the snow picks up, the trucks plow and add more sand and salt as the storm dies down.

Snow that is pushed into mountains in Cohasset Village is later hauled off in trucks and transported to the Sandy Beach Parking lot. "I haven't seen that much piled up in years," Sestito said about the mounds.

Sestito's assessment of the storm was that while it was tough to deal with, it could have been a lot worse.

"There was no real flooding and no downed wires," he said. Sestito said he sent all his workers – who had been putting in 18-hour days — home at 6 p.m. Tuesday night knowing more snow was due on Wednesday.

Cohasset schoolchildren had an early winter vacation this week. Schools were closed Monday and Tuesday in the aftermath of the weekend blizzard. They were closed Wednesday and Thursday as more snow blanketed the town.

Emergency Management Director Arthur Lehr said there were no evacuations during the weekend blizzard. The Second Congregational Church Hall was ready and manned just in case, he said.

"We were lucky the ice was not that bad over on Atlantic Avenue, which is prone to flooding," Lehr said. "The storm moved relatively quickly and was in and out.

"Hull and Scituate are much lower," he explained. "Cohasset has the ledges that protects us from the wave wash."

Why 2005 could be a record breaking year for making money in real estate

Robert Allen's legendary workshop reveals how to change your financial future in 90 days or less

Years ago, when I invented the now world-famous "No Money Down" real estate system, people thought it simply couldn't be done... Buying real estate without investing a dime of your own money! But, I have proven it can be done, year after year, in all kinds of housing markets. Perhaps you've seen me on TV — or perhaps you've read one of my bestselling books.

I've shown millions that just about anyone can make a fortune in real estate. But I have to tell you, in all my years of showing people how to create wealth through real estate, I believe it's never been as easy as it is today. Plus, I believe you can make more money now in real estate than ever before. And you can do it quicker.

Before the end of the year, you could be my next real estate millionaire — perhaps even a multimillionaire. Even if you're stone cold broke right now, you can still become richer than most Americans will ever be. The profit floodgates have truly opened for so many of my students. I believe you too can take advantage of all the lasting wealth that real estate can provide. And I'd like to tell you how in my updated workshop, Creating Wealth with Real Estate.

SAN FRANCISCO

Challenge #1: Find fast wealth in any city, town, or neighborhood

When I first developed my revolutionary system for buying real estate, I very publicly challenged the media to... "Send me to any city in America. Take away my wallet. Give me $100 for living expenses. In 72 hours, I'll buy an excellent piece of property, using none of my own money." Keep in mind, I would have no cash to invest. No connections. No firsthand knowledge of the real estate market where I was going. But I would have my new system for buying real estate. And that meant none of the above mattered.

DONE

I didn't buy one property. I bought seven!

The Los Angeles Times took me up on my gutsy challenge. In just 57 hours, I had taken title to not one, but seven properties — adding $722,000 in assets to my real estate portfolio. That's the equivalent of more than $10,000 an hour.

ST. LOUIS

Challenge #2: Take someone from unemployed to over $100,000 in equity

No better example of "ANYBODY CAN DO THIS" exists than when I made another major public challenge. As you might be able to guess, I'm not shy about proving my system works. So I declared..."Send me to any unemployment line in America. Let me select someone that is broke, out of work, and discouraged. In two days time, I'll teach my strategies for Creating Wealth. In 90 days, that person will be back on his/her feet with $5,000 in the bank."

DONE

It was in St. Louis, Missouri, where I pulled a couple out of the unemployment line and placed them on the path to wealth. Within 90 days, these first-timers earned more than $5,000 in cash. But that was just getting started. For within the following 12 months, they garnered more than $100,000. It changed their lives forever. Think of how an extra $100,000 or more could change your life and improve your family's future. What dreams have you put aside that $100,000 could reawaken?

NEW YORK

Challenge #3: Prove anyone can do it

I've become famous as America's leading expert on purchasing real estate with no money down. I've been interviewed in newspaper, and on radio and TV. In fact, Regis Philbin challenged me on the spot to prove my system worked for anyone. I selected a young woman right out of Regis' studio audience and guided this first-timer to earning more than $20,000 in 90 days. And now, I'd like to pull you out of your chair and invite you to discover why my powerful and internationally acclaimed Creating Wealth with Real Estate program has been so hugely rewarding for people across the country — and why it can also be your path to substantial wealth.

DONE

Your turn to succeed

Can you become a millionaire? Dozens of my students have. At the FREE preview of my workshop, you'll see real-life examples of how my powerful wealth creation strategies have helped people jump into making money right away.

Challenge #4: Make you my next millionaire! STARTS NOW!

I've proved time and again that my system can work just about anywhere, anytime, and for just about anyone — even people who are flat broke. Now, I'd like to prove it can work for you.

In fact, my big mouth could make you a millionaire. That's because I've challenged myself to create millionaires all across America. Yup, I went right for the "M" word: millionaire. Raised a few eyebrows with that one. But remember, you don't need money in the bank to buy real estate. You don't even need good credit. All you need is my Creating Wealth with Real Estate system and the personal gumption to go out and apply it.

Now it's your turn to take a step toward real wealth

The wealth is out there. I will show you how it's possible to find it and grab it. Take a life-changing step toward financial independence for yourself and your family today. The road (it's more of a superhighway actually) to millionaire status begins right here. Right now. I'm hoping to create at least 1,000 millionaires. And I'd like to count you among them. There's no telling when the free preview of my workshop will be back in your area because it's simply impossible for me to bring my famous workshop to every city. Grab this unique opportunity to discover hidden wealth opportunities in real estate.

Bring someone you care about

If you have a friend or family member who wants to increase their wealth, bring them to this FREE empowering event. I believe there's never been a better time to invest in real estate. Forecasts call for soaring demand for homes and rising prices. At this free event, you'll see how it's possible to ride this historic trend to personal riches.

True Stories. True Success.

"Right now, I have a positive cash flow of $2,800 on one property."
— Richard Douglas, New Jersey

"We didn't take anything out of our pocket, and we bought a $250,000 property that gives us a $900 monthly cash flow."
— Guy Burns, Nevada

"I bought two pieces of property and made $25,000 in 90 days. It's so easy to do this stuff, it's amazing."
— Gary Harris, Missouri

"These are proven methods — they work. You can make $25,000 to $35,000 in a matter of 60 days or less."

Historical Society Art Deco gala Feb. 12

There will be an elegant evening at the Paul Pratt Building Feb. 12 at 7 p.m. to benefit the Cohasset Historical Society. This very special party is designed to show off the society's new headquarters and highlight the possibilities of this historic setting as an exciting community space adaptable to many uses.

The decor for the Art Deco Gala will be the creation of "Party by Design" and Art Deco dresses from the society's unique Cohasset Collection will be on display.

The decor for the Art Deco Gala will be the creation of "Party by Design" and Art Deco dresses from the society's unique Cohasset Collection will be on display.

Passed hors d'oeuvres and an elegant buffet will be catered by The Borrowed Butler. An open bar will provide the drink of your choice.

A jazz trio of talented South Chore Conservatory musicians will play music of the '20s and '30s for listening and dancing.

Come in Art Deco attire or not! Valet parking will be available at St. Anthony Church.

Carriage House School open house and registration

The Carriage House School will hold an Open House and registration Saturday, Jan. 29, between the hours of 10 a.m. to noon. Parents and children are invited to visit and explore the classrooms and meet the teachers. If you are unable to attend this open house, call the school to obtain a registration form

The Carriage House offers programs for toddlers as well as preschool-age children. The Toddler Program enrolls children from 15 months (by Sept. 1) to 2 years 9 months. The Toddler Program is two days a week: Monday/Wednesday 9-11:30 a.m., Monday/Wednesay 12:30-3 p.m., Tuesday/Thursday 9-11:30 a.m., and Tuesday/Thursday 12:30-3 p.m.

Carriage House Preschool offers three programs to meet the needs of children 2.9 years (by Sept. 1) to 5. The Tuesday /Thursday morning program runs from 9-11:30 a.m., the Monday, Wednesday, Friday morning program runs from 9-11:30 a.m., and the Monday through Thursday afternoon program runs from 12:30-3 p.m. This afternoon program is for children who will be 4 by Sept. 1 and entering Kindergarten the following year, or need a challenging year before they enter Kindergarten. The afternoon program also offers an extended day opportunity until 4:30 p.m.

Open House will be held at the First Parish House of the Unitarian Church at 23 North Main St. Applications must be completed and returned to the school by Feb. 9. A $50 nonrefundable registration fee must accompany the registration form. The school enrollment policy is based on returning Carriage House families, First Parish families and remaining space will be filled by lottery. Parents will be notified by phone or mail the week of Feb. 14.

If you have any questions concerning Open House or the registration process, call the director, Georgie Gladdys at 781-383-9785.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Registration open for Summer Arts at Derby

Applications are now available for Summer Arts at Derby 2005 at Derby Academy in Hingham. Dates of the program are June 27 to July 29. Summer Arts is a five-week comprehensive arts program for students, ages eight to 15, that serves students from over 25 Massachusetts communities.

Students at Summer Arts select their own schedules from over one hundred courses. Classes are taught by professional artists and include offerings in visual arts, drama, dance, music, sports, gymnastics, writing, media, and photography. There is a full-scale musical production and a daily newspaper. The program culminates with an Arts Festival at which students demonstrate and share their talents through theatre, gymnastics, music, and dance. There will also be exhibits of pottery, painting, photography, 3-D art, and sewing projects. Original film and video projects will be shown.

Don't miss out on a creative and dynamic summer. For brochures and more information about Summer Arts, call 781-740-4766.

Special Education services are offered

The school department is seeking children with disabilities living in Cohasset who may be in need of Special Education services.

A child with disabilities is one who may have temporary or more permanent difficulties arising from: autism, communication, developmental delay, emotional, health, neurological, physical, sensory or other specific learning impairments which make learning problematic.

Any parent or caretaker of a child who is suspected of having a disability but who is not receiving services should contact Linda Gill, M.A., CAGS, director of student services at 781-383-6104.

IT'S HAPPENING

Valentines Fund Dance

The Third Annual Valentines Fund Dance to benefit the homeless will be held this year at the Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor Saturday evening, Feb. 19, from 8 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. The requested donation is $20 per person for the creative black-tie event. In view of people's contributions to Southeast Asia, the donation this year has been lowered by 20 per cent.

While our hearts go out to the more than 3 million made homeless by the tsunami, we must also take care of the more than 3 million adults and children who experience homelessness each year here in America. There will be dancing to two great rock and roll bands, The Pemberton Hill Players and Shaken Not Stirred. There will also be auctions of art works and a drumhead signed by all five members of Aerosmith, along with silent auctions and raffles of local artists' works, gift certificates and merchandise from local and Harvard Square merchants and restaurants.

Absolutely all proceeds go to benefit Bread & Jams, Inc., a Self-advocacy Center and day shelter located in Harvard Square, Cambridge. Hors-d'oeuvres will be provided by Atlantica staff. For dinner reservations pre-event call Atlantica at 781-383-0900. To reserve tickets for the event call 781-383-6568 as a limited number of tickets will be available at the door.

Family Square Dance at First Parish House

First Parish in Cohasset, a Unitarian Universalist congregation, will host a Family Square Dance Sunday, Feb. 13, from 4 to 6 p.m. Dan Pearl, a caller well-known throughout Massachusetts, will be accompanied by Carol and Steve Bittenson, who play fiddle and guitar, respectively.

Beginners and other non-experts are particularly welcome — especially children of all ages. Pear and his group will explain square-dancing basics. This promises to be a lively way to beat the mid-winter blahs. Cocoa, hot cider, and cookies will be provided.

This event will be held in the Parish House on Cohasset Common, and the entire community is invited. There is a nominal charge to cover out-of-pocket expenses: $10 per person or $15 for an entire family. Tickets may be purchased through Sandy Bailey, parish administrator, 781-383-1100, or at the door.

Haigh book signing

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, RT.3A, Cohasset will host Hull resident Jennifer Haigh on Sunday, Feb. 6, at 1 p.m. Ms. Haigh will discuss her latest book, "Baker Towers" a novel set in a post World War I American Industrial town. Jennifer Haigh is the author of the critically acclaimed "Mrs. Kimble", which won the PEN/Hemingway Award for outstanding first fiction.

She is a graduate of Dickinson College and the Iowa Writers' Workshop. Her short stories have appeared in Good Housekeeping, the Hartford Courant, Alaska Quarterly Review, Virginia Quarterly Review, and elsewhere. Refreshments (Champagne punch and meringues) will be served. This is a free event and the public is most welcome. Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 or order online (www.buttonwoodbooks.com) to reserve a signed copy.

Arts and crafts

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting telephone registrations at 781-383-4109 for an Arts and Crafts class for students grades K-2.

The program will meet at the Osgood School on Monday's, from 3 to 4:30 p.m. starting Monday, Jan. 31.

The fee for this unique opportunity is only $50 for the five week session. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109 to register, or for more information.

Room for romance

Treat your honey to a special stay in a Boston hotel

By FRAN GOLDEN
HERALD TRAVEL EDITOR

Nothin' says lovin' like a night in a great hotel room. So with Valentine's Day nearly upon us we checked out Boston hotels to find the best of the best when it comes to inspiring romance. Hey, it was a tough job but someone had to do it.

History and romance

The Fairmont Copley Plaza 138 St. James Ave. 617-267-5300, www.fairmont.com/copleyplaza

The grande dame of Boston hotels, this Back Bay property has always had our favorite grand lobby, all gold gilt, soaring ceilings, marble columns and crystal chandeliers. And now, thanks to a $34 million renovation, the guestrooms are something to talk about, too. The nicely redone rooms include eight themed suites. To us, the epitome of romance Boston style is the John F. Kennedy Library and Museum suite (other romantic options include the Boston Pops and Museum of Fine Arts suites). The historic decor of the apartment-sized Kennedy suite includes photo reproductions of the Kennedy clan. A romantic shot of the 35th president and Jackie sailing graces the bedroom wall. Nice touches include a copy of "Jackie Kennedy: The White House Years" photo book on the living room coffee table. And you can order room service from the Oak Room. The 1912 hotel has an impressive romantic history: Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton had their second honeymoon at the property. The Oval Room continues as a popular wedding spot. The Fairmont Copley's Romance Weekend package, available through the end of the year, is $274 and includes breakfast for two from room service or in the Oak Room and a chilled bottle of Moet & Chandon champagne. Upgrade to the JFK suite (or one of the other suites) for another $300. Regular room rates are from $249; suites from $999.

Victorian splendor

The Charles Street Inn 94 Charles St. 617-314-8900; www.charlesstreetinn.com A stroll on Charles Street is romantic on its own. Stay at the gorgeous 1860 Charles Street Inn and you're sure to wow your sweetie. The inn offers nine rooms, each done up in over-the-top Victorian splendor æ you'll feel like you've stepped back 140 years æ and named for a Beacon Hill resident who made a contribution to the arts. We think the most romantic (and sexy) is the Isabella Stewart Gardner, a front parlor room blossoming in pink, red and peach. There's a fluffy queen-sized bed dressed in Italian linens, a deep whirlpool tub, a working marble fireplace (where you can burn a provided fake log) and a bright bay window overlooking Charles Street. Isabella's portrait is above the bed. This is a place where the floors creak and the windows might have a draft, but you can curl up and feel cozy with someone you love. To assure the utmost in privacy, breakfast is served in your room. There are also complimentary French chocolates and fruit. Winter rates are $225 to $275 weekdays and $255 to $295 weekends. Romance packages are available and include dinner at nearby eateries.

Stately and Sexy

The Eliot Hotel 370 Commonwealth Ave. 617-267-1607; www.eliothotel.com Book a suite at this historic boutique-style hotel and you can pretend for the night you really live on Commonwealth Avenue, which we think is just plain cool. But there's more. The suites here boast an extravagant toile decor and bedrooms with puffy beds made up with Egyptian cotton linens and lots and lots of pillows that are just plain romance-inspiring (the mirrored wall behind the bed helps, too). Separate living rooms, connected by French doors, allow you a little privacy from your loved one if you need it. OK, the Italian marble bathrooms could have bigger tubs, but why quibble? You won't want to get out of bed. Room service is also somewhat limited. But, downstairs at Clio and Uni, chef Ken Oringer creates what has to be the most sensual food in town. Rates for a suite start at $275, while rooms start at $235. The hotel's Touch of Paris package includes suite accommodations, a three-course dinner at Clio and breakfast for two, for $450.

Puttin' on the Ritz

The Ritz-Carlton, Boston 15 Arlington St. 617-574-7100; www.ritzcarlton.com There's just something special about the Ritz (the old one) and you know it the second you walk in the door. There's tradition. There's history. There's elegance. Of course, all the guestrooms are lovely, but for an extravagant celebration, we recommend the Winston Churchill suite with views of the Public Garden and the Burberry store on Newbury Street. Here you can view the world-famous Yousuf Karsh portrait of Churchill during World War II (it's the original archival photo, signed by the photographer, who apparently was a fan of the Ritz). Churchill himself stayed at the property in 1949. Several dozen rooms at the Ritz, this one included, have working fireplaces, and the hotel's fireplace butler will come up and light your fire (you can choose from birch wood, cherry, oak or maple). Call the bath butler if you want a specialty bath such as the Simply Romantic ($85), which includes a bath with rose petals, champagne and strawberries. Dine in The Cafe or en-suite. Afternoon tea is a nice way to refresh, particularly if you partake of nearby shopping opportunities. On select dates in February, the hotel is offering Puttin' on the Ritz Evenings, priced at $475 for accommodations, a four-course dinner, dancing and entertainment, and parking. A separate February special offers signature spa treatments from other Ritz-Carlton properties. There are also romance packages. Regular rooms are from $295 per night; the Winston Churchill Suite and other garden-view suites are from $950 (suites without views are from $425).

Amenity-filled Romance

Four Seasons Hotel, Boston 200 Boylston St. 617-351-2980; www.fourseasons.com. At the swank Four Seasons, the concierge is there to help with creative ideas. Take the guy who wanted to propose in the Bristol cafe. After a little consultation, his poetic proposal was printed on the dessert menu and handed to his intended by a cooperative wait staff. This hotel also earns points for its indoor, heated pool and hot tub with skyline views of the Public Garden, not to mention the newly refurbished Aujourd'hui restaurant. Book one of the garden-view suites and enjoy views and nice surroundings with a separate bedroom and living room, perfect for a private room service dinner for two. The Four Seasons is undergoing renovations. Next year the rooms and suites should be even better, boasting a more modern decor and the addition of flat screen TVs. Weekend rates are from $325; $695 for a garden-view suite. A special Romantic Rendezvous package in February includes overnight accommodations, parking, rose petals on your bed, champagne and chocolate-covered strawberries, a horse and carriage ride with hot chocolate, continental breakfast in bed and an in-room Four Seasons Spa Massage for two. It's priced from $1,000.

WORSHIP NOTES

Join Hadassah for breakfast Jan. 30

The South Coastal Chapter of Hadassah is hosting a healthy breakfast Sunday, Jan. 30 at 9 a.m. at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St.. Debra Wein, the President and Co-founder of the Sensible Nutrition Connection, Inc., will be the featured speaker. Attendees will learn to recognize the elements necessary to evaluate popular diets, to review a diet and know whether it is supported by scientific evidence, to understand appropriate strategies for weight management and to appreciate what a healthy lifestyle entails with regard to healthful eating and weight management. A question and answer period will follow the presentation.

Debra Wein is a faculty member at the University of Massachusetts and teaches graduate courses at Simmons College. She also chairs the Women's Subcommittee of the Massachusetts' Governor's Committee on Physical Fitness and Sports. Debra has written articles for numerous magazines and has been featured on the Fox 25 10 o'clock news.

The cost of the breakfast will be $10. To reserve a seat, call Amy at 781-826-2020 or Bonnie at 781-749-7996.

Founder and facilitator of The Shawl Ministry of the South Shore, Rev. Victoria Gaskell packs up handmade shawls to be given to mothers of families being sheltered by Friends of the Homeless of the South Shore. Assisting her are two members of the Shawl Ministry, Sue Roche and Ethel Notrem, both of Weymouth.

Shawl ministry supports Friends of the Homeless

In a combined effort to spread Christmas joy to families living in shelters in our community the Hingham-based Shawl Ministry of the South Shore recently donated 20 handmade shawls to Friends of the Homeless of the South Shore. The shawls were given before Christmas to the mothers of the families currently residing in the Friends' housing units while waiting for permanent residences.

Friends of the Homeless, represented by co-founder Dorothy Newell, was the first to respond and accept shawls offered by Rev. Victoria Gaskell, founder and facilitator of this local branch of the Shawl Ministry. Sue Roche of Weymouth, a member of the Shawl group, organized the effort and delivered the shawls in time for Christmas, thereby extending a "warm hug" both spiritually and literally.

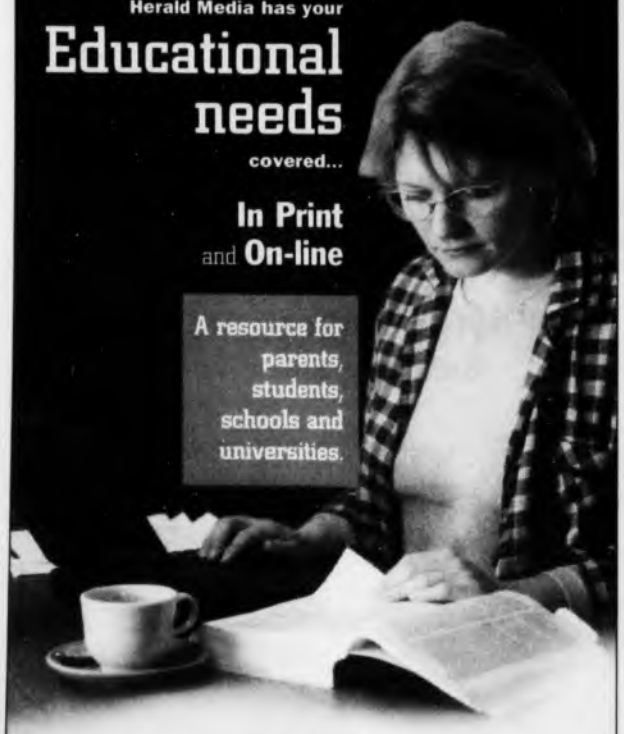
The local Shawl Ministry meets the fourth Saturday of every month and is open to anyone interested in knitting or crocheting as a way to express the love of God to people in need of care. The sessions close with a blessing over the works in progress and the finished shawls. New participants are always welcome and can be taught the needlework basics if necessary. Participants are welcome to create shawls for any person or project they desire.

The group of 20 participants is comprised of people of all ages and skill levels from many faith traditions — or non at all — who enjoy a relaxing atmosphere in which to meet new friends, share stories and exchange needlework tips. Knitters should bring size 11 or 13 needles and 3 skeins of yarn. Crocheters need a size M, N, or P hook and 4 skeins of yarn. For suggested yarns, patterns and more information about The Shawl Ministry go to www.shawlministry.com.

Friends of the Homeless of the South Shore is currently in its 21st year of service to families with children in need of shelter while they are searching for permanent housing. Originally sponsored by the Nazarene Church of Hingham with a shelter in their former building located on Hull Street, Friends began as the "family division" of Father Bill's in Quincy — which provides meals and overnight shelter for single, adult men and women. They are under contract with the state to house families that may consist of one or two parents or grandparents caring for children and/or teenagers, and expectant mothers.

After incorporating as an entity separate from the church, the Friends group added more shelter sites and a building in Weymouth to store furniture and household goods given to families to set up house at their new locations. Currently they have shelter sites in Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Norwell which consist of some separate apartments as well as "communal" arrangements where families with individual bedrooms share a common living room, dining area and kitchen. In addition there is an apartment on the lower level of the Nazarene's newly renovated church building at the corner of North and Thaxter Streets in Hingham. Previously owned by the United Methodist Church, the building is now known as the North Street Community Chapel with Rev. Cliff Hersey as pastor. Including all locations, a maximum of 25 families can be accommodated at one time.

In the past families lived in temporary shelter for two to six months. But with no new Section 8 housing vouchers available and long waiting lists for public housing vacancies many families are in shelters for as long as a year. Federal guidelines require placement of families within 20 miles of their former home and attempting to keep children in the same school they are attending with a bus ride of less than one hour. Quincy Community Action assists families in this area with locating housing with many organizations helping with employment and job training. A new state initiative has raised the income ceiling for families eligible for benefits.



Friends of the Homeless welcomes donations of both money and household items in good condition. Especially needed are twin size sheets, washable twin blankets, and new pillows. For further information call Dorothy or Herb at 781-340-1604 or write to 8 Driftway, No. Weymouth, MA 02191.

Break-in being investigated

Police are investigating a break-in and an apparent attempted burglary at a house on Forest Avenue last Thursday night (Jan. 20).

Chief James Hussey said the homeowners returned at roughly 9:40 p.m. when the apparent burglary was in progress. He said the would-be thief was in the house when the homeowners returned. When the perpetrator heard them drive up, he hopped in his car when that was parked out back and took off.

At this point, Hussey said, the homeowners don't think anything is missing. The house was ransacked and the would-be thief had stacked up valuables including jewelry and electronic equipment by the back door.

Hussey said detectives have pulled some fingerprints from the scene and hope they get a match.

There were no other burglaries reported, he said.

Anyone with information, should contact Hussey, Det. Sgt. Greg Lennon or Det. Garrett Hunt at 781-383-1055.

Conservatory plans musical fun(d)-raiser

South Shore Conservatory Trustees Motoko Deane, Jane Carr and Nancy Oddleifson have announced the March 5 event, "A Lotta Night Music" will benefit financial aid and educational programming at the school. The Conservatory's mission is to provide access to quality education in the arts and the is fun-filled evening will help to increase access to for all to the school's educational programs for more students.

Financial Aid Committee Chair Deane noted, "The Conservatory has provided financial aid for most of its 35 year history, but as the school has grown it is important that we expand the fund so that no student is denied participation because of lack of resources."

Many of the students receiving financial aid are from single parent families or a from families who have experienced job loss or catastrophic illness. family member has lost a job or experienced a lingering illness. There are a number of students who work one or two jobs in order to help out with to pay for their beloved lessons.

One mother wrote, "It is difficult being a single parent but with your help I can give my daughter the piano lessons she loves. You make me feel that I am being the best parent I can be and she is growing up to be a strong woman thanks to your assistance."

Many studies have indicated that music is an important educational element in developing critical thinking skills, goal-setting and other life skills. But In addition, the performing arts are also very beneficial in also contribute to the development of developing self-esteem, confidence and camaraderie in a supportive community. These qualities are particularly important to students who face hardships in other aspect of their lives.

"The Conservatory has provided financial aid for most of its 35 year history, but as the school has grown it is important that we expand the fund so that no student is denied participation because of lack of resources."

— Motoko Deane, financial aid committee

A Lotta Night Music will feature five varied musical venues, buffet supper, dancing, singing, a silent auction and much more. For details and to reserve tickets, please call 781-749-7565 or 781-934-2731.

Water Commission consults with expert

The Water Commission has consulted with a renowned expert in water treatment and TTHMs, Dr. David Reckhow, to help them reduce TTHM levels in the drinking water.

"We are fortunate to have the assistance of Dr. Reckhow, who took time out of his busy schedule to meet with us Friday (Jan. 15) at the Treatment Plant," said John McNabb, Chairman of the Water Commission.

The Cohasset Water Department announced earlier this month that tests revealed Cohasset water exceeded the maximum contaminant level for drinking water for Total Trihalomethanes or TTHMs of 80 parts per billion. Cohasset's average over the past year is roughly100 parts per billion.

Reckhow is Director of the Environmental Institute at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, where he is Professor of Civil and Environmental Engineering. He is also Vice-Chair of the Board of Public Works in Northampton, Mass.

"Dr. Reckhow, who is donating his services, is the 'experts expert' on TTHMs and has been researching water treatment methods and TTHMs, for the EPA, the American Water Works Association, and many water departments, for decades," said McNabb.

"He reviewed the results of our recent testing at the Treatment Plant and gave us a number of valuable suggestions to help us solve this problem," said McNabb. "He also took samples of our water and will do some tests to help us to design solutions to this issue."

Although there is no immediate risk from drinking water with elevated levels of TTHMs, it is a known carcinogen that if ingested over many years can cause damage to the liver, kidneys, and central nervous system, and may increase the risk of cancer. TTHMs are formed when chlorine mixes with organic matter. All water systems use chlorine to disinfect their water.

Water Commission Chairman John McNabb thanking Dr. Reckhow for his assistance, with Commissioner Glenn Pratt.

Science and art unite at the South Shore Art Center

Two programs of interest to naturalists, artists, gardeners and others enhance the current "Native Flora: Botanical Treasures of the Northeastern Seaboard" exhibition at the South Shore Art Center.

A lecture by Don Bishop, author and owner of Gardens Are...in Marlborough, will explore "Our New Non-Native Flora." An expert on flora in the region, Bishop will discuss the impact of invasive plants in our region and in our gardens. The gallery talk Sunday, Jan. 30, at 4 p.m. is open to the public. Refreshments will be served and a $5 donation is requested.

In February, area garden club members and all others are invited to escape the frigid weather and enjoy a Botanical Exhibition Tour and Tea in the Bancroft Gallery from 2 to 4 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 16. The afternoon begins with a gallery talk by noted naturalist Peter Alden and botanical artist Sarah Roche, coordinator of the Native Flora exhibition. Selected teas, sandwiches and sweets will be served. Reservations requested by Feb. 14. Cost is $20 ($15 for members of the SSAC and local garden clubs).

South Shore Art Center Gallery hours are Monday-Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and Sunday noon-4 p.m. For more information about Native Flora: Botanical Treasures of the Northeastern Seaboard, visit www.ssac.org and for reservations call 781-383-2787.

Uncut and uncensored, this "Woolf" has teeth

Revival of Albee classic comes to Wilbur Theatre

Edward Albee

Two prior Broadway-bound productions of Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" — including the original 1962 production — have stopped in Boston, but the legendary playwright promises audiences for the latest revival, which opens next month at Boston's Wilbur Theatre, something they haven't seen before.

"This will be the full, unexpurgated play," explained Albee at a recent Ritz-Carlton press conference. "The most interesting difference between this and the first production is that this time we will be doing the entire play. In the early 1960s, there was a little organization called the Catholic Church which demanded changes to the script. This time, we will be making no cuts in Boston."

Kathleen Turner

Instead of being watered down, the new production will be the 100-proof original, complete with the four-letter words and allegedly blasphemous references that riled the Church. Set on the campus of a New England college, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" is the story of the searingly intense relationship between George and Martha, a college professor and his wife, whose booze-fueled verbal sparring spills over on a younger couple who've come for dinner.

Originated on Broadway by Arthur Hill and Uta Hagen and immortalized on film by Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor, George and Martha will be played in this latest production by Bill Irwin and Kathleen Turner. An original member of San Francisco's famed Pickle Family Circus, Irwin more recently appeared on Broadway opposite Sally Field in Albee's "The Goat, or Who Is Sylvia?"

Best-known for films like "Body Heat," 'Romancing the Stone," "Peggy Sue Got Married," and "Prizzi's Honor," Turner returns to Boston for her fourth stage performance following "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," "Tallulah," and "The Graduate."

Bill Irwin

Turner likes her character very much, even if she hasn't seen any of her predecessors in the role. "I have assiduously avoided seeing past productions, but when I read it I was drawn to the play's black humor. I seem to have a predilection for choosing roles with black humor. This play is not as well-known for its humor as it could be and I want to explore that," says Turner. "Martha has real passion, too, which attracts me to her. She is not coerced or hampered by convention or forethought. The play is about the 23-year relationship between George and Martha and the kind of shorthand that a couple has after all those years."

That the play which won Albee, 76, his first Tony Award is headed back to Broadway for its third run pleases its author, who has won three Pulitzer Prizes ("A Delicate Balance," "Seascape," and "Three Tall Women") and two more Tony awards ("A Delicate Balance," "The Goat, or Who is Sylvia?") in the 40 years since. Albee believes his story of the definitive dysfunctional couple still functions quite well.

"If a play dates, that means its usefulness is over. This play is good.It has endured, because it is still relevant."

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" will be at the Wilbur Theatre, 246Tremont Street, Boston, Feb. 10-27. For tickets and information, visit the box office or call 617-931-2787.

LISTEN To Life

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

WHAT YOU DON'T KNOW CAN HURT YOU

According to analysis of nearly 1,600 research studies, at least one in four Americans aged 65 years and older suffers from hearing impairment, but the condition is often undiagnosed and untreated. The reason for this is that most seniors do not undergo simple screening tests even though effective treatments could dramatically improve their hearing. Less than ten percent of primary care physicians screen elderly patients for hearing loss, and only 25 percent of patients who could benefit from hearing instruments receive them. This puts many seniors at a disadvantage, as researchers found strong links between hearing loss in the elderly and social isolation, depression, low self-esteem, and difficulty functioning. Depression, for instance, is twice as prevalent among hearing-impaired seniors.

Discovering and acknowledging there is a hearing problem is the first step toward correcting it. The next step is turning to a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist for comprehensive examination, evaluation, and expertise in pairing the appropriate instrument with each individual impairment. Do you suspect there may be a problem with a loved one's hearing? Is your hearing less than it used to be? Call us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER 781-337-1144, to arrange a free, painless, comprehensive hearing evaluation at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. Gradual hearing loss is often imperceptible even to those who suffer from it and requires hearing tests to detect.

First-grader swims for boy in Sri Lanka

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Six-year-old Joshua Miller can tell you a lot about tidal waves. He understands how the water is displaced after the earth moves following an earthquake. And he also knows about Sri Lanka and the suffering in that part of the world following the tsunami disaster.

During a recent, long car ride to Stow, Vt. for a skiing trip, Joshua, his parents and younger brother Isaac, 4, talked about what had happened and about possibly doing something to help.

"So I started thinking," the first-grader recalled. "By swimming, I could do something and not just ask for money."

Over the past two weeks, the Spring Street youngster has been hard at work swimming lengths in the pool at Webb's Pro Fitness in Norwell where he takes lessons. He plans to swim 20 lengths and is asking for family, friends and classmates to sponsor him. The money raised will be used to sponsor a boy named Lakshitha, who lives in Sri Lanka with his mother, brother and sister.

Hail to the Chief

Selectmen give Hussey high marks

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Chief James Hussey could be becoming one of the most familiar figures in town even though he's been at the helm of the Cohasset Police Department less than a year.

He's spoken at neighborhood meetings and gatherings, appeared at openings, and even modeled in a benefit fashion show, to name a few.

He's also conducted a town-wide police survey, provided more public information in the police log, and has made good on plans to enact a Police Advisory Council that involves members of the community.

Hussey has also worked very closely with the school department to draft a memorandum of How convenient!

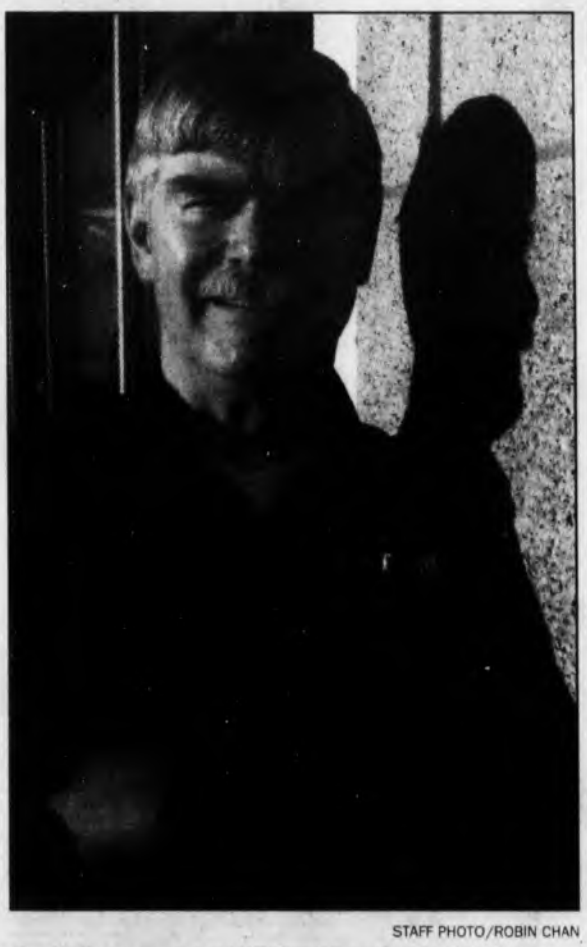
Tedeschi's open during blizzard



By Samantha Brown

They came on foot, they came on skis,, they even came by snow mobile, and they all ended up at Tedeschi's Food Shops in downtown Cohasset — one of the only stores which remained open throughout the entire blizzard two weeks ago.

"In a snow storm, milk flies off the shelves like there will never be milk again."
— Tom Sullivan, Tedeschi's manager

Thanks to General Manager Tom Sullivan, a Middleborough resident who arrived for his shift in Cohasset at between 6 and 7 p.m. Saturday (Jan. 23), Tedeschi's was able to serve roughly 400 customers during the height of the storm.

Knowing he wouldn't be able to make it home, Sullivan resolved to camp out at the store until the skies cleared, and eventually returned home on Monday night. "Saturday night I didn't sleep at all," he said, but fortunately, he was able to catch a few hours of sleep during the night on Sunday.

Tom Sullivan, manager of Tedeschi's on South Main Street, worked roughly 50 hours during the blizzard to keep the convenience store open for customers.

Sullivan worked the shift alone, but kept busy shoveling out a path every once in a while as the snow kept falling to ensure those that did venture out were able to make it inside. "I shoveled all the way down to the bank," so people could get to the ATM, he quipped.

Working by himself is something Sullivan said he is used to. "You do what you

Wind turbine is topic

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Great strides have been made in alternative energy sources, and residents Merle Brown and John Dunn would like to see a committee formed to investigate ways Cohasset can help do its part to conserve.

Whether it be wind or solar energy, the two have asked for and been granted selectmen's approval for a Town Meeting article, which if passed would authorize a committee to report back to the Annual Town Meeting in 2006 with suggestions on ways to make the town more "green" from an energy perspective.

One of the main objectives of the committee would be to investigate the possibility of installing a wind turbine somewhere in town. Although it has been a somewhat controversial topic in the past, Brown said it is an efficiency which has made great progress, that the town should look into. "We're not looking for money right now, we're looking at sites. We just need to get a

CEA grant award

State Sen. Robert L. Hedlund and Rep. Garret Bradley have announced the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs is the recipient of a Formula Grant Award from the Executive Office of Elder Affairs. The state granted the CEA a Formula Grant of $7,662 to employ staff and assist with the cost of in-service training.

"This grant will greatly benefit the elderly community in Cohasset by improving the services that the Council on Aging can provide," Hedlund said. "It is wonderful to see state government taking a proactive approach and working with local senior advocates to meet the needs of the elders in the Commonwealth."

"Seeing first hand the wonderful work the Cohasset Council on Aging provides to our seniors, I am happy that the state will provide necessary money to help ensure continued success," Bradley said.

Formula grants were made possible through the Fiscal Year 2005 budget recently enacted by the State Senate. Formula Grants are based upon the size of the recipient town's elder population.

Hussey to speak at PSO Diversity meeting

Join Chief Hussey on Monday, Feb. 7, at 7:30 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Library Community Room. Chief Hussey will talk with members of the Cohasset PSO Diversity Committee about the importance and safety around issues of respect for differences, hate crimes, No Place for Hate Community Program, police training, and other key issues. Contact Allisonmoskow@hotmail.com for any additional information.

McNabb attends water conference

Water Commission Chairman John McNabb recently attended the AWWA 2005 Source Water Protection Symposium in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla.

"At this Symposium," said McNabb, "I attended lectures on watershed protection, lake management, source water monitoring, and algae control. The information I take back to Cohasset from this Symposium will be helpful for our ongoing work to reduce TTHMs and to improve drinking water quality."

Before flying back to Cohasset, McNabb also toured the Palm Springs Main Water Treatment Plant to see its new MIEX system – the first in the United States — for reducing dissolved organic content in water to help reduce TTHM levels..

McNabb's attendance at the Symposium including travel was paid for by his employer, Clean Water Action, where he helps local citizen groups take action to protect their drinking water supplies.

The Symposium was sponsored by the American Water Works Association and was held Jan. 23-26 at the Palm Beach Gardens Marriott Hotel.

Committee appointed to investigate schools

Residents Richard Avery, Joseph Barresi, Gabriel Gomez, Maureen Jerz, and Margaret Lynch have been appointed to serve on the committee to investigate why the schools are over-budget. Voters approved the formation of the committee During the Dec. 6 Town Meeting. The committee was to be appointed by the Troika, but Selectman Chairman Michael Sullivan and Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee were unable to meet with Town Moderator George Marlette, and therefore made the appointment without him. Sullivan said because a quorum of the Troika was present the appointment is valid. A date has not yet been set for the committee's first meeting. For more information, please contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Atlantica to host wine dinner benefit

Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor will host a chef's wine dinner to benefit Wellspring of Hull, Thursday, March 3 at 7 p.m. The dinner will feature a four course meal, and each course will be matched with a glass of wine. There will be a wine and food expert on hand to discuss each course. Proceeds will help Wellspring continue its mission of providing support and skills to people facing challenges with their financial, physical, or emotional well-being, and helping them achieve independence and self-sufficiency. Tickets are $75 per person. Please call Atlantica at (781) 383-0900 for reservations.

Flu shots available

The Cohasset Board of Health still has flu shots available for those 18 and older. For more information call Public Health Nurse Judith Fitzsimmons at 781-383-2210.

Town Census forms due

The Town Census for 2005 has been mailed to each household. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2005. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible although you may have recently renewed your 2004 license. If you did not receive your census, call the Town Clerk's Office at 781-383-4100.

Bids sought for pumphouse project

The Water Commission is soliciting bids for the construction of a new pumphouse for the Ellms Meadow Wellfield, which has been out of commission since 1995. Bids will be accepted until Feb. 24, the successful bidder should be selected by March 17 and the construction should be completed the end of 2005.

"The reactivation of the Ellms Meadow Wellfield will provide up to 170,000 gallons of day of well water which will help to improve the quality of Cohasset tap water and lower our TTHM levels," said John McNabb, Chairman of the Water Commission.

"The Ellms Meadow Wellfield will also be a useful emergency drinking water supply for the Town," said Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt, who is also Deputy Director of Emergency Preparedness for the Town.

The Water Commission began the reactivation of the wells in 2002, when five new tubular wells were installed to replace the seven tubular wells that have been in place since around 1886. In 2003 the Mass. DEP approved the wells to pump up to 170,000 gallons a day.

The construction will also include the demolition of the existing pumphouse and the relocation of the 119 year old pump to an appropriate location where it can be viewed for its historical significance. The new facility will be a concrete block structure, covered with woodlike siding composed of cement fibers and an asphalt shingle roof. The facility will have doors but for security reasons will have a perimeter fence and no windows.

Copies of the bid documents can be obtained from the offices of Tutela Engineering, 12 Bay St., Wilmington, Mass. 01887 upon payment of a refundable deposit $50 per set of contract documents, and may be viewed at the Lily Pond Water Treatment Plant, 339 King St.

LIP application for Cedarmere goes to state

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although some members of the Board of Selectmen were hesitant to sign, members have agreed to send forward an application for the affordable portion of the proposed Cedarmere senior housing development to the state.

By signing the application, Selectmen are essentially endorsing the affordable portion of the 105-unit project, slated to be built off Beechwood Street. The application will be reviewed by the Department of Housing and Community Development, and if all criteria are met, the 27 affordable units will be counted toward the town's affordable housing stock once building permits are pulled.

By signing the application, Selectmen are essentially endorsing the affordable portion of the 105-unit project, slated to be built off Beechwood Street.

One year ago, Cedarmere developers came before the board requesting its signature, which as the highest elected body in town is required to endorse the project in order for it to be considered by the DHCD. Although the project had already been granted a special permit from the Planning Board, the Board of Selectmen had voted unanimously to deny the project's request, saying it did not feel comfortable sending the application forward when it did not believe the project — at that time without a wastewater disposal plan — was complete.

However, while the project is still seeking a municipal sewer connection as the preferable method of wastewater disposal, it was granted a permit for an on-site system from the Department of Environmental Protection in December, which resolved that issue.

Even with a wastewater plan in place, the Board of Selectmen has some questions it needed answered before it would sign off on the units, and Town Counsel Richard Hucksam attended the Feb. 1 meeting to help provide some answers.

This is the first time a project has been filed under the town's Senior Multi-family Overlay Residence District bylaw, and Selectmen said they were very concerned with setting dangerous precedents for the future. The bylaw was drafted to help fend off 40B projects and allow the town to have more control over the process, and this is the town's first pass at making it work. Chapter 40B is the state law that allows developers to skirt local zoning in exchange for providing affordable housing. The town is currently trying to meet a 10 percent affordability threshold set by the state to get out from under the threat of more 40B projects.

While members of the board said they felt it was their duty to review the application before signing off, members of the Planning Board, which issued a special permit for the site and took the project through a very rigorous public hearing process, thought the board had had enough time to review the project, as the application for the affordable housing portion came before it more than one year ago.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she was concerned the affordable units weren't invisibly integrated with the market rate units and wondered if the DHCD would approve the project based on that fact alone. She asked developer David Calhoun whether the project could be changed at this point in time.

Calhoun said the project is fully permitted and is beyond all appeal dates and plans would not be changing. In addition, he said the development meets the criteria of the permit it is requesting — a LIP "Units only" permit.

Selectman Fred Koed said if the board signs off on the project, the DHCD will ultimately review it in its entirety and will inform the town if anything is amiss. He said it will be rejected if it doesn't meet the criteria and it will do no harm for the board to send it on and get the process going. Town Manager Bill Griffin agreed and said he would be happy to speak with someone from the DHCD about the project, but the conversation will only happen after the application arrives. The board agreed to sign the application and send it on to the state.

Schools may need $700,000 override

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For the first time since budget discussions began, a figure for a possible override has been floated, and although it is only preliminary, could total $700,000 for the schools alone.

At a budget summit held Wednesday night, Town Manager Bill Griffin, Director of Finance Michael Buckley, members of the Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee and School Committee, along with Superintendent Denise Walsh and School Financial Assistant Karen Park, met to discuss both the fiscal year 2005 and 2006 budget situations.

Walsh explained the figures for the FY05 budget are still not final, and figures can continue to change before the close of the fiscal year. She also said in planning for FY06, the School Committee has begun building from the ground up, beginning with a zero based budget, while following the Strategic Plan, the schools have formulated a budget to assess the district's needs.

However, Selectman Rob Spofford said it is important to have firm figures for FY05 before moving on to FY06. He said he has received many questions from the community regarding what FY05 will look like when it's over and he hasn't been able to provide that information. Walsh said at this time, those numbers are not available.

Spofford asked, "What happens if the year's done and we have a shortfall?"

Town Manager Bill Griffin said if there is a shortfall for the FY05 budget when the final numbers come in, Town Meeting will need to approve paying for it. If the numbers are not known at the time of the Annual Town Meeting, slated for April 2, a Special Town Meeting will need to be called for that item alone. If Town Meeting votes it down, the town will be left with an illegal deficit and it will be corrected when the tax rate is set.

Because figures cannot be nailed down on the school's side, there is no way of knowing exactly what the town could be asked to contribute for the FY06 budget. Although the budget has been built on the needs of the school department, because needs have not been factored in correctly in previous years, Walsh said it has been working with a "rolling deficit," and this is the year where the schools need to financially catch up.

However, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said residents needs to know what the school department cannot live without, and asked, "How much do we tell people we need for an override?" Buckley said the difference between the amount he is suggesting and the amount the school department needs is roughly $700,000, just for the schools.

"Speaking for myself, people aren't going to say $700,000 is OK," said Dormitzer.

Buckley said currently, he has presented a budget for the town which will not require an override. He said he has cut one position from the Department of Public Works, one position on the fire department and another from the police department. He has reduced the Town Planner to one day per week and he has eliminated one Town Hall clerical position. He said he has also cut back on equipment and capital purchases to make the budget work. He said it is his job to present a balanced budget, which he has done, although he knows it will not provide the same level of service.

Spofford suggested the boards all consider this budget session as a "first pass" at the school budget suggested the School Committee go back and re-evaluate the situation, and then decide what it would like the Board of Selectmen to do. If an override is necessary, the board will have to recommend it. The three boards will have another budget meeting Wednesday, Feb. 16 in the Selectmen's meeting room at Town Hall. The meeting will be televised, but all are welcome to attend.

Special Education

One of the major factors in building the school budget is the amount of money the town is required to pay for out of district special education tuitions. Of the total proposed 8.1 percent increase for the FY06 budget, 4.3 percent (or roughly half the increase) has been allocated to cover out of district tuition increases.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he has heard of two children the town is required to pay for, who were recently added to the district, but will not live in town. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the children, from what he understands, do not have parents in town and never have. Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said an attorney in town is responsible for the children.

Supt. Denise Walsh said because of the nature of the case, confidentiality is an issue and would not give any more information regarding the situation. She did say, however, the schools will be responsible for one of the children beginning July 1. She said the town has been going through litigation regarding the matter, and special education legal expenses were not accounted for in the budget.

In addition, Walsh said as a way to help keep the budget in line, nine special education aide positions have been cut and will not return for the FY06 budget.

Payroll memo asks employees about check scam

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although the results of a forensic audit of the town's books and procedures have not yet been made public, a memo included in the paycheck of every town employee the week of Jan. 20 suggests something could be awry.

In a memo sent to all town employees, Karen Roberts of Melanson Heath stated, "It has come to our attention that the former payroll clerk, Nicole Bartlett, informed an employee that they had received a check in error. She further instructed the employee to cash the check, and then return the cash to Nicole because it belonged to the town."

Roberts instructed employees to contact the company immediately if they know of any other instances where town employees may have cashed paychecks and returned the money to Bartlett.

Bartlett, 44, of Marshfield, who is the former administrative assistant to the Town Manager, pleaded guilty Jan. 6 to charges she stole more than $200,000 from her former employer, the Children's Museum in Boston, by depositing unauthorized payroll checks into personal accounts.

Bartlett worked for the museum from October 1998 through March 2003, and was hired by former Town Manager Mark Haddad in May 2003. She resigned from her position in Cohasset, which included overseeing the town's payroll, on Sept. 27, 2004, when news of the charges relating to Children's Museum became public.

The town subsequently hired auditors from Melanson Heath & Company, P.C. to conduct a forensic audit, which will cost $12,500.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley, who was serving as Acting Town Manager until Monday, said this new information could have an effect on the audit's progression.

"I don't know if they've (Melanson Heath) gotten any responses," as a result of the memo, he said, adding if more employees come forward to report potential problems, the audit could take a little longer than expected.

Cohasset's Avery, others helping with Hull bird count

Data to help determine effect of wind turbine

Sally Avery covers the early afternoon in a program designed by Mass Audubon Field Ornithologist Simon Perkins.

By John Galluzzo
CORRESPONDENT

It was not how she envisioned spending New Year's Eve. Her husband wanted to go skiing, but instead, Cohasset's Sally Avery said she wanted to stand atop Hull's capped landfill for at least 20 minutes and count birds.

Avery, an expert birder and volunteer for various local environmental organizations, spent part of every Friday in December at the landfill as part of the Weir River Watershed Association's and Mass Audubon's joint volunteer bird monitoring program.

Three birders (Avery and Hull's Helen Cross and Nancy Swirka) taking censuses each Friday from early December through the commencement of construction of the new wind turbine in March will provide data that will help all of the organizations involved, including the Hull Municipal Light Plant, estimate the potential for wildlife impacts with the blades of the windmill. Swirka covers the early morning 20-minute shift, Cross the mid-day shift and Avery the early afternoon in a program designed by Mass Audubon Field Ornithologist Simon Perkins.

"I've been lucky with the weather," said Avery, standing aside a pile of dirt excavated during recent test borings. "Given it's the winter it really could be quite onerous up here."

From the spot of the boring, strewn with half-buried articles of clothing, rubber boots, tires and who knows what else, Avery, Cross and Swirka survey a 360-degree sweep of about a 100-meter radius. Thus far, there have been plenty of all three common types of gulls and more starlings than any of them have ever wanted to see. [Starlings, pigeons and English house sparrows, as imports that have negatively affected native bird populations, are the only birds not protected by the Migratory Bird Act of 1918.]

Every once in a while, something interesting will happen up on that landfill, as it did the day Avery showed up late and was taken aback when she saw a white pelican flying right towards her, a true rarity for Hull. "That one would have been close," she said.

When word first leaked out that the town had selected the landfill as a potential site for Hull Wind II, Samantha Woods and the other members of the Weir River Watershed Association immediately began to ask themselves and others whether or not such a project would have any negative impact on the ecosystem of the state-designated Area of Critical Environmental Concern (ACEC) and the Weir River Estuary Park.

"There are no good answers," Woods explained. "You can't translate one site to another in terms of potential impact." In other words, no matter how much data is collected elsewhere, because of the uniqueness of the airspace of the watershed as a flyway for migrating birds, there simply may not be a match out there; hence, the study.

Several problems exist with the short, three-month or so window the groups have to record the necessary data. First, they are missing both the spring and fall migrations, when avian traffic will be at its heaviest. Second, no records are being taken of nighttime flights. And third, a single year's census would not be enough to draw specific conclusions on potential impacts, as migration numbers can vary from year to year. Finally, an osprey pole near the landfill begs the question of potential danger to the nesting family, although birds of prey expert Norman Smith, director of Mass Audubon's Blue Hills Trailside Museum in Milton feels the birds will be fine.

Still, even with all of these concerns, Woods has been pleased with the Town's response to the request for the survey. "There's no protocol in place in terms of permitting, and no requirement for the town to have to do the study," she said. "They just chose to do the right thing. They did more than they had to."

Similar discussions are occurring all across Massachusetts, as more than 200 turbines, 130 on Nantucket Sound alone, have been proposed in various communities. According to a position statement on wind energy released by Mass Audubon this past fall, "The potential environmental risks of wind energy development can be reduced by the development of responsible and informed standards for siting wind energy facilities. The development of wind energy in Massachusetts should also include standards for the installation and decommissioning of these facilities. Unfortunately, our state and federal governments have failed to establish such standards."

Much like with cell towers in recent years, windmill construction projects in Massachusetts at this point pre-empt legislation, sneaking turbines into place before the bell tolls, as it were.

"Of the renewable energy options currently available," according to Mass Audubon, "wind power has the greatest potential to mitigate the harmful environmental effects of rapid climate warming caused by the burning of fossil fuels. Technology to harvest wind is among the more advanced, widely available, and environmentally benign of the renewable energy options. While all energy choices have environmental impacts, the potential environmental risks associated with the operation of wind energy facilities must be evaluated against the proven destructive effects associated with the production and consumption of fossil fuels."

"We have to balance the potential for bird impacts to the benefits," said Woods. "Does a small number of dead birds a year measure up against the shutting down of a strip-mining operation in the Midwest?"

Even with the potential for avian impacts in their chosen area of environmental stewardship, the Weir River Watershed Association feels a wind turbine is a positive step.

"We are in support of renewable energy," said Woods. "We should, though, offset the impact by promoting conservation and informing people about our natural resources." A new turbine, for instance, should not come with the notion of just more available energy being thrown into the grid for careless use, but with a message to conserve as much energy as possible.

For at least the next three months, Avery, Swirka and Cross will continue watching the skies, counting starlings and differentiating between black-backed and ring-billed gulls. Woods will keep compiling the data, and Mass Audubon will maintain its advocacy for state-mandated protocols for windmill siting. In March, Hull's second windmill will be put in place.

"It's coming, whether we like it or not," said Woods. "We can just hope there won't be anything detrimental."

Wind turbine, solar energy to be focus of study group committee going," he said, which would begin doing research solely on whether it would be a viable opportunity for the town, and where it could be located.

Dunn said from the research he has done, the wind turbine Hull installed three years ago is anticipated to yield a 7 year payoff, and has a roughly 20-25 year life span. "By year three, we'd be halfway paid off," he said. Dunn added with the current bill the school department is facing for underbudgeted energy costs, having a wind turbine in Cohasset might make sense, especially because Hull is so close and its program has essentially served as a template for other turbine sites.

Although wind turbines are said to be non-polluting energy sources, one of the major concerns over the years regarding installing wind turbines is the possible noise pollution. However, "You don't hear the one in Hull," said Brown, adding no matter what the wind speed, the blades are controlled to rotate at a predetermined constant. In addition, he said the smallest gusts of wind traveling at roughly 10 miles per hour can set the turbine spinning, so it doesn't have to be an extremely windy day to produce energy.

In addition to looking at harnessing wind energy, Brown said the town should be looking at using solar energy for power as well. He suggested having a class in school oversee the project, which could potentially yield grant money to purchase the equipment. "It's amazing what you can do," he said, with the power of the sun, pointing out many highway signs which used to be powered by diesel are now solar powered.

Brown said it would be his suggestion to form a committee of nine to work on the project, but Dunn said, "I was thinking of something leaner and meaner," perhaps a committee of between three and five. Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said he thinks five members would be sufficient and said if the committee needs to be enlarged in the future, that can be done.

While Brown said he thinks the committee is an important one, he does not plan on being a member. However, Dunn said he would love to participate, and Sullivan encouraged him to seek out residents with expertise or an interest in alternative energy sources to join the committee as well.

Selectman Rob Spofford said because there could be a number of people who might not share the feeling that a wind turbine is the best energy solution, he thinks it is a great idea for the vote to form the committee to come before the town. Brown agreed and said he is fully aware there will be people who will not be in favor of the project, and Town Meeting will allow the voices of the residents to be heard.

Selectman Fred Koed added it will be important to present voters with many options at Town Meeting, to allow them to make the most informed decision possible, including potential sites for the wind turbine's location.

However, Selectman Ronnie McMorris said if the question of forming the committee is brought to Town Meeting, it might get voted in only to help move the meeting along. She said when some of the smaller issues arise, votes tend to be cast in the affirmative as a way of getting on to other business. However, Sullivan said the reverse could also be true, as it is sometimes the seemingly simple articles of business that spark the most discussion.

The Board of Selectmen gave the OK for Dunn to begin seeking names for the committee, which will be formally appointed by Town Meeting April 2. All interested candidates should submit a letter of intent to Town Manager Bill Griffin at 41 Highland Ave., or contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105. For more information on the Hull wind turbine, please visit www.hull-wind.org.

Griffin welcomed to new post

History committee comes bearing gifts

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Members of the Committee on Town History came to Tuesday's meeting of the Board of Selectmen bearing gifts, as they welcomed new Town Manager Bill Griffin to town with an array of historical memorabilia.

Committee Chairman Wig Pierson offered his warmest wishes, and said in time, he hopes Griffin will grow to love the town as much as the residents, and hoped the gifts they offered would help give him a perspective on where the town has been, to help him guide where it is going.

Committee member Jackie Dormitzer, who not only wrote "A Narrative History of Cohasset Volume III," the third volume of the town's history, but has compiled a new hardcover book titled "A Treasury of Cohasset History," presented Griffin with a hot-of-the-press copy of her latest publication. The book had arrived from the printers early Tuesday morning.

The publication of "A Treasury of Cohasset History," is actually linked to Dormitzer's previous work. While compiling research for the third volume of the town's history, Dormitzer came across articles and various pamphlets about the town, and much of the information either pre-dated the time period she was covering, or didn't quite fit into the chapters, but she knew it was worthy of setting aside for future use. Now, those stories which could have been pushed aside are being showcased for the town, and its new Town Manager, to enjoy.

In addition to the new book, Committee member Hal Coughlin presented Griffin with a set of the first three volumes of town history books. Griffin received a reprint of the first volume, originally written by E. Victor Bigelow in 1898, as well as the second volume, written by Burtram J. Pratt in 1956, as well as Dormitzer's third volume, written in 2002.

"The bad news is, you have to read them in 90 days," quipped Coughlin.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan chimed in and said "I'll bet 2003 and 2004 together will be thicker than that."

Lastly, Committee member Jim Hamilton presented Griffin with a rare print of Minot's Light. Hamilton explained Town Clerk Marion Douglas had been sent a package of the prints and upon investigation, Pierson came to find the print was one of a series of 29 color, woodblock prints of distinguished buildings and sites around Boston by the renowned New England graphic artist Rudolph Ruzicka. Hamilton said the complete set of original wood blocks are in the collection of the Boston Athenaeum.

Hamilton said on the print is a Latin phrase which states, "Here shall thy proud waves be stayed," which are appropriate words for Griffin as he begins his journey in Cohasset.

Griffin thanked the committee and said in his short time on the job, which at the time of the meeting had only been two days, there have been many people who have stopped by the office to welcome him into the community, and he really appreciates it.

Griffin comes to Cohasset having previously served as the Bourne Town Administrator. In fact, Bourne Selectman Mark Tirrell attended Tuesday's meeting to "pass the torch" so to speak, and make sure Cohasset knows how lucky it is to have Griffin on board.

"You've hired yourself a gem," said Tirrell, adding over the years, he has relied on Griffin to cook his "half-baked ideas" into something great. "He'll be a very effective manager," he said.

In addition to Bourne, Griffin has served in the top administrative post in Dedham and Plymouth as well. In Dedham and Bourne, he was the first Town Administrator. In Plymouth, he was the first Town Manager after serving as that town's Executive Secretary. In Cohasset, he will follow Town Manager Mark Haddad who served in the post for seven years.

Griffin has signed a three year contract to the tune of $115,000 per year. Griffin's salary in Bourne was roughly $107,000. Haddad's salary was roughly $110,000 when he resigned in May.

Copies of "A Treasury of Cohasset History" are available at Buttonwood Books and Toys in the Shaw's plaza, The Town Clerk's office at Town Hall, and at the Historical Society, located in the Paul Pratt building on South Main Street. For those residents who have already purchased their copies of the book and would like to pick them up, Wig Pierson will be at Town Hall Monday, Feb. 7 from 8:30-10:30 and Thursday, Feb. 10 from 2:30-4:30, in the alcove on the second floor just outside the elevator.

A limited number of prints are also available for purchase, for $60 each. Each 3-1/2 x 5 inch print is mounted in a bevel edge acid-free matte and is numbered from one to 130 with a description of the print. The matte will fit any 8 x 10 frame suitable for hanging or displaying on a table top. Proceeds from sales are returned to the town to help fund historical publications.

Checks may be made out to the Town of Cohasset and mailed to Committee on Town History c/o Wigmore Pierson, 123 Atlantic Avenue, Boston, MA 02025. For more information or to arrange with Pierson to pick up a print, please call (781) 383-6940.

Tutela gets go-ahead for Little Harbor sewer plans

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

New Town Manager Bill Griffin has signed a contract with Tutela Engineering Associates, Inc. — the Sewer Commission's engineering consultants — which will allow the Little Harbor sewer project to remain on course.

The action put the lid on a brewing controversy surrounding the engineering firm that was putting residents of the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue neighborhoods squarely at odds with Town Hall.

Finance Director Michael Buckley and Health Board Chairman Steve Bobo have both been vocal with their concerns that Tutela is too expensive and not held to enough scrutiny.

The affected homeowners – led by CEES (Citizens for Equitable Environmental Solutions) – responded with a flurry of letters-to-the-editor praising Tutela and its project manager, Dan Couglin.

At the Jan. 25 Board of Selectmen's meeting, Buckley, who served as Acting Town Manager until Griffin came on board Monday (Jan. 31), refused to sign an amendment to a $100,000 contract between the town and Tutela because he did not feel comfortable with the process, temporarily putting the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue project on hold.

Buckley said he felt the new contract, which is the 18th amendment to the original, should have been put back out to bid at some point during the last four years, and it never was. He also said without a signature for the latest draft, Tutela should not have been authorized to complete any work under the new scope, but it has.

In addition, Buckley said he believes when originally written, the Request for Qualifications, which is used to help gather information about prospective firms the town will hire for a project, was written to be restrictive, to give Tutela a better chance of being awarded the job.

The RFQ for the project was drafted in 2001 by then Sewer Commission Chairman Gary Vanderweil. The Department of Environmental Protection had requested the town provide an update on progress toward satisfying the conditions and actions town officials agreed to when they signed the Second Amended Final Judgment, which requires the town to come up with a plan to solve its wastewater and drainage problems that are causing pollution.

The goal was to find an engineering firm which could perform evaluation and planning for the Little Harbor project in the form of a Comprehensive Facility Plan Update, a Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act (MEPA) filing, and a request for revisions to the Town's wastewater treatment plant National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System, or NPDES permit.

In addition to the tasks the company would be required to perform, a list of specific criteria for the company itself was outlined. The Sewer Commission would only accept firms which had been in business for at least 15 years, and the firm and project manager were required to meet strict experience guidelines. Both needed to be familiar with low pressure sewer systems with 250+ grinder pumping units sited in ledge prone areas, as well as experience with a specific activated sludge membrane filtration system. In addition, the company must have specific experience with wastewater facility planning in coastal communities.

"I don't approve of the criteria used," said Buckley, as he feels it was drafted specifically with Tutela in mind, and hasn't been put back out to bid. In addition, "We should explore all options," he said, when the town is about to embark on a project which could potentially cost between $10 and $15 million.

However, Sewer Commissioner John Beck, who was on the selection committee and interviewed respondents, said there were members of the Planning Board, Sewer Commission, Board of Health, and interested citizens on the board, and while not everyone was immediately in favor of Tutela, that was the company unanimously chosen in the end. He said it was the only firm that met the qualifications, but two other firms were invited to be interviewed and were asked how they would address the areas where they did not meet the qualifications. After the interviews, choosing Tutela was a unanimous decision.

"I think the criteria is absolutely appropriate to the task at hand," he said, adding with the specialized wastewater treatment system as Cohasset has, it only makes sense to him that the town would want someone with distinct expertise. He said there was no "shaping" of the contract as Buckley implied.

Buckley's allegations are not the first to come against Tutela in recent weeks. Bobo came before Selectmen Jan. 18 and said he would like to see the town conduct an investigation and possibly an audit of Tutela's practices.

Bobo believes the firm's being involved with both the design of the Little Harbor sewer expansion as well as talks with the Department of Environmental Protection regarding the town's meeting the Second Amended Judgment, is a conflict of interest. He alleged Tutela may not be providing all the information to the state regarding the judgment, to ensure sewering is seen as the only means of wastewater disposal for the project, therefore increasing the scope of the project to its benefit.

Griffin said in the interest of making sure the town fulfills its responsibilities, he felt it was appropriate to sign the amended contract. Tutela will be able to resume work as scheduled, and is slated to have a firm number on the cost of the sewer project that would involve upgrading the plant and installing the needed infrastructure before Town Meeting April 2.

HELPING THE HOMELESS

The Third Annual Valentines Fund Dance to benefit the homeless will be held this year at the Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor on Saturday evening, Feb. 19, from 8 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. The requested donation is $20 per person for the creative black-tie event, and we do mean more creative than black-tie please. In view of people's contributions to Southeast Asia, we have lowered the donation this year by 20 percent. While our hearts go out to the more than 3 million made homeless by the Tsunami, we must also take care for the more than 3 million adults and children who experience homelessness each year here in America.

Please come and show that we can have great compassion and great fun at the same time. There will be dancing to two great rock and roll bands, The Pemberton Hill Players and Shaken Not Stirred. There will be auctions of art works and a drumhead signed by all five members of Aerosmith, along with silent auctions and raffles of local artist's works, gift certificates and merchandise from local and Harvard Square merchants and restaurants. Absolutely all proceeds go to benefit Bread&Jams, Inc., a Self-advocacy Center and day shelter located in Harvard Square, Cambridge. Delicious hors doeuvres will be provided by Atlantica staff. For dinner reservations pre-event please call Atlantica at 781-383-0900. To reserve tickets for the event please call 781-383-6568 as a limited number of tickets will be available at the door. If you are lucky enough to have cabin fever by the middle of this winter and also compassion to spare around Valentine's Day, please contribute and celebrate at the Third Valentines Fund Dance for the homeless in 2005. See you there can with a single person," he said. "That's the nature of these places." He added he understands the service he is providing to the community, and said he was happy to be able to keep his doors open.

TOP EQUESTRIENNE

Sullivan has been the General Manager of Tedeschi's in Cohasset since December, but has been working in convenience stores for more than 25 years. In fact, he said during the blizzard of 1978, he was working at a Store 24 and slept there as well, to ensure those who needed supplies had a place to go. "I've earned this," he said, pointing to the title "General Manager" embroidered on his company shirt.

During the blizzard of '78, Sullivan said the National Guard was called in to help as many convenience stores open as possible. "These places were absolutely essential," he said, adding smaller stores, rather than the larger Shaw's or Stop & Shops, only need one person to open. "It's very different from opening a supermarket. All you need is me," he said. In addition, even if the power goes out, Sullivan said he can open his store with ease, which he was prepared to do had power been lost during this year's storm.

During a blizzard, Sullivan said most often, patrons come in to buy the essentials, such as bread and eggs. "In a snow storm, milk flies off the shelves like there will never be milk again," said Sullivan. He added during the height of the storm, he had many plow drivers stop in, who were extremely glad to see him open. "We had fresh coffee for them," he said, which was a very welcome site, as many were working more than 24-hour shifts as well. In addition, some local police officers who were also on duty stopped by. "People were quite cheerful about the whole thing," he said.

Tedeschi store manager Tom Sullivan stands by his shovel which he used to clear a path to the entrance of the storm during the blizzard two weeks ago.

In addition to food, Sullivan said he saw many customers who were looking to purchase cigarettes. "All these people were worried they would be trapped without their fix," he said, adding they were some of the most appreciative customers of all.

Sullivan said when cabin fever sets in, it's amazing what people will do to get out of the house. He said to his amazement, Tedeschi's sold more Sunday papers during the blizzard than it did the following weekend when the weather was nice. "I saw one young fellow with snowshoes. I hadn't seen those in a long time," he said.

If nothing else, Sullivan said he hopes by keeping his store open during the blizzard, maybe some local residents paid him a visit who might not have otherwise stopped in. He said since the blizzard, he has received many compliments, including being called a "dedicated" employee, but being very modest, he says he was just doing his job. With all the snow, he said drifts had accumulated and had completely buried his car, making it invisible. "I wasn't going anywhere anyway," he joked.

Valentine's tea to have Victorian flare

Tickets are still available

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Council on Elder Affairs is doing its part to ensure residents feel warm inside as they celebrate Valentine's Day this year, and will sponsor a Valentine Tea Party for the community, Friday, Feb. 11.

Kathy Bryanton, Director of the CEA, said this is the 18th consecutive year the council will host a special Valentine's Day event, and every time they try to offer something a little different.

"It seems like it continues growing and changing," said Bryanton, although some aspects, such as the games, prizes, and good company, carry over from year to year. "It's always a delightful time," she said.

Beginning at 1 p.m., guests will be invited to sample teas and sandwiches, followed by dessert, all in a Victorian setting. The Second Congregational Church has lent Bates Hall to the CEA for the afternoon, and tables will be draped with fine linens. Guests will drink out of tea cups, and will dine with silver service. "This is a very formal event, people dress for it," said Bryanton.

At 2 p.m., Tea Historian Marie Dunn Frazier of Milton will be on hand to speak about the history of tea as well as its role in various cultures, through her seminar, "Reflections on the Fine Art of Tea Drinking." Frazier will speak about the early beginnings of tea, its myths and legends, as well as an exhibit of memorabilia connected with tea.

With a renewed interest in tea, Frazier's seminar has become very popular, and she has presented it all over Boston and the South Shore. She has spoken at the Boston Public Library, the Women's Educational and Industrial Union in Boston, the First Parish Church in Quincy, and retirement communities such as Fox Hill in Westwood and New Pond Village in Walpole.

Frazier, a former board member of the Milton Historical Society, is also an educator and has taught at Garland Jr. College, Boston, Aquinas College, Newton, and for the Lead Program at Eastern Nazarene College.

Tea Historian Marie Dunn Frazier of Milton will speak about the history of tea as well as its role in various cultures, through her seminar, "Reflections on the Fine Art of Tea Drinking" Feb. 11.

In addition to the lecture, Bryanton said there will be games, including a "who's who?" contest, similar to the very successful game held last year. She said there will be baby photos of various CEA board members on display and guests must guess who each picture represents. Prizes will be given out for correct answers.

Bryanton said if anyone needs transportation to the event, the CEA can provide it. She said it's a wonderful opportunity to have fun with friends, as there are very few social events once the holidays are over and winter really sets in. "It makes for a nice opportunity for people to get out of the house," she said. "We want people to come and rekindle old friendships."

Although it is a CEA event, invitations are by no means limited to senior citizens in town. Bryanton said one of the nicest things about the Valentine's Day Tea is that it brings together many age groups as well as many volunteer organizations. She said while the CEA's Gourmet Club, run by Anna Abbruzzese, puts the event together, many mothers from the Parent School Organization bake for the event. "It's kind of a community event," she said, and is open to anyone who would like to attend.

"We have about 80 seats," available for the presentation, said Bryanton, adding with all the snow that has recently fallen on Cohasset, it has been hard to get the word out about the event, and there are plenty of seats left.

For more information or to sign up for the event, please contact the Council on Elder Affairs at (781) 383-9112, or stop by its office, located in the South Shore Community Center at 3 North Main Street.

Punxsutawney Phil

Wednesday was Groundhog Day and I'm betting Punxsutawney Phil was plenty glad he was hibernating in Gobbler's Knob in the western end of the Keystone State rather than in these parts.

Just suppose Phil were a Plymouth resident — he'd surely be snowed in long past Feb. 2. Thanks to the Blizzard of '05 and the Alberta Clipper encore that brought another foot of snow to the area last week, we probably wouldn't have seen hide nor hair of the fuzzy prognosticator until sometime in late May.

Tradition is nice, but whether the groundhog sees his shadow and heads back into his hole to finish his long winter's nap or not, we hearty New Englanders know there will be at least six more weeks of cold weather, snow, sleet, and ice.

That's what winter's all about up here, like it or leave it for warmer climes.

Of course this year has been particularly tough to take. It doesn't matter how light and fluffy the snow is when it's measured in feet and you have to shovel it.

It seems Punxsutawney Phil has the right idea when he takes shelter and slips into an essentially comatose state for the long winter season. Hibernation for the groundhog is more than a deep sleep, the animal's body temperature drops, its heart slows and breathing nearly stops. Imagine the rude awakening the poor devil must endure to keep up tradition each February, being pulled abruptly from his slumber and thrust out in front of hundreds, sometimes thousands, of nosy pokes looking for a long-range forecast.

If Phil, whose celebrity status has reached new heights in the last decade thanks to Bill Murray and Andie McDowell's movie hit "Groundhog Day," could speak, one might surmise his message would be frank and or curt. Something along the lines of "Baby, it's cold outside, I really can't stay" as he scampers back into his burrow.

According to Groundhog.org, the official Web site of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club, the traditional observance of Groundhog Day goes way back and crosses many cultural lines. While a popular tradition in America dating back nearly 120 years, the occasion has European roots and is tied to Candlemas Day — an observance in which the clergy blessed candles and distributed them to people marking a milestone in the winter. The weather on that day was significant in telling what lay ahead.

An old Scottish couplet on the topic offers;

"If Candlemas Day is bright and clear,
There'll be twa (two) winters in the year."

During their conquest, the Roman legions brought the traditions to the Teutons – aka the Germans – who filled out the story considerably. The Germans concluded that if the sun shone on Candlemas Day, a hedgehog, an animal common to the area, would cast a shadow thus predicting six more weeks of bad weather — or "the second winter" alluded to in the Scottish rhyme.

Pennsylvania's early settlers were primarily Germans — known to many as the Pennsylvania Dutch. While hedgehogs were scarce, indigenous groundhogs were plentiful and close enough to the real deal. Those early settlers determined the groundhog was a sensible, intelligent animal and believed if the sun did appear Feb. 2, the wise rodent would see its shadow and hurry back underground to wait out another six weeks of winter. It was good advice for both man and beast.

These were of course the days before Doppler radar ruined reliable forecasting and upstaged Phil and other trusted groundhog weather sources. Now, thanks to complicated weather models and conflicting reports from multiple meteorologists who appear more confounded than aided by all the technological advances in forecasting, we know more and less about what winter has in store for us than ever before.

But the sun was shining yesterday and some of those enormous piles of snow are starting to melt. That probably means down in Pa. Phil saw his shadow and high-tailed it back into his hole.

That's OK, I'm a New Englander. I was counting on six more weeks of winter anyway.

Takes issue with selectmen on Little Harbor sewer issue

TO THE EDITOR:

I know last week's Mariner had several letters written by residents upset with the town's apparent reluctance to address the sewering needs of the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue areas. Despite what may have appeared to be an outpouring of sentiment slanted towards those residents and CEES members in favor of the sewer project going forward in a timely manner, I for one say "it's about time".

It's about time the residents stand up for honesty and accountability with the Selectmen and town officials when it comes to the 25 years of thumbing their noses at the DEP and State of Massachusetts.

I watched the Board of Selectmen's meeting on Tuesday, Jan. 25 and was sickened by what I saw. Let me give you the bullets points as to what unfolded to demonstrate how the majority of the Board of Selectmen are in clear defiance of the LH/AA project, commitments to the State, and the will of the voters despite what they would have you believe in the press.

For those of you who watched the meeting it will clarify some of the double talking and back tracking the selectmen take and for those who didn't see the meeting it should paint a clearer picture of some of the shenanigans that are going on among our town officials. The positions outlined below were put forth by Sullivan, McMorris, and Spofford.:

1. The Board has stopped payment of the Sewer Commission's engineer Tutela raising concerns of bias and qualifications. The result is that the design work for preparation of the article to be brought at Town Meeting has stopped.

2. The Board of Selectmen is saying that if it doesn't have the MEPA permitting in place, then the article should be postponed until next year when the permitting process is complete. This is despite the engineers' comments that MEPA permits are done after the design work.

3. When one of the CEES members commented on the DEP's offer of amnesty, Ronnie McMorris said in the open and televised meeting, "that's not something that we know the State would do." Mike Sullivan added, " I don't know anything about an offer of amnesty". I know for a fact that amnesty has been given in other towns by the state. I have been assured that amnesty was discussed by the DEP and the selectmen in their meeting on Jan. 21.

4. The Board (Sullivan and McMorris) are suddenly concerned that the Harbor shouldn't have any new (clean) effluent discharged into it because of environmental concerns. This is outrageous! Polluting the harbor since 1979 is not a concern but now all of a sudden too much clean discharge is?

5. They are now suggesting subjecting Tutela to a several month long peer review (Something that CEES was involved in three years ago before embarking on the LH/AA project) There were 5 respondents and after a thorough review it was demonstrated that Tutela was superior for the work. (John Beck pointed this out in the meeting at the time and again in a letter to the Mariner last week.)

6. The BoS is now suggesting that in order not to use a biased engineer, it may have to hire its own engineer to review the work that the Sewer Commission has done and to work on the LH/AA project — certain to add months on to the project.

7. The BoS is refusing to have any conversation about its meeting with the DEP until February when the new Town Manager is on board and they can have some more closed sessions with Counsel. What's the big secret other than they are trying to screw the LH homeowners?

8. The BoS is also clinging to its opinion that the CEES article was illegal —and therefore it needn't be respected. They want to drag in the Town Moderator before them to "answer" for this.

9. The BoS is insisting that instead of using the central plant to address LH (something that the Stearns study found was the best avenue) the SC begin discussions with Hull (who have been quoted in the paper saying that any new treatment service rates need to go up nearly 200percent) to accommodate the LH/AA homes. Another way to hold up the project by several months. Additionally, I hear that the idea of only sewering "select" homes in the affected areas is back on the table. This makes NO sense. Are they going to pick out those homes that pollute the "worst" and run sewer lines only to those homes? That seems like a real genius way of putting a Band-Aid on a gunshot wound. Hasn't this town learned from fiscally bad short term decisions that end up costing even more in the long run?

The townspeople need to have this information so that they can have their eyes wideopen to the sort of games that town officials are playing behind all of our backs as they tell us to our faces that they are, "working hard and totally committed to completing the LH project." The bottom line is that these three board members are willing to do whatever necessary to block the will of the people and stop the LH project. I hope the DEP is made aware of these games and starts to levy fines against the town as that seems to be the only way the BoS isgoing to wake up and stop the nonsense.

Sewer questions needing answers

COMMENTARY

LELAND JENKINS

Watching Michael Buckley stand his ground when pressed to sign off on another no bid $100K contract to Tutela Engineering in the over $8 million of engineering work they received from Cohasset in the last 10 years brought to mind some questions which to me, being a civil engineer, need answers.

- Infiltration into the sewer system was one reason for our problems with DEP over 20 years ago. We still have the infiltration today. When will it be solved and what will be the cost?
- What are the readings on fecal coliform in Straits Pond since the area was sewered?
- How many homes in the original 100+ Little Harbor (LH) district have failing (spewing effluent) systems?
- How many homes in the expanded 400+ Little Harbor (LH) district have failing systems?
- How many new systems have been put in the original LH district?

How many homes in the expanded 400+ Little Harbor district have failing systems?

- How many new systems have been put in the expanded LH district?
- How many new lots will be created in this new district?
- When Tutela Engineer, Dan Coughlin, stated at several public meetings that sewering will not necessarily solve the pollution of Little Harbor – what is the next step and how much will it cost to open the shellfish beds?
- What is the plan and projected cost to clean up our water supply from the nutrient overload being dumped in the Reservoir, and along Aaron River from the Reservoir to Lily Pond ?
- Ellen Roy Hertzfelder has stated that the Gulf River is a vital resource for our community, is there any plan of extending the sewer from 172 South Main Street to the Scituate Border in an effort to protect this vital resource?

Before we vote at the April 2 Town meeting, it is important that the answers to these questions be published so that the citizens can make an informed decision about the impact.

Crisis in leadership

TO THE EDITOR:

The arrogance and utter disregard for the wishes of individual citizens, as well as the citizens collectively, which is displayed by some of our selectmen has escalated to the level of absurd. It is unthinkable this Board continues to be controlled by a majority that exhibits little regard for the best interests of the Town while continuing to further their own agenda. They openly attempt to circumvent policy set by independently elected boards, commissions and committees. They take every opportunity to invoke executive privilege, and hide behind legal counsel in a blatant attempt to keep information from the public. (A truly futile effort as everyone knows nothing is secret in this Town.)

Last week's Mariner reported that certain Selectmen wish the Town to "speak with one voice on wastewater." Do they really think we're stupid? It is obvious the residents, the voters, the Planning Board, the Sewer Commission, Selectmen Koed and Dormitzer, and sometimes Selectman Spofford, do speak with one voice. They all advocate sewering existing residents and neighborhoods where pollution exists, ending the decades of pollution of our coastal waters, and protecting our drinking water. Only Selectmen Sullivan and McMorris, and sometimes Selectman Spofford, speak with an arrogant, lonely voice that of furthering their agenda by favoring private-commercial developers at the expense of the Town, its future, and the taxpayers.

Cohasset is experiencing a crises of leadership which has eroded public trust. I hope our leaders will rise to the occasion, put aside their vested interests, listen to the will of the people, respect independent committees, and unite as "one voice" to act in the best interests of the whole Town.

Teacher salaries go up without contract increase

TO THE EDITOR:

Those of us who ask questions and demand accountability are often unjustly described as 'somewhat misguided' or as being 'on the fringe'. On the other hand those in elected and appointed positions seem reluctant to make or answer inquiries and frequently blindly place their trust in highly paid employees.

Problems arise when our School Committee chairman explains that one reason for the current $500K budget shortfall is that more teachers than expected received certification that will require their salaries to be raised.

With a highly paid superintendent and professional full-time business manager it appears that no one kept track of which teachers were taking what credits and how close they were to moving to a new salary column.

According to the teachers' union contract, courses taken to increase salary scale must be approved in advance by the superintendent with the School Committee signing off on tuition reimbursements among the warrants routinely approved at their meetings.

With current technology, our professionals should be able to accurately project estimated new salaries, give or take a small amount that would not so adversely impact our current budget.

If our paid professionals decided to do some creative bookkeeping and hide teacher tuition bills due in one fiscal year, putting them off to another fiscal year and the School Committee did not do due diligence, a significant budget deficit could appear like magic!

Depending on the number of teachers involved and the columns they move into, the salary increases per teacher could amount from $1,171 to $5,620. The discrepancy between amounts is because the contract has variable numbers for the increase between each step and each column within the same step!

Confused? Read on.

Another aspect of the teacher's union contract the elected officials do not seem to perceive is the multiplier effect. With most of our teachers eligible for step and/or column raises, without any increase in the contract, almost all receive between a 4.5 percent to as high as a 14.5 percent raise. Add in a 3 percent across-the-board increase that jumps the raises up to 7.5 percent to 17.5 percent. For those teachers close to retirement they can activate their longevity buyout, receiving $3000/yr. longevity for 3 years as opposed to the standard $1,000/yr that they have been receiving above their usual salary starting their 15th year of employment.

Besides these unexpected costs, tens of thousands were diverted from the children's education monies for unbudgeted golden handshakes to very highly compensated individuals who gleefully accepted the money and early retirement. And left us with a $500K plus problem.

Should we consider the elected officials who made such decisions misguided?

Marlette speaks out on CEES article

TO THE EDITOR:

As Town Moderator I feel compelled to speak out on an issue of fairness.

Prior to the December 2004 Town Meeting, I observed the Selectman's meeting, attended by Town Counsel and representatives of CEES. Reasonable minds could have perceived the dialogue between Town Counsel and the Selectmen as symptomatic of a blatant attempt to obstruct the CEES people from getting their article before Town Meeting. As Town Counsel parsed words and equivocated, it became apparent that Mr. DeRensis was clearly trying to prevent the article from going forward in a fair, open manner.

It is my belief that the Cohasset Board of Selectmen had no such hidden agenda. Rather they were led by Town Counsel DeRensis whose ambiguous language and cloak and dagger machinations quite appropriately led the CEES people to draw the somewhat reasonable inference of a lack of fair play, or what in gangster parlance might be called a "Bag Job" or gamesmanship on the part of the Selectmen and Town Counsel.

I attempted to reach Mr. DeRensis to discuss motion language, which I had previously negotiated with the citizen proponents and with Foley Hoag. He failed to return my call, and twice at Town Meeting, declined to proffer opinion to the meeting based on the ostensible reason that such communication requires special dispensation by the Board of Selectmen.

Furthermore, Mr. DeRensis arrived late to the Town Meeting, at which time I discovered that he had unilaterally authored amendments to the CEES article main motion that were neither reviewed nor approved by the citizen proponents, prior to distribution to the meeting. This added to the anger and heightened my resolve to at minimum allow the CEES version of the motion to proceed in order to alter any perception of bad faith and unfair dealing that appeared to pervade the process.

My opinion is that the motion I permitted was not per se illegal. In fact, in determining the resolve of the proponents to proceed with their own version of the motion, I informed them of my opinion that the motion was in all likelihood legally ineffective. Mr. DeRensis is well aware of the fact that there are few absolutes in the law. Accordingly, it is my practice to treat the opinion of Town Counsel DeRensis as one, albeit important, additional point of information, together with other diverse opinion and perspectives, when formulating an actual procedure.

Selectman Robert Spofford addressed the motion from a point of order, but reasonably and appropriately deferred to the authority of the Town Moderator to regulate proceedings. He is to be commended for containing the matter by not offering motions which would disrupt the meeting and delay the proceedings

Although I perceive the end result to have been a directive that is at best aspirational rather than mandatory, the taking of a vote, even if only a sense of the meeting was the likely end result, was properly founded and justified in this instance based upon on fundamental tenets of fairness and good faith.

Food drive support

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the citizens of Norfolk County and the employees and customers of the Registry of Deeds for their participation and generosity in our Third Annual Norfolk County Registry of Deeds Food Drive. Through your generous donations, we were able make distributions to local food pantries in Norfolk County.

Unfortunately, the problem of hunger and families in crisis does not diminish after the holidays. Many families continue to be faced with choosing between mortgage and rent payments, heating costs, and food. With this in mind, I urge all citizens of Norfolk County to remember their less fortunate neighbors in 2005. Food pantries in our communities are always in need of nonperishable food items such as canned goods, breakfast cereals, pasta, and coffee.

Please consider making a donation this year. For convenience, food pantries and phone numbers are listed in a news release on the Registry web page, www.norfolkdeeds.org. Call your local food pantry for hours of operation and directions. Thanks again to all who participated in the Holiday Food Drive. I wish all the citizens of Norfolk County a safe and healthy 2005.

High priced Super Bowl

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I'm not going to Super Bowl XXXIX for the same reason that I didn't go to Super Bowl XXXVIII or Super Bowl XXXVII or all the other XXXVI Super Bowls right down to Super Bowl I.

I couldn't afford it, what with my credit cards maxed out and the bank unwilling to talk about a third mortgage on the old homestead. Folks on my income level were discouraged from attending even before Janet Jackson was blackballed.

How long will it be before Bill Gates, Donald Trump and the president of the last bank standing in America are the only fans with enough bread to make it to a seat between the XL yard lines?

The last time I was in Jacksonville I was working for my Uncle and the only hotel I knew was the Hotel Aragon, where the rooms were $10 a night, $12 with running water.

All of the preceding is a CIX-word way of saying that attending Super Bowl XXXIX will cost a lot of money.

A ticket for I of the LXXIX thousand seats in Alltel Stadium in Jacksonville, I am told, have a face value of $D, which, I hasten to point out, is only the face value. The guys who hang around outside the stadium saying "Pssst!" are getting at least $M and in a case I can't verify $MMMMMM.

And that's only the beginning.

The best hotels, some of which are as close as an hour's drive from the stadium, are renting rooms for $CLXXIX a Super Bowl night. On Feb. VII, of course, the rooms go back to $LIX a night. Folks who have rented rooms in Manchester, N.H., during the primaries will know what I mean.

The last time I was in Jacksonville I was working for my Uncle and the only hotel I knew was the Hotel Aragon, where the rooms were $10 a night, $12 with running water.

To make up for the lack of hotel rooms in Jax (as we used to call it), V cruise ships have been docked in the St. Johns River equipped to handle MMMD visitors and the Super Bowl Host Committee has lined up some MD private homes for them to rent during the festivities.

Fans who have the means can stay in a I bedroom condo for $D a day and those who brought their Pop Warner football teams with them can have an XI-bedroom, VI-bath house with an ocean view for $20,000 a day.

There is a less expensive way, of course. You can always get a room in Savannah, Ga., and drive from II to III hours to the game, which is a little like staying in Pittsfield in order to watch the Red Sox play.

If offers of a place to park the body in a bed and the buttocks in a seat sound outlandish to you, get a load of the ad the appeared in one of the Boston papers last week offering a parking space for your RV only CCC yards from Alltel Stadium for $CCL a day, minimum III days.

Don't laugh. That may be the best bargain of Super Bowl XXXIX day!

Judgment could see another amendment

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Second Amended Final Judgment was handed down by the state as a means of implementing the Clean Waters Act.

Residents in the Little Harbor area of town may have gotten exactly what they want, as the Board of Selectmen agreed Tuesday to consider working with the state to change the language of the Second Amended Final Judgment, and ultimately include a schedule for sewering that area.

Although discussion was held in executive session and the board would not comment on the matter once it reconvened in open session, a prepared statement was read to the public, explaining how the board would proceed with the matter.

The board passed a motion which read, "Moved that the Town Manager, with the assistance of Town Counsel and the town's engineers, in consultation with the Board of Selectmen, the Board of Health, and the Sewer Commission, be authorized to explore with the Department of Environmental Protection possible language to amend the Second Amended Judgment to include both a schedule for sewering of Little Harbor and the specifics of reciprocal benefits to the Town of Cohasset."

"This is a major development for the town," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who explained this will allow the dialogue to begin regarding a number of different options, including the possibility of Little Harbor residents receiving amnesty from mandatory septic system upgrades whether or not they intend to sell.

He said although the town maintains its position that it is in compliance with the Judgment, an agreement has been made to at least discuss the town's possibilities in terms of changing the Judgment, which in his view is a "very big deal."

The Second Amended Final Judgment was handed down by the state as a means of implementing the Clean Waters Act. In 1979, a complaint was filed alleging violation of the Act, and the town reached an agreement with the state to supply modern wastewater treatment. As part of the settlement, the town consented to enter the Judgment. Since then, the town has been working on a plan to clean up the waters in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue area of town.

Sewering the Little Harbor area of town has been the focus of many contentious debates, and the topic has come up more frequently since a citizen's petition was floated for the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting. Voters ultimately approved the article, and the town was directed to add a sewering schedule into the Judgment. Residents felt by incorporating a schedule into the Judgment, it would formalize the town's commitment to the project.

Some members of the Board of Selectmen have been very vocal with their concerns about incorporating a schedule into the Judgment, as there is no price tag associated with the project. Members of the board have said they worry it will put the town at risk to implement a schedule, not knowing whether it will have the money to pay for the project when the time comes, therefore opening itself back up to potential state fines for noncompliance.

As a result of the Town Meeting vote, several town officials held a powwow with the DEP Friday, Jan. 21 to talk about the town's plans to tackle its wastewater problems in the Little Harbor area. The meeting with the state, as well as meetings leading up to it, and subsequent meetings where it has been discussed, have all been held in executive session, as the board said it could affect the town's strategy moving forward to discuss it in public.

Although Dormitzer is happy with the outcome of Tuesday's executive session, he said the process by which the town arrived at its conclusion was not satisfactory for him. He was the lone member of the board who voted not to have the discussion in executive session. "Most of this is something the public has a right to know," he said, adding there was plenty that could have been discussed out in the open, and Town Counsel could have instructed the board to stop the conversation if it went too far off course.

Prior to the executive session, Lisa LoJacono, a member of CEES and one of the proponents of the Town Meeting article to incorporate sewering into the judgment, expressed her frustration at wanting to be updated on the discussions which had occurred to date. As a homeowner in the Little Harbor area of town, she feels she has a right to know what the town is negotiating with the DEP, as she will be directly affected. She said at the board's Jan. 25 meeting, she had hoped the board would have given an update regarding discussions with the state which took place Jan. 21, but the board said it would need to discuss it with Town Counsel before going public with information. With nothing having been said, LoJacono said she wonders just what has gone on behind closed doors.

"You met Jan. 21, and it's been almost two weeks," since then, she said. LoJacono said the public is entitled to an update.

Legality question of TM article

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis has said in his opinion, the article which was passed at Town Meeting to incorporate a sewering schedule into the Second Amended Final Judgment was illegal, and should never have been voted on. As a result, some members of the Board of Selectmen have said they do not feel comfortable with incorporating a schedule into the Judgment because it will go against Town Counsel's advice.

However, Town Moderator George Marlette, who is also an attorney, said in his view, the article was not illegal and proponents had followed every step to ensure it would be included on the Town Meeting Warrant. In addition, he said the Board of Selectmen had an obligation to bring the article forward.

"An article is not a motion," he said, but serves only as a way to let the public know what will be discussed on the floor of Town Meeting. He said in his opinion, the proponents of the article collected the required number of signatures and there was nothing in the writing which would have prevented it from being discussed.

"I've been a longtime supporter of Paul DeRensis. I feel he's served us well in terms of the Town Meeting process," said Marlette, adding Town Meeting is the only capacity he has ever worked in with DeRensis. However, he said he believes DeRensis was "parsing words," and using absolute language to characterize the article as illegal, when he believes the question is not whether it is illegal, but whether it is legally ineffective. "Town Counsel wouldn't even entertain that dialogue," Marlette said.

Marlette also said he doesn't think the issue is clearly either black or white, and if DeRensis is having trouble convincing the Department of Environmental Protection that the article is illegal, that would suggest to him he is not alone in his point of view.

Where the issue was such a heated topic, Marlette said he consulted with an attorney from Foley Hoag in Boston about the article to get another opinion, and that lawyer suggested making changes which Marlette said DeRensis ultimately floated on the floor of Town Meeting.

At one point before Town Meeting, Marlette said Town Counsel re-wrote the article without discussing it with the proponents. "There were a respectable amount of citizens who perceived they were being deprived of due process," Marlette said, and by allowing the article to come forward it helped level the playing field.

By Bob Katzen

The House and Senate adopted new rules for the operation of the Legislature. The centerpiece of the changes was reorganization of the Legislature's committees including consolidating, in some cases eliminating existing committees and by adding new ones. The changes ultimately reduce the total number of committees from 39 to 37.

Voice votes, without recorded roll calls, were used to approve the rules packages and all but one of the votes on proposed amendments to them.

ETHICS AND RULES COMMITTEE

Senate 6-26, rejected an amendment requiring that the six-member Senate Ethics and Rules Committee include three majority party Democratic members and three minority party Republicans members. Current rules provide for four Democrats and only two Republicans on the committee. The committee is responsible for investigating questions of misconduct and illegal activities of senators and employees of the Senate and for making recommendations for disciplinary action. Amendment supporters said a balanced membership, regardless of which party controls the Senate, would create a truly bipartisan committee and ensure that investigations into any senator or employee's conduct are fair and nonpartisan. They noted that the U.S. Congress' Ethics Committee has an equal number of members from both parties. Amendment opponents said no one has challenged the fairness or integrity of the Ethics Committee with its Democratic majority. They noted that it is illogical to have an equal number of members from each party on the committee when the makeup of the Senate membership is 34 Democrats and 6 Republicans. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment requiring that the Ethics Committee include three Democrats and three Republicans. A "No" vote is against the amendment).

PAY RAISES FOR LEADERSHIP AND COMMITTEE CHAIRS (S 21)

House 150-0, approved, without debate, a bill increasing the total number of representatives and senators who receive annual bonus stipends of $7,500 to $15,000, beyond their annual base salary of $55,569.41, for their service in leadership positions and as committee chairs. The total cost of the measure is estimated to be $120,000 above the total amount of stipends paid to legislators last year. Supporters said the additional pay is necessary because of the recent reorganization of the Legislature's leadership and committee structure including the creation of new committees and the consolidation of others. They argued that committee chairs and legislators in leadership positions should be appropriately compensated for their many responsibilities and hard work. They noted that the hikes are not astronomical and said that an additional $7500 per year amounts to only $144.23 per week while an additional $15,000 amounts to only $288.46 per week. The Senate approved the bill on a voice vote, without a roll call and without debate, prior to sending it to Gov. Romney who is expected to sign it. No one voted against the bill but critics said it is outrageous that one of the Legislature's first actions this year was to rush through a bill, without public hearings and without debate, to raise some members' salaries. They noted that the state's economic outlook is unclear, many human service programs are still struggling to make ends meet, thousands of residents do not have health insurance and local cities and towns are in dire need of additional local aid and education funding. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill increasing the total number of representatives and senators who receive annual bonus stipends of $7,500 to $15,000).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

ROMNEY'S BUDGET- (H 1) Gov. Romney fired the first shot last week in the long battle over the state budget for fiscal year 2006 that begins on July 1. Romney proposed a $23.2 billion budget—a 2.4 percent increase over last year's spending package. He said that the spending increase would be paid for by growth in tax revenues and savings from reforms that the state has instituted over the last two years. He noted that the growth rate in the costly Medicaid program has been significantly slowed through better management and increased federal support. Highlights of the spending plan include reducing the state's income tax from 5.3 to 5 percent; a $77 million increase in Chapter 70 school aid to local communities; a $180 million hike in the major categories of local aid; merging the Turnpike Authority with the state Highway Department and increasing and expanding the work requirement for welfare recipients.

$93.7 MILLION MORE- Gov. Romney filed a $93.7 million supplemental budget to pay for additional expenses this year. The package includes another $28.7 million for snow and ice removal. The state has already spent the entire $37 million that was budgeted for this winter's cleanup. Other provisions include $2.5 million for emergency implementation of suicide prevention programs at the Department of Youth Services; $11.3 million for Department of Public Health substance abuse and HIV/AIDS treatment programs and $2.9 million for fuel deficiencies at public housing projects.

The Avalon sewer ball is in ZBA's court

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

— NEWS ANALYSIS —

Who gets sewered first?

That's really the bottom line.

And in line, but not necessarily in this order, are the roughly 400 existing homes in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue neighborhoods, Cedarmere (a 55-plus, multi-unit condominium project which is yet to be built), the Cook Estate (another proposed senior housing project), and AvalonBay, which plans to build a 200-unit apartment complex off Route 3A.

Enter the Zoning Board of Appeals, which may be in the most unenviable position in town, because it — and not the Sewer Commission — has the task of determining whether there is enough capacity for Avalon, a 40-B project. And that may be the only issue the ZBA can legally focus on. In other words, the board may not be able to legally consider the sewer needs of existing homes and other projects in reaching its decision on Avalon.

According to Avalon officials, the sole issue before the ZBA is a determination of capacity for that project.

And if Monday's public hearing was a gauge – then at this point in time, no one appears to be happy.

The Sewer Commission, whose power is usurped in this case by the ZBA is upset; Cedarmere developers are upset because they say their project is first in line; un-sewered homeowners in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue area are upset because they say they are entitled to any capacity; and the Planning Board is upset because Avalon, in its view, is wrong for Cohasset because it will stress town services. The Planning Board also says if Avalon is allowed sewer capacity, it would open the door for Cedarmere and the Cook Estate projects, giving them the legal write to connect.

The ZBA will now conduct deliberations and has up to 40 days to file a decision.

And Avalon is upset because it feels it acted in good faith and worked with the town only to run into roadblocks when it comes to wastewater disposal. Avalon said the town has not been receptive to allowing it to hook up to the sewer treatment plant in Hull. Hull has excess capacity to sell, but Avalon would likely need a street opening permit from Cohasset to get there. And the Water Commission has appealed the ZBA approval of the comprehensive permit because of Avalon's proposed on-site system (that appeal is still pending in land court).

So Avalon has asked the ZBA to make a determination about town sewer capacity and believes the town has no legal right to reserve capacity for other areas, over the objections of other boards and some residents.

In fact, Monday's 2-1/2 hour-long point and counterpoint, back-and-forth hearing in a crowded basement meeting room was like a courtroom with lawyers arguing for their clients and the ZBA in the position of judge.

So how did Cohasset get to this juncture?

The town's pollution problems from run-off and failing septic systems date back 25 years. But even with the passing of more than two decades, how the town is going to continue solve its wastewater woes and what the court says it has to do – still appear to be open to interpretation. (It should be pointed out in the past 10 years, the town has installed sewers in North Cohasset through a municipal agreement with Hull and upgraded its own treatment plant to extend sewer service to hundreds more homes in the Central District).

Under 40B, the state's affordable housing law, a developer in exchange for providing affordable housing can apply directly to the ZBA for a comprehensive permit and doesn't have to obtain permits from other boards. Therefore, the ZBA has sole jurisdiction to grant approval for a sewer connection in lieu of action by the Sewer Commission, Avalon officials said.

The ZBA closed the hearing Monday that dealt with Avalon's request for a modification of its comprehensive permit approved roughly 14 months ago. That approval was conditioned on the project obtaining a groundwater disposal permit for its proposed on-site system from the Department of Environmental Protection.

But the ZBA subsequently granted Avalon an amendment to its comprehensive permit that — in lieu of a groundwater permit (which the Water Commission opposes because it feels the on-site system could pollute Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply) — Avalon could undertake a connection either to Hull or to the Cohasset municipal sewer system subject to a determination there is adequate capacity.

The ZBA will now conduct deliberations and has up to 40 days to file a decision.

In addition to poring over engineering reports about whether the town's sewer treatment plant has the capacity to handle the estimated 22,000 gallons per day expected to be generated by the rental project, the ZBA will also examine in detail the Second Amended Final Judgment, the court order that appears to be the subject of interpretation. Town Counsel has said the town has satisfied the "Judgment" while the Sewer Commission says it clearly states existing homes must be sewered before any new developments.

Steven Schwartz, Avalon's attorney, said the Judgment does not preclude the ZBA from permitting a sewer connection for Avalon, and that under 40B, the town cannot deny a connection if it is technically feasible. He said the town was using the sewer issue as a way to oppose development in general, and multi-unit family and affordable housing in particular.

But the Planning Board's attorney Kimberly M. Saillant said it's not a simple case of arithmetic in determining capacity issues. She explained allowing Avalon to hookup could have a domino effect allowing other proposed multi-unit projects to connect. So many developments in such a short time would strain the town's municipal infrastructure and service delivery capabilities, she said.

First-grader swims for boy in Sri Lanka

Joshua learned about the 6-year-old through World Vision International, a non-profit organization that started in the early 1950s helping Korean War orphans.

Deciding to help someone in Sri Lanka (about the size of West Virginia) wasn't difficult. Joshua's parents, Greg and Emma Miller, have a connection there.

"My husband proposed to me there," Emma recalls about a vacation the couple took to the island country in the Indian Ocean. The Millers, who are from England, also had friends vacationing in Sri Lanka when the tsunami hit. Their friends took refuge in a small day care center and miraculously survived.

Joshua and his family researched World Vision International on the Internet. They hope to raise enough money to help Lakshitha and his family for at least two years. Joshua will also write to Lakshitha and develop a relationship. His letters will be translated but Joshua, who also loves to draw, plans to send some of his artwork along.

Joshua Miller, 6, is in the first grade at Osgood School.

Joshua, who also studies karate, had only ever swum two lengths of the pool when he started training in earnest two weeks ago. His family is planning a special swim a week from tomorrow (Saturday) when Joshua will "officially" do 20 lengths using the crawl and without stopping.

"He's very determined and his stamina is increasing," Emma says.

Joshua's dad has a computer spreadsheet set up on his computer to keep track of contributions which can be offered per lap or in one lump sum. Because the Millers have family and friends in the UK, Greg said donations will be coming in pounds and dollars.

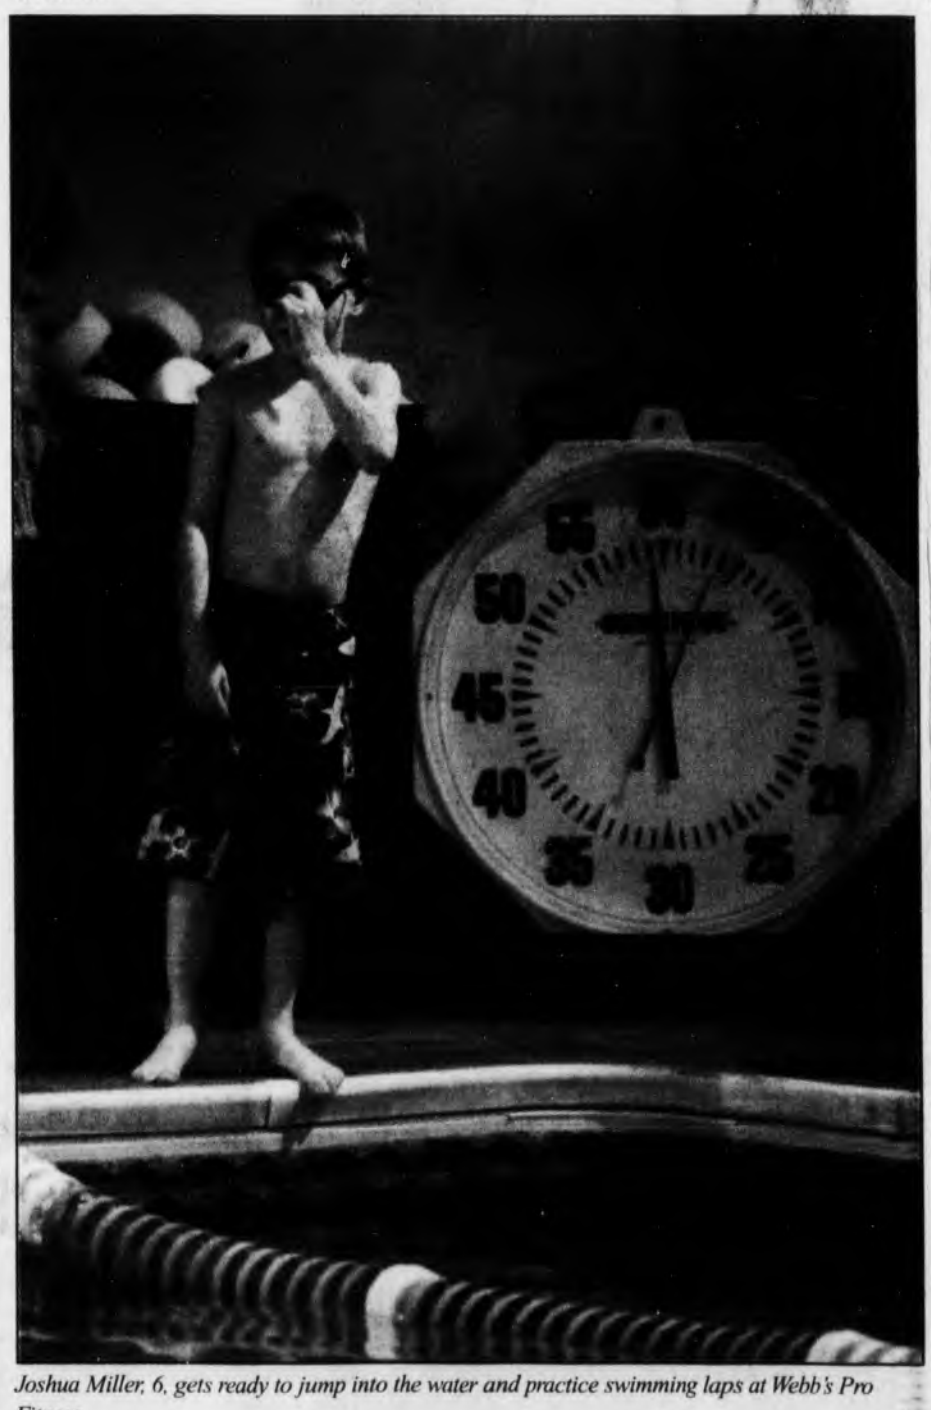
Emma says Joshua is learning a lot.

"He's very enthusiastic and has discovered that it's really not how old you are, you can still make a difference," she says. "That's very empowering to children."

"He's very enthusiastic and has discovered that it's really not how old you are, you can still make a difference."
— Emma Miller, Joshua's mother

Emma says Joshua has never said he doesn't want to go ahead with this effort or balked at going to swimming practice.

Joshua says he's been invited to talk to the kindergarten classes taught by his kindergarten teacher, Mrs. DeWaal. His first-grade teacher, Mrs. Hurley, and the Carriage House Nursery School where Isaac goes have also been supportive.



Emma stresses the even the smallest of sums would be appreciated. "Fellow children can pledge money from their piggy banks," she says.

Checks can be made out to Joshua Miller and sent to 7 Spring St.

Skippers scuttle the Whalers

Balanced effort against Nantucket leaves Cohasset girls hoops two wins away from tourney qualification

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Defense was the name of the game Wednesday night for the Cohasset girls basketball team.

Holding your opponents to under 20 points will pretty much guarantee victory, and such was the case against Nantucket, as the Skippers came away with a dominating 43-19 win.

The girls received a balanced effort, with the points coming from a variety of sources. As has been the case all year, senior forward Casey Anderson led the way, this time with 14. But a number of other players stepped up in the win.

Among those was junior Chelsea Grossman, who scored 11. Lacey Richardson chipped in with eight.

The Meg Anderson Fan Club in attendance got a great show in the second half, as the freshman helped put Nantucket away with six points late in the second half. One of Meg's three field goals came off a very-smooth fast break in which older sister Casey led her to the basket with a perfect pass.

The team was without the injured Mia Lieb-Lappen, one of their best defensive players. The rest of the girls stepped it up, however, Katie James in particular.

The junior forward was huge on the boards, keeping Nantucket's athletes off the offensive glass. The Cohasset defense was forcing the Whalers into some tough shots, and thanks to James, Richardson and Anderson, there were few second chance opportunities.

Conversely, the Skippers were able to crash of the offensive glass with abandon, frequently earning themselves second, third and sometimes fourth opportunities to score.

Casey Anderson, in particular, was all over the place. Her efforts often led to either second-chance points or a trip to the free throw line.

Head coach John Levangie said afterwards he appreciated the all-around effort.

"I thought we ran the fast break pretty well, and giving up only 19 points the whole game was just fantastic," he said. "It was great team effort. The team defense was super."

The Skippers will be making a ferry ride of their own Saturday, Feb. 12, for a rematch with the Whalers. The girls made the same trip last year and won going away.

"If we can play the type of defense we did tonight, we should be OK," Levangie said. "But that trip will be a test of how tough these kids are."

The win improves Cohasset's record to 8-5, meaning the need to win only two of their last seven games to advance to the Div. 4 state tournament. There would appear to be more than enough winnable games on the schedule to make that happen.

(For a complete revised girls hoops varsity schedule, see the end of this story.)

It was a great way for the girls to bounce back from a tough loss to league-leading Abington on Monday.

Boys have a tough go

Skippers try to hang with Abington, but SSL leaders eventually dominate

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

It didn't take long for Dorian Bryant to let his team know during Wednesday's practice that they weren't trying hard enough.

In the coach's eyes, the boys weren't showing enough effort during a defensive mobility drill, and he let them know. Under the attentive look of Bryant, the team turned that around in a hurry and started hustling.

Such are the ups and downs of a young club, who have been taking their share of lumps in South Shore League play. As always, Bryant is remaining positive and says he continues to see progress with each day.

"They played better [Tuesday] night against Abington; certainly better than the first time we played them," Bryant said. "I think they are coming together as a group. We are moving toward the right direction."

The direction will hopefully include a couple more wins for

Skippers break through

CHS skaters hoping 3-2 win over AEB a sign of things to come

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

A hard luck season may have turned for the better for the Cohasset hockey team on Wednesday.

That is the hope, anyway, as the Skippers finally broke through on the scoreboard at the Rockland Ice Rink with a 3-2 win over Abington/East Bridgewater.

Junior Brian Straughn scored two goals, including the game-winner with 4:30 remaining in the game. Senior Tim Pilczak scored the other goal for Cohasset.

After outplaying AEB in the first two periods (resulting in a 2-1 lead), Cohasset found themselves in a battle in the third period. Three minutes in, the Green Wave tied things up and appeared to have the momentum.

It was about seven minutes later that Straughn stepped in to change that, putting in a shot from the slot to re-gain the lead for his team. AEB pulled their goalie in the closing seconds, and nearly tied it up on a couple occasions.

The Skippers held on, however, much to the relief of players and coaches who had been increasingly frustrated by the recent string of losses. Senior captain Ted Straughn said afterwards that the win, which brings Cohasset's record to 3-6, will hopefully spark the team to some wins.

"It's going to have to do that, or else it's over," he said. "A loss [Wednesday] night would have killed our hopes of making the tournament. Now, we have to go ahead from this point and stay on a roll."

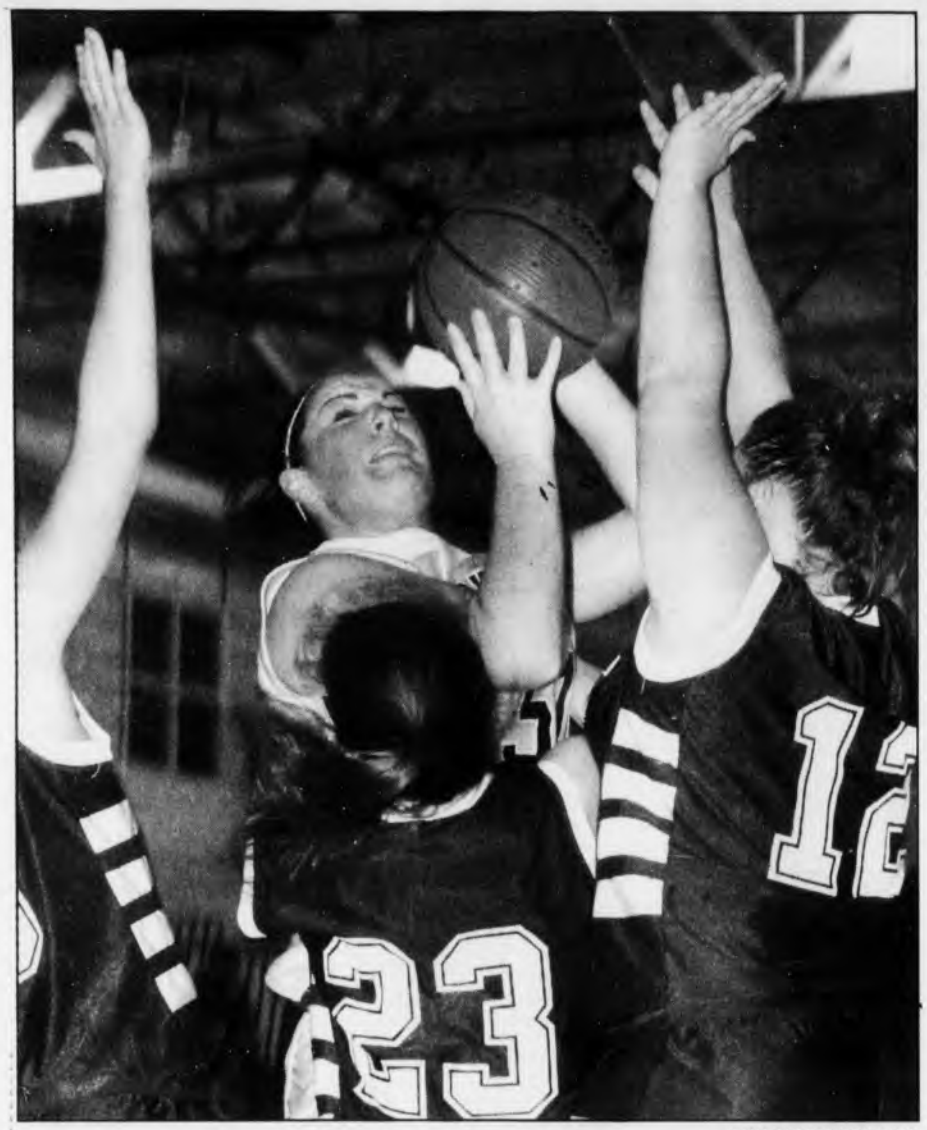
Down 1-0, the Straughn brothers combined to put the Skippers on the board four minutes into the second period. On a 3-on-2 break, Ted fired a shot on net from the blue line. Brian was able to get himself in position for the tip-in, and the game was tied.

Eighteen seconds later, Cohasset was in the lead. Pilczak took the puck from an AEB defenseman, stormed the net and went five-hole to put his team ahead.

It was part of what Cohasset head coach Ben Virga called the best game of the year for Pilczak, who has had to adjust from defenseman to forward because of the absence of key personnel.

"Tim was really moving his feet; he was flying all over the ice," Virga said. "I think he finally realized that if he uses his speed, he can really make things happen."

The coach praised his defensemen, Charlie Czerkawski, Zack Murray, Conor Holway and Brandon Smith for their efforts. It was Smith's first game in a while because of injury; the plan was to ease him in gradually. An early injury to Joe Durkin, however, forced Smith to play every other shift, and he played well.



The third line of T.J. Kennedy, Mark Donovan and Corbin Faber also did a great job of defending AEB's first line and keeping them from scoring.

this one to the very end, but the Green Wave had a little too much talent to overcome.

Once again, it was a balanced scoring effort for Cohasset, an encouraging sign as the team will need points from multiple players if they are to be successful in the tournament.

Casey Anderson led with 11, supported by Grossman with nine and Nicole Whitney with eight.

Levangie said he has seen Grossman improve tremendously since last season and the beginning of this year.

"Chelsea is really becoming an excellent point guard. She has matured a lot in that role, and she is far more experienced than last year," Levangie said. "She has learned to go to the basket more, and she is making much better decisions with the basketball."

All of Whitney's points came on medium-range jump shots. That is a phase of the game that Cohasset will need come tournament time, as Anderson figures to be double- or triple-teamed every time she touches the ball in the post.

Levangie knows Anderson can effectively pass out of those kinds of defenses, and others will have to step up and make shots. The coach is hopeful that the likes of Richardson, James and Whitney will help out in that regard.

"I think in the case of those girls, it's a matter of getting them to believe in themselves," Levangie said. "They can all shoot; it's just a matter of confidence. I think they are starting to get that confidence."

The Skippers face another tough league test tonight when they travel to face Carver. The rest of the girls' schedule is as follows (all times in p.m.):

Feb. 7 vs. Mashpee, 6:30; Feb. 8 at Harwich, 6:30; Feb. 11 vs. Hull, 6:30; Feb. 12 at Nantucket, 1:15; Feb. 15 at Norwell, 6:30; Feb. 17 vs. Hopedale, 6:30.

The JV's will play before the varsity squad on all of those dates, with the exception of Nantucket on the 12th.

Virga says Faber has shown great improvement as the year has gone on.

"Corbin just plays phenomenal positional hockey, and he's the most coachable kid in the world," Virga said. "He's worked himself up from a kid who hardly plays to a key part of our third line."

Brendan Michaud played in net on Wednesday, and made 18 saves in the victory.

All in all, it was a great way for the team to bounce back from a tough game last Friday against Norwell.

Norwell 5, Cohasset 0

The difference between youth and experience showed last Friday night.

While the Cohasset hockey team plays a number of freshmen and sophomores in their line-up, Norwell's is mainly juniors and seniors with a couple years of varsity experience.

The Clippers knew how to make the plays when it mattered most, and came away with a 5-0 win.

The game was not the blowout that the final score would lead one to believe. The Skippers more than held their own for the first two periods, as the shots were just about even (Norwell held a slight 18-16 advantage going into the second intermission).

The difference was that the Clippers made a couple of those chances count. The first came at the end of the first period, when Dan Ferzoco set up line-mate Mike Guerra for a blast at the right face-off circle that found its way past Cohasset goalie Stefan Parnell (26 saves).

That sent Norwell into the locker room with a 1-0 lead in a period that was otherwise evenly played. From the Skippers' perspective, any potential for momentum took a hit with that goal.

"Giving up a goal with 17 seconds left in the period, that's just the mistake of a young team right there," Virga said.

That first period featured some huge hits, particularly from Cohasset sophomore Conor Holway. The young defenseman has become one of the best in his position in the South Shore League, combining that hitting ability with notable puck-carrying skills out of his own end.

Neither Holway nor Parnell had a chance, however, of stopping Norwell's second goal with 6:27 left in the second period. After getting into a collision with a Skipper, Norwell defenseman Brendan Gilligan got just enough control of a loose puck to poke it ahead to a charging Pete Lindblom.

Norwell's leading scorer found himself all alone on a breakaway, and he made it count to give Norwell all the insurance they would wind up needing. A Cohasset power play later in the period was nullified by a faulty line change that resulted in a too many men on the ice penalty, a mishap Virga took responsibility for after the game.

Things were still in doubt five minutes into the third period, despite a flurry of shots from Norwell. Included in that sequence was a great save by Parnell on a breakaway by Ferzoco.

With 10:07 left, however, Cohasset would accidentally put the puck in their own net to give the Clippers a 3-0 lead. Tom Napolitano got credit for the score.

The Skippers' dreams of victory and, for that matter, their morale, were clearly dashed. Within minutes, Norwell scored two goals in the span of 18 seconds to account for the final score.

Norwell head coach Paul Hurley had two goals coming into the contest: to come out strong in the first period and to win in order to stay within a game of league-leading Harwich/Provincetown. Both were accomplished.

"That was our best game of the year," Hurley said. "This was a great team effort. Everybody did their job and played smart hockey."

An encouraging sign for the Clippers was the fact that five different players scored their goals. In addition to Guerra, Lindblom and Napolitano, Cody Cavicchi (assisted by Myles Clancy) and Brian White (Guerra assist) also got in the scorebook. White also made a difference on defense with some strong checking of his own.

From the Skippers' perspective, Virga commended many of his players for the effort they put forth on Friday night.

"If I had 20 Ted Straughns, I would be confident in our chances against B.C. High and Catholic Memorial," said Cohasset's second-year coach. "A kid like Austen Lanzillotti, if he plays like that every game, we'll be in great shape. I thought Conor and Charlie [Czerkawski] played great as well.

"Everybody is doing their best. It's just tough for us playing a team like Norwell with mostly juniors and seniors."

Next up

When the Skippers host Blue Hills tonight at 6:50 p.m., it will kick off a stretch of 11 games in 18 days. Included in there is a stretch of three games in as many days between the 10th and 12th.

It is those 11 games that will determine whether or not Cohasset will play beyond the regular season.

"It's basically a race at this point; either seven wins or five losses, whichever comes first will determine that," Virga said. "We've been dealing with a lot of adversity; it would be a shame if we didn't build on this win [over AEB].

Tonight at 6:50, the Skippers host a solid, well-coached team in Blue Hills. The teams will meet again on Monday at BH's home rink. In between for Cohasset is another home contest on Saturday at 8 p.m., this one with Hull.

Revised schedule

The following is how the rest of Cohasset hockey's schedule breaks down (all times in p.m.):

Home games: Feb. 4 vs. Blue Hills (6:50), Feb. 5 vs. Hull (8:00), Feb. 11 vs. Mashpee (6:50), Feb. 16 vs. Carver (5:40) and Feb. 21 vs. Norwell (4:00).

Road games: Feb. 7 vs. Blue Hills (4:30), Feb. 10 vs. Carver (5:45), Feb. 12 vs. Harwich (8:00), Feb. 15 vs. Mashpee (7:30), Feb. 18 vs. Wareham (8:00), Feb. 19 vs. Westwood (6:00).

COASTAL STARS

The Coastal Stars Mite C1 team faced the Hanover 2 team on Sunday.

The Stars Mite C1 Team faced a strong Hanover 2 team on Sunday. Lead by Captain Jack Shaw the Stars held off Hanover's attack with many great saves by Goalie Tyler McKinnon.

The game started off with a fine defensive play by Center Sean Feeney to save a goal. The First line of RW Daniel Cronin and LW Ben Swim did a great job of keeping the puck moving. Defensemen Jake Moore and Davis Cronin helped to keep the puck away from Tyler.

The second line of Cam Mastrangelo at Center, James Dietrich and Joe Deyeso faced a tough attack by some fine Hanover players. Defensemen Joe Proctor and Chris Bertone had their hands full but managed to hold back most of the Hanover attack.

The Third line did all the scoring for the Stars. The Stars scoring started with a pass from Jack Conlon to Tommy Prendergast and good effort from Tommy to get the puck in the net. Later a pass from Center Liam Manning led to a Jack Conlon goal. Defensemen Jack Shaw and Hugh Healey kept the puck out of the Stars end and in Hanover's end. Their excellent defensive play resulted in no Hanover goals while they were on the ice. The Stars lost the game 7-2 and face the Hanover 1 next.

Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 Beats Duxbury

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 team had a "barn burner" of a game this past weekend. Eventually beating Dubury C-2, 4-3.

The Coastal Stars were down 3-2 going into the third period with Duxbury keeping Alec Hurd, the Coastal Stars' goaltender, very busy. It wasn't until late in the third period was the game tied by Tim Cavanaro. Nate Morse scored the eventual game winner to make it 4-3.

Jake Denton, Coleman Hernon, Adam Jackson, Jake Timcoe, Chris Bjorkman, and Mick Barry played outstanding defense. Nick Mulrey and Mick Barry scored early in the game to keep it a tight game.

Hurd, with the help of his defensemen, deflected a flurry of shots after Duxbury pulled their goalie late in the third period. All the Coastal Stars rejoiced in a hard fought win. Their record now stands at 18-2-1.

Mite C2 Game Recap 1/29/05

The Coastal Stars Mite C2 hockey team, playing its best game of the year defeated Braintree 7 to 0 Saturday at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke. Chris Phillips continuing his string of great goaltending recorded his second shut out in the last three games.

The two teams skated to a scoreless tie in the first period. Jo Jo Carbone, Kyle Bowman and Colby Comeau all had good scoring chances in the period but were denied by some solid goaltending by Braintree. Robert Bothwell helped keep Braintree off the board by making a great hustle play getting back on defense and thwarting a breakaway.

Both team played great up and down hockey during the second period. The stars red line of Tucker Antico, Harry Sheldon, Matty Johnson and Seamus Ryan applied constant offensive pressure during their shifts with Harry almost scoring on a breakaway. Gunnar Mckenzie was a standout on defense breaking up several Braintree scoring chances and keeping the puck in the offense zone with some great point play.

After two scoreless periods, the Stars exploded in the third period. Tucker Antico got the scoring started with an unassisted goal. Kyle Bowman scored the first of his three goals on an unassisted breakaway while on a power play. His second goal came 40 seconds later after taking a feed from Colby Comeau. Mats Nelson also assisted on the goal.

Seamus Ryan scored the stars fourth goal assisted by Tucker Antico and Harry Sheldon. The Stars White line of Brian Mathews Derek Benson, Conner Lemieux, Robert Bothwell, and Shaelyn Tobin played a strong period with Conner, Derek, and Brian all having excellent scoring chances with Conner Lemeuix scoring on an unassisted breakaway.

Kyle Bowman and Jo Jo Carbone finished the scoring with Colby Comeau assisting on both goals.

Mite A

The Coastal Star Mite A team began and ended their impromptu vacation with a pair of wins. Before the Blizzard of 2005 hit, the Pembroke Pythons ran into the Mite A storm at a sunrise game in Hingham on January 22. The Stars won the game by a score of 13-1, with Sam Topham having a hat trick. Other goals came from David Cataldo, who had a nice backhanded goal to start the game off early in the first period and a scored a second goal midway through the second period, Jeremy Duchini forcing in a hard fought rebound, Brandon Winn with an assist from Charlie Blackington, Charlie Michalowski, scoring with his signature wrist shot, Tommy O'Brien skating it in from center ice to score and Pat Holway scored the final goal of the game with only three seconds left. The Pythons skated hard but were unable to get by the defensemen of Matt Burchill, Garrett Leahy, Blackington and Holway to get off too many shots. Goalie Jeff Nagle made the saves when needed only letting one bounce in the third.

At another early game in Weymouth this past Saturday, the Stars continued their winning ways against Weymouth. The game was a lot tighter than the 9-0 score would indicate. Colin MacDonald scored a wrap around goal two minutes into the first period, but the remainder of the period was tight with the Stars defensemen of Blackington, Duchini, Burchill, Leahy and O'Brien keeping the pressure on throughout the game breaking up plays and keeping the puck in Weymouth's zone. After the first period the score was 1-0, Stars. The second period was when the Stars put on a shooting clinic. At the 7:58 mark, Patrick Holway scored his first goal of the game by lifting the puck past the goalie's shoulder. Just 13 seconds later, he followed up with basically the same shot for his second goal of the game. David Cataldo skated the puck in from center ice and fired a bullet of his own past the Weymouth goalie just 20 seconds later. And just a little more than a minute after Pat scored his first goal, Sam Topham skated up the left hand side and used his wrist shot to blast one in. The score was now 6-0 at the end of the second. The third period showed a return to even play between the two teams, however the Stars managed to score three more goals by Brendan Crane, Martin Buckley (a one timer of a nice assist from Brandon Winn) and Patrick Holway got his third for a hat trick in the game.

Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 Wins Hockey Tournament

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 team won the "Deep Freeze" Hockey Tournament in Waterville Valley over the long weekend. They did it in grand style by beating Quincy 6-1 in the Championship game on Monday. Goals were scored by and assisted by Nate Morse, Nick Mulrey, Jack Kuppens, Jake Timcoe, Brendan Queenan, Michael Hutchinson, Sam Topham and Colin Bell. The team also had a great defensive stand the whole game with Sam Topham, Adam Jackson, Chris Bjorkman, Jake Denton and Coleman Hernon as the defense in front of Alec Hurd, the goaltender.

The road to the Championship was not easy as they had to play two games on Friday beating Duxbury C-4 in the first game, 4-1 and Quincy in the twinight game 4-2. Duxbury C-2 posed the greatest test to the Coastal Stars on Saturday night. The Stars were the eventual winner in this "nail biter" of a win, 2-1. The final game proved to be a great offensive win for the Stars.

Coach Charlie Mulrey interviewed after the Championship said " These kids fought hard the whole tournament and deserved to win this game. Solid defense, great passing and great goaltending were the keys"

The Stars are having a fantastic season under Coaches, Charlie Mulrey, Dave Denton, Jack Kuppens and Mike Timcoe. Currently the Stars have a 18-2-1 record.

Girls travel basketball report

Sixth graders win third straight

The sixth grade girls travel basketball team won its third straight South Shore League game with a 25-8 win over Raynham Sunday at the Cohasset High gym. The win moves the Blue and White over the .500 mark with a 5-4 record on the season.

The Sixers were predictably rusty after having missed last week's game, which was cancelled because of the blizzard, as well as the ensuing week of practice because the schools were closed. However, after a slow start offensively which saw the teams tied at four through the opening 10 minutes of play, steady Cohasset forward Kate French caught fire, scoring eight points in the half to boost Cohasset into a 12-4 lead at the intermission.

The Blue and White girls then took control of the game early in the second half with a balanced scoring attack. Carli Haggerty (six points on the day) sank a bucket from in-close, and Emma Quigley scored on two successive trips down court on a 15-footer and a short jumper.

Eliza Kinneally swished a pair of free throws to give Cohasset a commanding 20-6 advantage.

Rachel Fredey then applied the coup de grace with a nifty drive down the lane on which she scored the hoop, drew the foul, and sank the free throw for a three point play. Carly Martin completed the Cohasset scoring with a nice move inside the paint for the 25-8 final score.

"Our timing and shooting were off because of the 10 day layoff," said Sixer Coach Steve Fredey, "but our defense kept us in the game until we could get going on offense."

Fredey mentioned the defensive play and rebounding of forwards Lindsay Davis, Emma Musto, and Logan Pratt and the strong efforts of guards Olivia Murphy, Caroline Fein, and Amy Costa as being key factors in the win.

The Sixers now will play at Hanson Saturday and return home Sunday to host Carver.

Seventh graders are victorious

The seventh grade girls basketball team started the second half of the season on the right foot, earning their second victory of the year with a well-played, 26-13 triumph over Raynham.

The win avenged a loss earlier in the year to Raynham in a heartbreaking, double-overtime thriller.

The Blue and White played their best game of the year and never trailed after initially going down 2-0 off the opening tap. Samantha Crough hit two long-range jumpers to key the Sevens to a 15-7 halftime lead.

In the second half a strong defensive effort held Raynham to only six points, while Meredith Kelly ensured a victory by scoring six points herself in the second half.

For the game, Crough, Tori Lehr, Mimi Mahoney, and Isabelle Franklin (back from an injury) each scored four points, while Kelly pumped in eight.

This week the Blue and White will try to avenge earlier losses to Hanson and Carver.

the 2-10 Skippers before the year is out. They have a few winnable games remaining against Cape Cod Academy (whom Cohasset has already defeated), and two with Nantucket.

Everyone knew they would have their hands full with league-leading Abington Tuesday night. The boys tried their best to hang tough, but a talented Green Wave squad proved to be too much.

Abington 82, Cohasset 41

The blizzard of 2005 ended early last week for most of the South Shore.

However, the continued effects may have lasted a little bit longer for Cohasset as the Skippers were snowed under by Abington Tuesday night.

The Green Wave, in their home white uniforms, forced white out conditions for the visitors in a one sided 82–41 victory.

The most impressive part of the Green Wave victory was their defensive play. Leading 11–3 with 12:50 left in the first half, Abington went on a 19-5 run. During that stretch, twelve of those 19 points came off of forced Cohasset turnovers as the Green Wave turned up the defensive pressure. At one point, the Skippers committed six straight turnovers.

Despite the blizzard-induced layoff, Abington's game conditioning appeared fine as their top players continued their strong play. Senior captain Bill Carey continued his scoring touch as he finished with 22 points. Seniors Jon Conway and Kyle Fletcher both finished with 10 points each.

Trevor Brady, Cohasset's junior captain, finished as the leading scorer for his team with 15 points. The Skippers also got solid contributions from Chris Bryan (eight points), Mike Bilodeau (seven) and Nick Zappalo (six).

Bryant said has team has been using these games against top-notch competition as a learning tool that they can take with them into the offseason to prepare for next year.

"I think they are starting to figure out what it is going to take to be a winning team," he said. "They are starting to match opponents' play and intensity."

At the half, Abington lead 41-20 and opened the second half with a 18–3 run to put answer any final questions to the out come of the game. When the reserves stepped on the court they was no drop in the Green Wave game. Senior Derek Regan played well finishing with five points, two rebounds and one block. Juniors Dan Carroll and Tim Whelan both played well while they were on the court.

Abington's (10-1, 7-0) schedule will get a little busier than last week's as the Green Wave travel to Harwich on Wednesday night and host Norwell on Saturday afternoon. The Clippers defeated Hull on Monday night to give Abignton a two game cushion in the won-loss column for the league title.

"Norwell did us a favor by beating Hull," said Abington coach Don Byron. "Now Norwell is a team that we are going to have to contend with because they are only two games behind us. They are in the same position we were a few years ago when we came back to tie for the league title. That is something we are going to have to be concerned with as we prepare to play them this week."

Revised schedule

The following is the revised schedule for the varsity boys basketball team (all game times in p.m.):

Home games: Feb. 4 vs. Carver, 6:30; Feb. 8 vs. Harwich, 6:30; Feb. 9 vs. Cape Cod Academy, 4:30; Feb. 14 vs. Nantucket, 4:30; Feb. 15 vs. Norwell, 6:30.

Road games: Feb. 7 at Mashpee, 6:30; Feb. 11 at Hull, 6:30; Feb. 12 at Nantucket, 2:45.

The JV's play right before the varsity squad on Feb. 4, 7, 8, 11 and 15. They also host the Abington freshmen Feb. 16 at 3:30 p.m., and travel to take on the same team the next day at 4 p.m.

Boys Patriot League Report

Back-to-back games were on the schedule for the weekend, as the boys middle school travel teams dug out from the snow and dug in on the court.

Saturday's action in Hanson began with the Cohasset sixth grade boys. Hanson won the tip and scored early with three unanswered baskets.

Robert Jones put Cohasset on the board with a textbook left handed lay up. Derek Youngman, with his quick hands stole the ball off the inbounds pass, and layed it up for two. Sam Richardson then mimicked his teammate, stole the ball and put in two.

Cohasset settled into a tough zone defense that Hanson could not penetrate. Cohasset made their shots, taking a 14-6 lead. Good passing and solid shooting was the order of the day for the boys, as Ben Campbell fed Richardson for another two, and was fouled.

Hanson battled back with strong offensive rebounding. The quicker Cohasset squad kept the bigger Hanson guys running, wearing them down. A timely Robbie Hill basket ended Cohasset's dry spell and Cohasset was up 21-15 at the half.

The second half began with a great Anders Goetz steal to feed Jones for two. Then on Hanson's next possession, Jones stole the ball and went the distance for another two. Cohasset quickly found themselves up 27-15.

Breaking the press, Jones fed Richardson, who found Gabe Seksay in the paint for two more points.

Cohasset in turn, pressed Hanson, and Hanson couldn't handle it. This gave Cohasset several offensive opportunities, with a Richardson steal, a Goetz three-pointer and a Hill trip to the line. Hill sank both, putting his team up 46-28.

Mike Monaco then fed a waiting Ben Campbell for two. Campbell thread the needle with a perfect pass to Jack Carrier in the paint for two, sealing the win for Cohasset, 53-42.

Jones led all scorers with 16 points, followed by Richardson with 10 and Campbell with eight.

The seventh graders took to the court next. The first points on the board were from Dana Valentine, who was fouled and he sank both shots. Taylor McQuade, on a strong offensive rebound hit for two, followed by a Chris Brown drive where he was fouled and he sank one of two.

Eamon Davis had an incredible three-rebound effort before sinking a lay up. A resounding block by Valentine, kept Cohasset on top 9-3.

Robert Jones led all scorers with 16 points, followed by Sam Richardson with 10 and Ben Campbell with eight.

John Kearney went coast-to-coast for two, followed by a Brown to Will Wise connection for two. The passing of the Cohasset boys kept the Hanson defensive struggling to keep up, and Cohasset led 17-12.

As Hanson regrouped, the Cohasset boys went cold, and Hanson tied it up at the half.

The second half brought a rejuvenated Cohasset team, and the fast break was the order of the day. Davis fed Robby McCunney for two and Johnny Maher stole the ball, went the distance and was fouled in the act of shooting. He hit both free throws and Davis nailed both ends of a one and one.

This sealed the victory for the boys in blue. Valentine and Davis led the scoring for Cohasset with six and eight points respectively.

The eight grade team engaged in an early defensive battle with the Hanson boys. The game remained scoreless until Hanson sunk the second of two foul shots.

Nick Savage put Cohasset on the board converting an offensive board to a made basket. Lennart Brown scored next with a sweet 15-foot jumper. Marcus Charles started a fast break to John Sturino and back to Brown for two.

Cohasset's next two possessions involved Charles again, the first with a made 15-foot jump shot and the second a lay-up off a steal. Charles tied up the game for Cohasset. Hanson regrouped defensively and shut down Charles.

Ryan Daley was incredibly aggressive under the boards on defense. Nick Simonds and Danny Brady each chipped in a basket. Danny Martin, with a powerhouse rebound, fed Evan Richardson who got it to Sturino for two. At the halftime buzzer, Hanson hit an unbelieveable three pointer to go up 21-14.

Hanson started the second half where they left off, with another three. Adam Berger was strong under the boards. Martin hit a nice baseline jumper, and then converted the second of two foul shots. Hanson was determined though, driving the score to 34-26.

With nothing but grit and determination, the boys in blue fought back tooth and nail. Mike Fithian, Daly and Sturino were ferocious under the boards and diving on the floor. Brady hit a jumper, Sturino converted a steal for two points and was on the receiving end of a Richardson steal for two.

Unfortunately, time was not on Cohasset's side and Hanson squeaked out the victory.

On Sunday, Cohasset hosted Taunton and once again the action began with the sixth graders.

Strong defensive efforts kept both teams from scoring through the first four minutes of the game. Robert Jones ended the drought, putting Cohasset on the board.

Anders Goetz stole the ball on the press and made the lay up. It was re-run time, as Goetz stole the ball again and hit a three, putting Cohasset up 7-2.

Cohasset masterfully pressed Taunton creating turnovers and scoring opportunities. Jack Carrier created havoc for Taunton in the press, getting a steal, and on a give 'n go with Jones, scored 2. With two left in the half, Cohasset was up 11-7.

Clearly this was a defensive battle from the get go. The speed and quick hands of Robbie Hill, Derek Youngman and Ben Campbell forced Taunton turnovers.

Jones and Sam Richardson kept the opponents out of the paint. Jones broke the scoring lapse with a coast to coast lay up for two. Big man Eric Wasel put up two from underneath to give Cohasset the lead.

The boys were warming up and the shots started to sink. Campbell fed Jones for two. Wasel, from an offensive rebound, converted for another two.

Goetz made a great steal and fed Campbell for two and a foul. Carrier stole the ball and fed Goetz for another two.

Derek Youngman hit an easy 10-foot jumper and Drew Cobin finished the scoring to put Cohasset on top 39-32. Campbell, Goetz and Jones all chipped in seven points.

With an all or nothing mindset, the seventh graders took the floor, prepared to give second-place Taunton a run for their money, and that they did.

Cohasset came out fired up and Johnny Maher scored quickly. Eamon Davis was fouled and sunk one. Chris Brown stole the ball and went coast to coast for two. On the next trip down the floor, Brown converted an offensive board to two.

Brendan Doonan stole the ball and fed Robby McCunney for two. Cohasset took an early 11-3 lead.

The half ended with a Taunton three and Cohasset on top 19-15.

Taunton regrouped in the second half and executed some defensive stops. At the ten minute mark, McCunney fed Maher for two, but Taunton began to build a lead.

Their momentum was temporarily halted as John Kearney, from the top of the circle sank a three pointer that hit nothing but net. Cohasset was down by five.

Taylor McQuade, along with Brown and Dana Valentine controlled the boards on both ends of the court. Davis, Kearney, McCunney, Kevin O'Connell, Jeff Charles and Will Wise kept the ball in motion on offense and slowed the Taunton ball handlers.

Despite all their efforts, the Cohasset seventh graders lost, 45-42 in what was their best game of the season.

Anticipation on defense kept the boys in the game, Brendan Doonan on wing with his quick feet and hands, prevented the outside shot.

Despite all their efforts, the Cohasset seventh graders lost, 45-42 in what was their best game of the season. Maher was the top scorer with ten points and McCunney had six rebounds.

The eighth-grade boys played the last game of the weekend. Taunton started with a three and John Sturino answered with a basket.

The game went back and forth. All of the boys were in the action. Evan Richardson stole the ball and went the distance for two. Sturino stole the ball and fed a streaking Danny Martin for two.

Nick Savage continues to work hard under the boards and was fouled, sinking the second of two foul shots. The Richardson/Sturino tandem converted two more steals for baskets.

Cohasset took the lead with a Marcus Charles jump shot. Danny Brady and Ryan Daly picked up where they left off in Hanson, with aggressive and body-sacrificing defense. Their aggressiveness prevented Taunton from taking any shots.

A timeout by Taunton allowed them to regroup and they put the press on Cohasset, which created offensive chances. Taunton took the lead with three and half minutes left in the half.

The second half started again with the Richardson and Sturino tag team, combining for two baskets. Savage converted a board to two and Richardson went end to end off a steal for two. Cohasset was within three points.

Taunton put the press on and slowly expanded their lead. A tremendous block by Dan Martin kept Cohasset within six points. But then Taunton put the brakes on, stopped Cohasset from scoring and converted several fast breaks to points, expanding their led to 14 points.

Sturino and Richardson led a comeback, hauntingly similar to 24 hours prior. Tremendous guts had Sturino harassing their ball-handlers. Savage blocked a shot and fed Sturino for two. Martin with a great second effort, converted an offensive board to two.

Ryan Daly then stole the ball and made the lay up, but the clock ran out and Cohasset fell short to Taunton.

Nick Simonds, Mike Fithian, Adam Berger, Lennart Brown and Owen Landon all contributed tremendous heart and effort on the court for the boys in blue.

'The truth that is taught by winter'

FAITH REFLECTIONS

REV. CLIFF CUTLER

The other night as I waited at Pemberton Point in the cold it was quite clear to me that I was far from self-reliant. I was waiting for a ride and thankful for it. Last week's winter storm (with a nod to the Patriots) hit like a wedge going up-field on a kick-off return. It was impossible not to be humbled by its ferocity. One friend for whom not missing work is a matter of pride, remarked when he could not get out of his house: "Why can't I just accept mother nature's gift of a day off graciously?! Maybe at another time I will be able to find that humility with God's help."

There is something about winter that humbles each one of us. We are not autonomous. We live dependently among others and upon God. The bushes in our yard have been bent over (humbled) under the weight of snow. I recall in the poem "Birches," Robert Frost imagined that they had been bent to the ground by human sport. Perhaps, however, that gives too much consequence to boys at play. He knew that the real reason was winter. We are not autonomous, in perfect control, or sovereign even over a thin birch tree. But fallen snow can bend it so that it stays bent. Winter teaches humility.

Humility is at the root of all worship. It is our giving the sovereignty to God. Winter's storms often recall to my heart the Prayer of Azariah in the Bible's Apocrapha: "Glorify the Lord, O chill and cold,/ drops of dew and flakes of snow./ Frost and cold, ice and sleet, glorify the Lord,/ praise him and highly exalt him for ever." All creation submits to God. Frost and cold humble me.

Spiritually, we are humble because God is humble. God addresses Moses from an insignificant, desert bush. Christmas is the celebration of God's embodiment as the child Jesus humbly born in a manger; and Easter, Jesus' humbling himself "to the point of death" for love of the world, as the ancient hymn in Philippians makes clear. We are humble because God is humble.

Secondly, we are humble because that is God's desire for us. The first Psalm begins the same way as Jesus' beatitudes: "Blessed are those" and Jesus goes on to describe the spiritually poor, the grieving, the merciful and guileless, that is, the humble. We are not autonomous but dependent upon God's grace that is the "spiritual adrenaline," with which God blesses the humble.

Only the humble can see through the inflated pride that turns violent toward others.

Finally, we are humble because humility opposes the abomination of pride — thinking, for instance, that another's "blood" or race is somehow deficient compared to one's own and in need of eradication. Last week was the 60th year since the Nazi death camps were liberated. Nine years ago I visited Yad Vashem in Jerusalem. The Hebrew means a monument and a name. To enter this memorial to the holocaust I walked past a sculpture of broken, white columns recalling the million Jewish children that were killed (their lives broken off before their time). Walking through exhibit after exhibit I finally exited overwhelmed, bent over under a spiritual winter such as I had never seen before. We are to be humble so that we see in one another the creative love of the one God, and counter the abomination of racism and pride.

Too often we associate humility with weakness. That is not the case. Only the humble can see through the inflated pride that turns violent toward others. It is the humble who can empathize with the suffering and without violence though with great passion resist those who inflict wrong. The Los Angeles Times reported recently that humility is a key trait of successful leaders. This is not just a business assessment. It is a truth taught by winter and a spirituality that is millennia old.

This is one in a monthly series by members of the Cohasset Clergy Association. The Very Reverend E. Clifford Cutler is pastor of Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

SPED law under attack

The Massachusetts Department of Education (MDOE) is moving quickly to make significant changes to the Chapter 766 Special Education regulations, according to Massachusetts Advocacy for Children. Many of the proposed changes could seriously harm children with special educational needs. If these changes are enacted school administrators who are not part of a child's IEP Team and do not know the child would be allowed to determine the student's classroom placement each year.

School districts will be able to change a student's IEP and placement without parental consent (unless the parent files for a hearing or mediation.) That means that both parents and school districts will be paying heavy legal fees. School districts will be allowed to refuse requests that a student be evaluated or re-evaluated. It will become legal to segregate special education programs in one part of a school building (i.e., separate wing, basement,) and short term objectives can be removed from IEPs.

These proposed changes undermine the very fabric of civil rights for children with disabilities, Mass. Advocacy says. They seriously erode a parent's right to participate in their child's educational programming and place the future of these children at enormous risk.

Parents and others who care about children with disabilities can express their opinions regarding these proposed changes by attending one of the MDOE sponsored public hearings. Hearings will be held in Springfield on Feb. 7 from 3-6 p.m. at the Kasparian Professional Development Center, 60 Alton St.; and in Malden on Feb. 14 from 3-6 p.m. at the MDOE headquarters at 350 Main St. MDOE is also taking email comments at:

spedregscomment@doe.mass.edu.

Finally, individuals can contact their state senator and representative to voice concerns. Call the State House at (617) 722-2000, or go to find out the name of your state senator or representative.

For further information contact Johanne Pino, Massachusetts Advocates for Children, 617-357-8431 x234.

Special Education services are offered

The school department is seeking children with disabilities living in Cohasset who may be in need of Special Education services.

A child with disabilities is one who may have temporary or more permanent difficulties arising from: autism, communication, developmental delay, emotional, health, neurological, physical, sensory or other specific learning impairments which make learning problematic.

Any parent or caretaker of a child who is suspected of having a disability but who is not receiving services should contact Linda Gill, M.A., CAGS, director of student services at 781-383-6104.

Registration open for Summer Arts at Derby

Applications are now available for Summer Arts at Derby 2005 at Derby Academy in Hingham. Dates of the program are June 27 to July 29. Summer Arts is a five-week comprehensive arts program for students, ages eight to 15, that serves students from over 25 Massachusetts communities.

Students at Summer Arts select their own schedules from over one hundred courses. Classes are taught by professional artists and include offerings in visual arts, drama, dance, music, sports, gymnastics, writing, media, and photography. There is a full-scale musical production and a daily newspaper. The program culminates with an Arts Festival at which students demonstrate and share their talents through theatre, gymnastics, music, and dance. There will also be exhibits of pottery, painting, photography, 3-D art, and sewing projects. Original film and video projects will be shown.

Don't miss out on a creative and dynamic summer. For brochures and more information about Summer Arts, call 781-740-4766.

Kindergarten registration

Kindergarten registration for the 2005-2006 school year begins Monday, Feb. 6. Registration will be at the Osgood School daily from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Parents may indicate interest in full-day kindergarten or half-time kindergarten at the time of registration.

Implementation of a full-day program is pending subject to School Committee approval and acceptance of the FY'06 school budget proposal.

Parents are encouraged to register early to facilitate planning for programs. If the school budget is approved, the Kindergarten Full-Day Task Force is optimistic that the district will be able to accommodate all families interested in either a full-day or half-day program.

Children who turn five on or before Sept. 1, 2005 are eligible to attend kindergarten. A birth certificate and proof of residency are required in order to register.

Call the Osgood School at 781-383-6117 if you have any questions.

IT'S HAPPENING

Jay O'Callahan

Storytellers aid Tsunami victims

On Feb. 18, at 7:30 p.m., two storytellers, Jay O'Callahan, who was recently featured twice on channel five's "Chronicle Magazine" and Derek Burrows, who has just returned from presenting programs at the White House, combine their talents for a Story Tsunami Benefit at the First Parish Unitarian Church in Cohasset, also featured will be Flutist Barbara Wall, storyteller Bob Reiser and storytelling hosts Andrea Lovett and Wiesy MacMillan.

What makes this fundraiser unique, is that the tellers will be telling many of the folktales, myths and legends from the Tsunami affected areas and sending the money back to countries where these tales originated.

Folktales often reflect the cultures of their origins and in this way give the listener an opportunity to meet the people through their stories. O'Callahan will also be telling community building stories as a way to draw the two communities together through stories. This performance is for families with children no younger than 12.

There will be a second performance with Andrea Lovett, Wiesy MacMillan, Diane Possitonian, vocalist, Katie Shepard, harpist Jen Poole, on Sunday Feb. 20. "Children's World Global Discovery Museum, (in back of Cohasset Library), for younger children at 2 p.m. Tickets are $10.

These relief efforts are a collaboration of the National Storytellers Network (NSN)/the First Parish Unitarian Church and the Children's Global Discovery Museum. The NSN is producing these storytelling events nationally with storytellers donating their performances to benefit the Tsunami Survivors. The entire proceeds for this event will be given to the Red Cross (through The Unitarian Church) and Oxfam (through Children's Museum and NSN) where 99 percent of your dollars will be given to those that need it most. The evening concert will be at 23 North Main St., The Unitarian Church. Tickets cost will be $25 in advance, $30 at the door. The following merchants will have tickets for sale: Nobles Camera Shops, Buttonwoods Books, Storybook Cove, Hanover, Marshfield Hills General Store, Marshfield Hills. For more information, call 781-871-5892.

Haigh book signing

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, RT.3A, Cohasset will host Hull resident Jennifer Haigh on Sunday, Feb. 6, at 1 p.m. Ms. Haigh will discuss her latest book, "Baker Towers" a novel set in a post World War I American Industrial town. Jennifer Haigh is the author of the critically acclaimed "Mrs. Kimble", which won the PEN/Hemingway Award for outstanding first fiction.

She is a graduate of Dickinson College and the Iowa Writers' Workshop. Her short stories have appeared in Good Housekeeping, the Hartford Courant, Alaska Quarterly Review, Virginia Quarterly Review, and elsewhere. Refreshments (Champagne punch and meringues) will be served. This is a free event and the public is most welcome. Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 or order online (www.buttonwoodbooks.com) to reserve a signed copy.

Valentines Fund Dance

The Third Annual Valentines Fund Dance to benefit the homeless will be held this year at the Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor Saturday evening, Feb. 19, from 8 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. The requested donation is $20 per person for the creative black-tie event. In view of people's contributions to Southeast Asia, the donation this year has been lowered by 20 per cent.

While our hearts go out to the more than 3 million made homeless by the tsunami, we must also take care of the more than 3 million adults and children who experience homelessness each year here in America. There will be dancing to two great rock and roll bands, The Pemberton Hill Players and Shaken Not Stirred. There will also be auctions of art works and a drumhead signed by all five members of Aerosmith, along with silent auctions and raffles of local artists' works, gift certificates and merchandise from local and Harvard Square merchants and restaurants.

Absolutely all proceeds go to benefit Bread & Jams, Inc., a Self-advocacy Center and day shelter located in Harvard Square, Cambridge. Hors-d'oeuvres will be provided by Atlantica staff. For dinner reservations pre-event call Atlantica at 781-383-0900. To reserve tickets for the event call 781-383-6568 as a limited number of tickets will be available at the door.

Family Square Dance at First Parish House

First Parish in Cohasset, a Unitarian Universalist congregation, will host a Family Square Dance Sunday, Feb. 13, from 4 to 6 p.m. Dan Pearl, a caller well-known throughout Massachusetts, will be accompanied by Carol and Steve Bittenson, who play fiddle and guitar, respectively.

Beginners and other non-experts are particularly welcome — especially children of all ages. Pear and his group will explain square-dancing basics. This promises to be a lively way to beat the mid-winter blahs. Cocoa, hot cider, and cookies will be provided.

This event will be held in the Parish House on Cohasset Common, and the entire community is invited. There is a nominal charge to cover out-of-pocket expenses: $10 per person or $15 for an entire family. Tickets may be purchased through Sandy Bailey, parish administrator, 781-383-1100, or at the door.

Boating certification held at Wompatuck

Boat Massachusetts is offered to the public at no charge. The primary purpose of Boat Massachusetts is to foster safe boat operation through increased awareness of required safety equipment, safe boating practices, and legal responsibilities.

Youth 12 through 15 years of age, who successfully complete the course, will be issued a Safety Certificate allowing them to operate a motorboat without adult supervision, as required by state law. This course will also satisfy the state requirements for personal watercraft users who are 16 or 17 years of age. All graduates will be issued a course completion diploma and a Safety Certificate. Taking the class as a family is encouraged and has proven to be highly rewarding.

On Feb. 5, and 12, (both sessions required for State Certification), at Wompatuck State Park, Visitor's Center, Union Street in Hingham, from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Pre-registration required with MA Environmental Police, Boat and Recreation Vehicle Bureau at 508-790-9360 or 617-727-8760.

Co-sponsor: Wompatuck State Park

Historical Society Art Deco gala Feb. 12

There will be an elegant evening at the Paul Pratt Building Feb. 12 at 7 p.m. to benefit the Cohasset Historical Society. This very special party is designed to show off the society's new headquarters and highlight the possibilities of this historic setting as an exciting community space adaptable to many uses.

The decor for the Art Deco Gala will be the creation of "Party by Design" and Art Deco dresses from the society's unique Cohasset Collection will be on display.

Passed hors d'oeuvres and an elegant buffet will be catered by The Borrowed Butler. An open bar will provide the drink of your choice.

A jazz trio of talented South Chore Conservatory musicians will play music of the '20s and '30s for listening and dancing.

Come in Art Deco attire or not! Valet parking will be available at St. Anthony Church.

When it comes to committees, Police Chief James Hussey may have the right stuff.

Selectmen have been known to implore people to sign up for myriad boards, committees and ad-hoc groups through public statements on TV and news briefs in the Mariner.

But Hussey had the tough job of turning people away from the new Police Advisory Council which met for the first time Wednesday (Feb. 2).

Hussey said Police Advisory Council is a natural outgrowth of the police survey he conducted at the end of the summer and into the fall that asked respondents dozens of questions about everything from how safe they feel to whether phone calls to the CPD are answered courteously and professionally.

"There were 30 people interested," said Hussey, who selected eight citizens, not including himself and Sgt. Shellee Peters and Officer Christy Tarantino, who is the union president. Peters is immediate past president of the police union.

Citizens on the council initially are Jack Buckley, Gabriel Gomez, Ron Goodwin, Wigmore Pierson, Lynn Previte, Beth Marsden Gilman, John Roy, Richard Abbadessa, and Ed Goff.

Hussey said he may rotate some people on and off the council, which represents a cross-section of the community, after the first few meetings to allow more participation. "I hate to shut anyone out," he said. "The whole idea is to brainstorm and get ideas."

Hussey said a range of topics will be discussed focusing on the current delivery of police services and how those can be expanded and/or improved.

He said he hopes those on the Police Advisory Council will talk to other members of the community and bring any ideas and concerns forward.

Hussey said the survey validated the concerns expressed to him when he took over the reins in the police department last spring. At that time, he gleaned from community receptions and talking to residents that under-age alcohol use and traffic were issues that needed to be addressed.

Hussey said one of the jobs of the new Police Advisory Council is to see if opinion and perception reflect reality in terms of the police.

He said the new advisory council will hopefully help create more "transparency" in the police department but it won't be "open ended."

"It will sunset," he said. "I'm not looking to have this be a permanent thing." He estimates the council will meet every three to four months over the next 18 months.

" We will pick each others' brains for ideas and help try to reshape current operations. After doing that, we're moving on."

In a telephone interview Thursday, Hussey described the first Police Advisory Council meeting held Wednesday (Feb. 2) as very productive. He said two themes emerged.

"People want to reconnect with the police department and want to get to know the officers," he said. Hussey noted that when he was growing up everyone knew "the cop on the beat."

But in the 60s and later, police service changed to responding to crime and fewer officers got out of their cars.

"We've come full circle," Hussey said.

Town needs to act on 'permanent' police chief post understanding between the two, which will help dictate how both should deal with issues regarding teens.

In fact, it's becoming hard to imagine the CPD without Hussey.

But when Hussey — who had been serving as commander of the Boston Police Academy — came on board last June at a salary of roughly $101,800, it was understood he would take a year leave of absence from the Boston Police Department.

With that year quickly coming to a close, the Board of Selectmen has begun discussing the direction the town should take to find a permanent chief to replace former Chief Robert W. Jackson, who retired after some 24 years with the CPD, more than two of those as chief.

Although Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said the decision will ultimately be one for new Town Manager Bill Griffin, whose first day was Monday (Jan. 31), at last week's Selectmen's meeting he said they need to talk about whether they will either recommend searching for a new chief or asking Hussey to stay on board.

"We don't want to lose him."
— Selectman Fred Koed

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said, judging from community feedback and from his own personal experience, Hussey "is doing a tremendous job."

But Selectman Rob Spofford said the board shouldn't rule out the possibility of conducting a search. He recalled last spring there was a lot of criticism that Hussey's appointment was done "behind closed doors" and selectmen assured the public "we'd have a fully vetted process" the next time around.

Jackson's retirement was announced on a Tuesday and Hussey was interviewed and subsequently recommended by the board to be appointed as interim chief two days later.

Hussey, now 50, was the only candidate interviewed by all five members of the board. At the time, some residents said a wider search should have been conducted for such an important position. In addition, because the public interview was the first time the town had been introduced to Hussey, they questioned just how much business had been conducted before that night and why the public wasn't involved.

Selectman Fred Koed said while the board made a commitment to a process, saying it would involve the public when it was time to find a permanent chief — Hussey has proven to be the kind of leader Cohasset needs. However, Koed said the town shouldn't drag its feet and needs to let Hussey know its intentions as soon as possible. If the town waits too long, Hussey may choose to go someplace else and "we don't want to lose him," Koed said.

Spofford agreed and said there are many good reasons why the town should consider keeping Hussey on board.

"From everything I've heard, Jim is doing a tremendous job and I'd like him to stay as long as he wants," he said. "We should encourage that."

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said when Hussey was appointed, the board had taken the initiative to make that appointment because there was an interim Town Manager as well. However, she reiterated this appointment will ultimately be Griffin's and selectmen will only be there to provide guidance.

Hussey, a 28-year veteran of the Boston Police Department, was hired as interim chief in the wake of a nine-month long controversy that had turned the police department upside-down involving two officers, who were placed on paid leave by former Town Manager Mark Haddad amid allegations of wrongdoing. The process was long and wrenching but through it all, the officers denied the allegations. Hussey put the men back on the job in time for the Fourth of July weekend.

In a telephone interview Wednesday, Hussey said he is "absolutely" interested in becoming the permanent police chief.

"This is a new challenge in my life," he said. "I've never worked for a town before. It's an opportunity to get into the roots of a community instead of being part of a big bureaucracy."

He described his roughly nine months in Cohasset as "a new and uplifting experience."

"I try to see the glass half full," he said. "Although there are challenges ahead – we have a great opportunity in the police department and community to move forward and make things better."

Shopping — Starting in February, the CEA will provide transportation to Stop and Shop Supermarket every first and third Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. The CEA will continue to provide transportation down town every Thursday at 9:30.

Due to a low interest in around town transportation on Monday mornings, the CEA will discontinue that trip. All other scheduled transportation will remain the same. As always this schedule can be modified to meet changing needs.

Seniors, have you been to the Derby Street Shops in Hingham? Would you have an interest in going? If yes, call the CEA no later than the day before you need transportation for regularly scheduled trips. If there is no one in the office to take your message, leave a message in the "general mail box," after you have dialed 781-383-9112. The information you give the CEA will help then it prepares the transportation list for its volunteer driver.

The Council on Elder Affairs is in need of volunteer van drivers. This is a commitment of approximately 3 hours a month. Call Martha Horsefield, Volunteer Coordinator, at 781-383-9112.

POLICE BRIEFS

Dog saved in ice rescue last Monday

The Cohasset Fire Department saved a dog that fell through the ice on Little Harbor last week.

Capt. James Gurry said a 9-1-1 call came in at 1:42 p.m., Monday (Jan. 24) from a homeowner on Beach Street that her dog had slipped through the ice.

Firefighters donned immersion suits and used an ice rescue sled to reach the animal that had been in the water roughly 45 minutes.

Gurry said the dog was about 200 feet off shore. He said time was of the essence and estimated the dog only had about 30 seconds left before it would have succumbed to the freezing water.

"We cut it that close," he said.

Firefighters Jack Hernan and Randy Bellanger, wearing immersion suits, went out on the sled and were able to pull the dog onboard. The sled was pulled back to shore by ropes.

Firefighter Robert Protrulis, hip deep in snow, carried the dog to the house. Sharon Leone, a paramedic who is also a veterinary technician, checked the dog over.

Gurry said the dog was treated later in a veterinarian's office where it did have seizures. But he said the owner has reported the dog is now doing fine.

"The resident was very pleased we were able to rescue the dog," he said.

Drainage pipe vandalism possible

Police Chief James Hussey said a neighborhood dispute over a drain pipe to a sump pump ended up in a call to police last week.

Hussey urged homeowners to contact the building commissioner, water department, or appropriate office at Town Hall when a dispute arises rather than take matters into their own hands."

Last week, an Atlantic Avenue resident reported that someone had stuffed the drainage pipe at the residence causing water to back up into the basement. The officer that went to the scene reported ice was stuck in the pipe but someone had also put sand in it.

Hussey said it looks as though drainage from the pipe was going out into the street causing floods and possibly someone who was upset about that may have blocked the pipe, causing a backup.

When this sort of thing happens the perpetrator could be criminally charged even though it may not have been his intent to cause any damage, Hussey said.

Improv Asylum brings its acclaimed antics to Quincy

Improv Asylum must have been saving the best for last. The acclaimed comedy troupe has given over 2,300 performances for some 500,000 people since opening its Boston theater six years ago. The award-winning company has a theater in New York's Times Square as well as a Los Angeles cast, and has been featured on the NESN and HBO cable channels. On Saturday night, Improv Asylum will gives its first-ever public performance on the South Shore as part of its new engagement at the Den at Fox & Hound Wood Grille and Tavern in Quincy. "We get lots of requests to perform in all kinds of places and we turn most of them down," explained Improv Asylum co-founder and co-owner Norm Laviolette by telephone last week. "What drew us to the Den was the space. I was skeptical, but the room has such charm that the minute I saw it, I realized we could definitely do a show there."

The show they will do will feature five improvisational actors, underscored by a keyboardist, in a revue that will be equal parts sketch comedy and on-the-spot improvisation.

"We're a cross between 'Saturday Night Live' and 'Whose Line Is It Anyway?,'" says sometime-performer Laviolette. "Just to be in our cast, you have to have a definite skill set. You have to be able to sing and dance. You also have to be able to hyper-listen, which is how improv artists focus on their fellow actors, You also need 'watchability,' the inner quality that makes any good performer worth watching."

Laviolette is quick to acknowledge that TV watching has been instrumental in building interest in improv. "People like Wayne Brady, Colin Mochrie and Ryan Stiles are truly top-level talent. Thanks to them and others, people finally have a reference point for improvisation. We have great people in our company, too, and that's what keeps our audiences coming back. What grabs them so much is the immediacy of the craft. What we do is very true and, hopefully, very funny."

(Improv Asylum will be at the Den at Fox & Hound Wood Grille and Tavern, 123 Sea Street, Quincy, February 5 and 19, and March 5 and 26. For tickets and information, call the Improv Asylum box office at 617-263-6887 or visit www.jmproductionspresents.com)

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

MORE THAN HEARING AT STAKE

It is widely recognized that persistent exposure to noise or noise at very high levels permanently damages hearing, but there is even more than hearing at stake. Regular exposure to noise can also cause sleep disturbances, discomfort, anxiety, depression, and headaches. It can also make psychiatric disorders worse. According to the World Health Organization, excessive noise is responsible for an increased risk of hypertension and heart disease, and a Dutch study once linked hypertension to living near an airport. Noise pollution in the workplace is a worldwide problem. Several studies have shown that workers who are exposed to noise are at higher risk for higher blood pressure. The conclusion? Wear hearing protection whenever noise is a factor.

We really can't emphasize it enough—protect your hearing! When irreversible damage has been done, however, and the path remaining is a hearing instrument, come to FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER for a comprehensive hearing evaluation by a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist. You'll be amazed at the hearing instruments available today and how they can enhance your hearing. We'll be glad to show you the different makes and models and advise you on which one would be of the most benefit to your individual needs.Located at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, you can reach us at 781-337-1144.

P.S. A University of Michigan study of auto plant workers found that blood pressure did not rise when workers wore hearing protection.

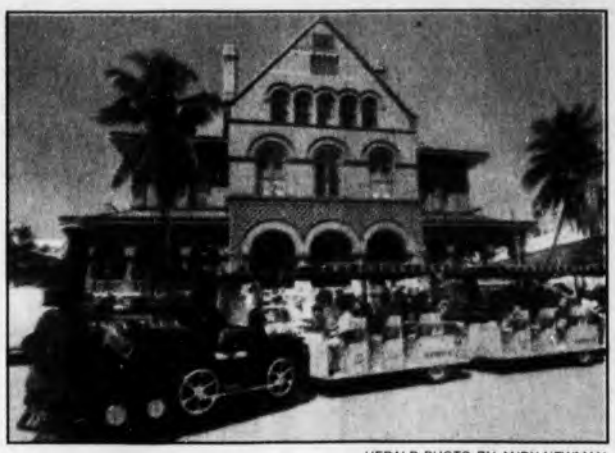
DESTINATIONS

Key to the kingdom

Go off the beaten track for a Conch-eye view of Florida's southernmost city

By FRAN GOLDEN
BOSTON HERALD TRAVEL EDITOR



KEY WEST, Fla. — CEO Kelly Croce Sorg described the new Pirate Soul museum here as Disney "with an edge." And the same can be said of Key West itself. It's Florida "with an edge." To begin to understand the funky, fabulous, anything-goes nature of the place, first-time visitors will want to go the tourist route and get their bearings on a Conch Train or Old Town Trolley tour, visit the house where Ernest Hemingway lived, have a drink at Sloppy Joe's (Hemingway's favorite bar) and touristy bars on lively Duval Street and enjoy the eccentric daily sunset celebration at Mallory Square. But when you return a second or third time you'll want to dig deeper. Get to know the local conches, as they call themselves. To check out the scene, I rented a bike and tooled around town. Here are some recommended discoveries.

THINGS TO SEE

The newest attraction would make Captain Kidd proud. Pirate Soul (524 Front St.) is the brainchild of Pat Croce, best-selling author and former minority owner of the 76ers. OK, so you're thinking Disney's Pirates of the Caribbean, and you're partially right. This museum does feature animatronics, interactive displays and new technologies such as creepy 3-D sound in its attempt to re-create the Golden Age of Piracy (1690-1730). But look in the cases and you'll see real treasures, most from Croce's personal collection, including one of only two Jolly Roger flags known to exist and the only authentic pirate chest in America. There are real weapons and pieces of eight, too. Admission is $12.95 adults, $6.95 kids. Be sure to check out the cool pirate-themed gift shop too.

The pretty red brick Custom House building on the waterfront had seen better times when it recently was revived as the Key West Museum of Art & History (281 Front St.). Here local artists shine in nice gallery space on the first floor and upstairs exhibits highlight Hemingway, pirates and other touches of Key West history. In March, a new exhibit will feature the work of folk artist Mario Sanchez. In July, a life-size bronze of Hemingway in fishing gear will be unveiled outside on the occasion of his 105th birthday. Admission is $7 adults, $5 kids, with a free audio tour (on which the museum's director notes the drama and joy of Key West life that make the city special).

When Hemingway first came to Key West in 1928 it was to buy a car. He bedded down at what now is known as Casa Antigua (314 Simonton St.). The author's car was delayed and he and wife Pauline ended up staying three weeks and falling in love with the town. The interior of the building later burned but has been partially restored. You can tour the large atrium garden and get a glimpse of the Hemingways' suite. To do this you have to enter the Caribbean gift shop known as Pelican Poop. Pay the clerk $2 and he'll take you out back and click on the audio tour. This is also the place where the awards are presented in the annual Hemingway short story competition.

A Conch Tour Train stops at the restored Key West Custom House, which now holds the new Key West Art & History Museum.

DINING

"There's nothing like a good Cuban," said the woman sharing a bench with me outside the Five Brothers Grocery (930 Southward St.) as we both dived into Cuban sandwiches, cold cuts on grilled bread with pickles ($4.25), and strong Cafe con Leche ($1 for a medium). And she was right. The best things about Blue Heaven (729 Thomas St.) are that you get to dine with the free-roaming indigenous chickens and cats, the banana pancakes and its interesting history. The building was once a brothel, and outside Hemingway officiated boxing matches in the '30s — apparently the author did not venture upstairs because, as one local put it, "Let's face it, he didn't have to pay for it." Eat in the yard or on the porch. Breakfast here is highly recommended. While I was munching the Rooster Special ($7.50 for eggs, grits, bacon and the banana pancakes) on the porch, I got to hear a street person below rant about John Hancock (the patriot, not the insurance company). It just added to the scene.

For a snack, locals skip Ben & Jerry's (although there is one in town) and go to Flamingo Crossing (1105 Duval St.). Homemade ice cream, gelato and various sorbets are on the menu. Enjoy your treat ($3.50 for two flavors) in the garden. A must-do is dinner at Mangoes (700 Duval St.), where owner Amy Culver-Alversa, who is from Nahant and worked at the Bostonian (now the Millennium Bostonian Hotel) among other Beantown venues, and chef Paul Orchard, who came here from P-Town, have created a casual place for serious foodies. Bobby Flay of Food Network fame featured the delicious passion yellowtail snapper sauteed with passion fruit, beurre blanc, toasted coconut and fresh mango ($26) on his show. The place to be seen is the outdoor patio (Hillary Clinton is among the restaurant's fans.) The friendly waiters are a great source of information on local happenings. Enjoy a mango mojito or mango pina colada, and remember, at Mangoes, "It's not just a fruit, it's a lifestyle." Check out the Cuban cuisine — as the southernmost U.S. city, Key West is actually closer to Havana than Miami — at El Mason de Pepe (at Mallory Square). There is historical memorabilia about the Cuban community on the walls, and $16.95 gets you a sample platter (Completa de Caballo Grande) with three meat dishes. I especially liked the ropa vieja (which translates to "old clothes"), a yummy shredded beef stew. Wash it down with a Corona.

NIGHTLIFE

Garden of Eden, above the Bull & Whistle (224 Duval St.), is Key West's clothing-optional bar. Yes, naked. Venture to the garden at the very top of the building and hope there are people there worth looking at. A favorite activity is getting your body painted. Be aware, photos are not allowed. A few blocks away from the busy Duval Street bar scene, and more likely to attract locals, is Green Parrot (601 Whitehead St.), an open-air tropical saloon opened in 1890. Darts, pool and pinball keep visitors well occupied. The wonderful jukebox features the blues. There's live music on weekends and on many weeknights, and there's no cover charge.

SHOPPING

There are numerous galleries in artsy Key West, but for something different check out Hands On (1206 Duval St.) where the art is wearable. The shop features owner and Emerson graduate Ellen Steininger's hand-woven creations as well as clothes art by other craftspeople, jewelry and gift items (such as nifty martini sets). Fast Buck Freddies (500 Duval St.) is probably the wildest department store you'll ever venture into. You can tell it's something special just by checking out the elaborate window displays. Here you'll find dresses for $40 next to ones for $200. There are high-fashion brands such as Lacoste and tropical brands like Tommy Bahama. The store also stocks decorative items like the kind you'd find in Pier 1. Bargain hunters also will want to check out the store's outlet, Half Buck Freddies (726 Caroline St.).

If you go ...

GETTING THERE: Key West is separated from the Florida mainland by a series of bridges. You can drive from Miami in about four hours. Cape Air (800-352-0714; www.flycapeair.com) flies small planes between Key West and Fort Lauderdale, Naples and Fort Myers.

STAYING THERE: The 37-room Key Lime Inn (725 Truman Ave.) is a quick walk from the main drag (Duval Street) and a casual place with a pleasing tropical ambience. Deluxe rooms come with patios or porches with plastic chairs where you can sit and listen to birds, roosters and organ music from a nearby church. There also are hammocks and swings on the grounds. Some of the buildings that make up the inn date to the 1800s. Continental breakfast, served poolside, is included in room rate, which this time of year runs $169 to $229 per night. For reservations, call 800-549-4430; www.keylimeinn.com.

GETTING AROUND: Parking is limited. A better option than a car for getting around town is to rent a bike ($8 per day or $13 for two days, plus $4 for a nightlight) at Moped Hospital (601 Truman Ave.). You can ride bikes on sidewalks everywhere in town except on busy Duval Street.

FOR MORE INFORMATION: Log on to www.flakeys.com, or call 800-527-8539.

Race for selectman seats is shaping up

Gary Vanderweil and Debbie Shadd pull papers this week

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With less than one week to go before the deadline to take out papers for this year's Town Election, the race for a seat on the Board of Selectmen has begun heating up. Currently, four contenders have taken out papers to fill the two open seats on the board, but what might happen in the coming week is anyone's guess.

Gary Vanderweil of Jerusalem Road would like to use his roughly 20 years of experience serving on the Sewer Commission as well as his professional engineering experience to help move the town forward as a selectman. He said over the past couple of weeks, he has been called and approached many times by residents who have urged him to run for a position on the board.

"Finally, I decided I should do it," he said, and pulled papers late Tuesday.

Debbie Shadd of Summer Street, a former member of the Advisory Committee, pulled papers Monday afternoon. A non-practicing lawyer, she and her husband Bill Grimm have been residents of the town since 1981.

Vanderweil is a 1958 graduate of Cohasset High School, and says he "knows the town quite well," because he's lived here so long. In addition, he said his many years of service on the Sewer Commission have given him a "good understanding of the people and the town's feelings on many issues, as well as the relationships between the boards and committees."

Vanderweil has run his own engineering business for many years and said he will bring good business practices and commonsense to the board's affairs. He said his engineering background has trained him to approach things rationally and strategically, and he hopes his calm approach will be able to help ease some of the discord he's noticed on the board. In addition, Vanderweil said "The development of sewers is at a critical point in town," and he believes with his sewer experience, he should be able to unify the Board of Selectmen and the Sewer Commission.

Vanderweil said his vision for the town includes three main points. First, he would like to preserve and enhance the character of the town. Second, he would like to encourage affordable ownership housing, which he said projects such as Avalon, Cedarmere, and the Cook Estate will not provide. He said there needs to be housing available for purchase for town employees such as members of the fire and police department, DPW staff, and teachers.

"When I graduated from Cohasset High School in 1958, I had people from all parts of the economic spectrum in my class," he said, which the town is continually losing. "It's not in the best interest of the town to continue on this way," and

Students make special favors for benefit dance

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For the past month, Deer Hill students have been pouring their hearts and souls into a very special art project. After school, sometimes three times per week, they have been making their way to Ann Berman's art room, to mold and paint ceramic hearts, which will be given as gifts for all who attend this year's annual Valentine's Fund Dance to benefit the homeless.

A creative black tie event, guests who attend the dance are asked to donate $20 at the door, and all proceeds will go to benefit Bread & Jams, Inc., a self-advocacy center and day shelter located in Harvard Square in Cambridge. As a thank you, those who attend will receive a one-of-a-kind ceramic heart, made by one of the Deer Hill students.

Peter Whitemore, one of the organizers of this year's Valentine's Fund Dance, said after hearing of the good deeds students in Berman's class have done before, such as knitting hats and delivering them to homeless shelters in the Boston area, he knew the two working together to create the hearts would be a perfect match. But with the large amount of guests expected to attend the benefit, to be held at Atlantica Feb. 19, students have been keeping busy.

Wanted to be a soldier

Peter Cogill's life is remembered

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Peter Cogill enlisted in the Army at 19.

It has been said there is a hero in all of us, but in reality only some are brave enough to risk it all on behalf of our country. It takes a special person to answer the call of duty and join the ranks of our armed forces, and Cohasset resident Peter Cogill answered that call gladly.

In July 1966, fulfilling his dream of one day becoming a soldier, Cogill enlisted in the army at just 19 years old. Leaving many friends and family behind, he bravely set off to serve in the Vietnam War, not knowing he would never return home to the town he loved.

Cogill was born on Jan. 8, 1947. He attended the Ripley Road School, Deer Hill School, and was a member of the Class of 1966 at Cohasset High School. While living at 71 Church St., he enjoyed landscaping for Tony Sestito.

But serving in the military was something he had always wanted to do, and he served well as a Private First Class. It seems the patriotic spirit that lived in Cogill was a family trait, as four of Cogill's brothers and one of his sisters also served during Vietnam.

Cogill completed basic training and volunteered to attend parachute training. He ultimately earned his jump wings and soon joined Able Company 326 Engineering Battalion, 101 Airborne Division in the Republic of Vietnam.

After two months in the country, Cogill was on patrol when he came against hostile enemy forces. On Feb. 25, 1967, while attempting to diffuse a mine, his young life was cut short when he was killed in action. Cogill was the second Cohasset man to die during Vietnam, and the first of three young men from the Cohasset High School Class

Friends group to focus on Wompatuck

Forms to help support park

By Jeff Cutler

Cohasset's Arne Gjesteby is in his element enjoying the fresh powdery snow on a recent Saturday at Wompatuck State Park. Gjesteby knows a lot about the sport, he started cross country skiing as a two-year-old in his native Norway.

Wompatuck State Park may be shared by Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate and Norwell but — with its more than 30 miles of biking, bridle and hiking trails — the 3,500-acre park attracts visitors from across the state and country.

With literally thousands of visitors using the park annually, park staff doesn't always know what may either please or trouble the different user groups. That's one of the main reasons Park Supervisor Steve Gammon developed the proposal for a "friends" group at Wompatuck.

"It should be made clear that a friends group is not an 'advisory board'," said Gammon. "Advisory groups are often detached from the solution. A friends group is part of the park and recognizes its own problems and develops solutions."

In this capacity, Gammon explained, the Friends will identify problems and challenges at the park and develop ways to solve to those issues collaboratively.

According to Bill Boles of the New England Mountain Bike Association (NEMBA), a group like Friends of Wompatuck, can generate support for a park by bringing together users, community members, and elected representatives from surrounding towns.

He feels the first step in establishing a successful group is getting people involved and letting people know they have a say in what happens at their local park.

Having been involved at Wompatuck and in NEMBA for years, Boles thinks the response locally will be positive.

"I would hope the community would enthusiastically embrace the group," he said. "Wompatuck State Park is a local treasure and we, its users, would be remiss in our responsibilities if we did nothing to maintain and improve it."

The park is currently managed and maintained by Gammon and three full-time staffers. The trails also get some necessary attention from volunteers directed in their efforts by the Wompatuck Trails Committee.

The Trails Committee has seen its membership grow to include equestrians, hikers and even a gentleman who enjoys dog sledding. While the Trails Committee has been scheduling about four trail days a year, it recognized that there were user groups that might benefit from improvements not being discussed at its meetings.

So Gammon suggested establishing the Friends of Wompatuck and Boles of the Mountain Bike Association agreed. Both felt it was time to look at the park from a community perspective.

To this end, Boles hopes the Friends will be made up of representatives from all of

SPED notice sent home to parents

The school department has cut nine special education aide positions, in an effort not only to decrease costs for the department, but bring in more services which will allow students with special education needs to remain in the classroom with their peers.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said a letter has been sent home to the parents of children who participate in the school's special education program from Director of Student Services Linda Gill, which explains the goals of the department moving forward and "hopefully puts people's minds at ease," she said, as there have been many questions voiced about the cut positions.

Walsh said the goal of the shift in the way the special education department is run, is to have less students being pulled out of the classroom and more needs being met in a co-teaching environment in the classroom. Walsh said the school department feels it has the teaching staff right now to be able to accomplish its goals, but the focus moving forward will be to add more positions.

Parent Advisory Council Chairman Sue Mavilia asked Walsh if parents will be given the opportunity to talk about planning for the future of the special education department, including concerns regarding individual placements for children. Walsh said any concerns about specific children should be directed toward the building principals who are more familiar with the circumstances of each child, and the programs which will best benefit the student.

Walsh added, to help further the discussion, Gill has assembled a group of between 12 to 15 people, including parents, regular education teachers as well as special education teachers, and administrators who will attend a special education workshop March 30.

School Financial Asst. steps down

School Financial Assistant Karen Park has stepped down from her position, effective Thursday, Feb. 17. Park came on board July 1 to replace former Business Manager Ivan Klimko, whose position was eliminated due to budget cuts.

Members of the School Committee as well as Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh praised Park for the great amount of work she has done in a short period of time. With a tough budget season already underway, School Committee member Jamie Williams said the school department will be "forever indebted" to Park for her service.

"This is best for her and the decision was not easy," said Walsh, adding it has been a great pleasure to work with Park and she will be sad to see her go. "We would not have the comfort level we do now (with the budget) without her help," she said.

MBTA update

MBTA liaisons Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan will attend the Tuesday, Feb. 15 Board of Selectmen's meeting to provide an update on their activities regarding the Greenbush line. All are welcome to attend.

School dept. vacancies

Openings for several school department positions have been advertised throughout the past few weeks and with an application deadline of Jan. 31, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said she is happy to report there have been a good number of responses for many of the positions.

So far, the position of Middle High School Principal has received 17 responses, which from talking to other districts with similar positions to fill, seems to be average, Walsh said. "It's a very strong group," of candidates, she added.

In addition, the position of Assistant Principal at the Middle High School has received 30 responses, and the opening for Director of Curriculum and Professional Development has received 14.

There have been nine responses for an English teacher at the High School level, and 11 responses for High School math teachers. There have been no responses for the French/.Spanish teaching position.

Walsh said a screening committee will soon be appointed to conduct interviews of the candidates. For more information, please contact the superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111.

Out-of-district tuitions weigh heavily on the school budget

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although figures are not set in stone, preliminary discussions suggest an override could be the only way to balance the fiscal year 2006 school budget. The school department says special education out of district tuition costs are a major contributing factor.

In light of a $517,775 increase in out of district tuitions — which the town is mandated to pay — Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh has presented a "needs-based budget" based on the new Strategic Planning five-year plan for the district, which asks for an 8.1 percent overall increase from FY05, which ends June 30. Walsh said when the out-of-district costs are taken into account, the school budget after those bills are considered would only increase by $463,622, or 3.8 percent.

Cohasset does receive some help in paying its out-of-district tuition costs, through the state's "circuit breaker" funding program, which will award the town $68,000 for FY06, a figure that is based on the previous year's actual out-of-district special education costs.

The total FY06 special education budget — which includes both in house and out-of-district services — is a little more than $3 million. It is anticipated in FY06, the cost for out-of-district tuitions alone will be roughly $1,352,305. Walsh anticipates based on this year's special education costs, the town will receive $337,488 in circuit breaker funding next year, to be factored into the FY07 budget.

The state adopted a "circuit-breaker" formula in June 2003, to help fund out-of-district special education costs for cities and towns. The previous system, called "50/50," had the town and state splitting the tuition cost paid for private residential special education placements. Under the circuit breaker system, the state refunds a higher percentage of money, up to 75 percent, to school districts whose educational costs exceed four times the state average foundation budget, or $32,000. Walsh said the $32,000 is charged to the school, similar to a deductible.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley has presented a balanced budget which includes a $12,269,000 allocation for the schools. But factoring in offsets — including circuit breaker money, Medicaid reimbursement, gate receipts from athletic events, grants, and the revenue from starting full-day kindergarten and preschool programs, which are estimated to total $1,040,695 — the school department anticipates it will need $13,081,447, an increase of $981,397 over last year.

School Committee Chairman Rick Shea said the discussion that must now take place is deciding whether the increase in special education out-of-district costs should affect the in-district program and whether the schools should ask the town to help share the cost.

"This is a town-wide obligation, not just the schools," he said. Shea pointed out there are often significant medical obligations with some special education students, and those are costs that must be paid.

"But it doesn't make sense to have a severely special needs student come into the district and suddenly we have to let a third grade teacher go," he said.

Shea said in addition, it might make sense for the town to petition the Legislature, to help correct some of the inequities which can currently take place as a result of the way the law is written.

A Cohasset resident has recently become the legal guardian of two children who will require out-of-district placement and it is estimated the town will be required to pay $150,000 for each. The children have never lived in town and don't plan on living in town, but Walsh said because their legal guardian is a Cohasset resident, the town is responsible for paying their tuition. "Wherever the students are by April 1," determines which district is responsible for paying the out of district tuition, she said. Walsh added there is an ever-present possibility that a new child who will require out of district placement could move to town.

Salary commitments

Special education costs, while expensive, only make up roughly 10 percent of the school department budget. It is the salary commitments for employees, which at $9,311,814, or 71 percent of the budget, provide an even bigger challenge.

Walsh said the department is currently in the process of negotiating the collective bargaining agreement with the teachers union. "The contract ends in June," Walsh said, but at this point in the process, she said a zero percent salary increase has been factored in the budget for teachers. Administrators will receive a salary increase this year, as they took a zero percent increase last year.

"This is a town-wide obligation, not just the schools."
— School Committee Chairman Rick Shea

When asked by School Committee Jamie Williams whether it is likely teachers will take a zero percent salary increase this year, Walsh said "It is likely to happen, although we have no settlement right now. People do realize this is an extraordinary year."

During the budget summit held Wednesday, Feb. 2, members of the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee asked Walsh for some of the specifics regarding teacher salaries. Because salaries do make up such a large portion of the school budget, coming up with a firm number could help the department move forward in terms of getting a handle on the costs it will be expected to pay.

Contracts are negotiated for three years at a time, and since negotiations are underway and depending on the settlement reached, it not clear whether even without a contractual salary increase in year one, the money could be made up in the following two years. In addition, Walsh said many teachers will still receive step increases and column changes, which means those who qualify will see an increase in their paychecks, which affects the bottom line of the school budget.

School Financial Assistant Karen Park said the schools use a payroll service to generate checks, and currently, the schools do not know what the actual payments for employees are. She said because one employee may receive a salary and another might be paid with a grant, there is no way of knowing how much employees are receiving. Park said there is one person who inputs the salary figures provided by the payroll company into a computer program which is then able to provide the year-to-date actuals. However, she said because there are more than 200 employees in the school system, and only one person to input the numbers, the figures are roughly two months behind.

Advisory Committee member Vivien Bobo asked whether the schools could request the payroll company send the numbers of money paid-to-date for salaries, which would give the department solid numbers to work with. Selectman Rob Spofford said if salaries are paid every two weeks at the same rate, it should be easy to figure out the amount of money being paid for a good portion of the employees.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said every year, a budget has been presented to the town, and wondered "How has it all of a sudden become not accurate?"

Walsh, who came on board last summer, said she could not respond to that. "Nor would I if I could," she said. But Walsh did say the budgetary trouble is not the result of any mis-management or misuse of funds.

Sullivan then asked whether the school department can go back into the budgets for the 2002, 2003, and 2004 fiscal years and try to figure out where things went wrong.

"I'd just rather move forward," said Walsh, adding there were simply some numbers in the past which had to be guessed.

Spofford said before the school department can move forward with the FY06 budget, it is important to get a handle on the FY05 budget.

However, Walsh said "FY05 is still a mystery, and we won't know until the books are closed," but the school department is taking measures to help increase revenue to offset costs. When asked by Sullivan what kind of an impact the additional revenue will have on the budget, Walsh said "I can't give you a number."

Ambulance fee hike accepted

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

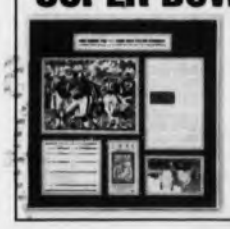
Fiscal year 2006 is going to be a tough budget season and various town departments are working to implement programs which will increase revenue and boost the bottom line. At the fire department, Chief Roger Lincoln said increasing ambulance fees to reflect charges set by other surrounding communities could provide the added cushion Cohasset needs.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley has been working with Lincoln to set the new rates. He explained at the beginning of each year, Medicare announces the new rates towns can charge for ambulance service, and towns decide what their rates will be, based on that information.

The fire department does not have any administrative assistance in its office, and therefore uses Comstar Ambulance Billing and Collection service to handle the finances. Comstar suggested the increase, which would raise Cohasset's fees by 6 percent above the Medicare rates, yielding an additional $30,000 for the town annually. Last year, Lincoln said ambulance fees brought the town roughly $250,000 in revenue.

A memo sent from Rick Martin of Comstar to the town explains setting the town's ambulance rate above the Medicare rates does not impact Medicare patients. "Medicare will adjust to the actual allowed amount in effect at the time. Medicare patients are only responsible for 20 percent of the Medicare allowed amount," it states. In addition, the memo states patients covered by HMOs will find in most cases they are covered in full.

Buckley explained Medicare has "allowable rates for medical procedures," but towns are allowed to charge 30 percent more than that rate to make up the cost incurred for the transport. Lincoln said compared to other towns, Cohasset is currently "below what other people are charging," and an increase makes sense. The allowable charge for an Advanced Life Support emergency transport would be roughly $347, but with the increase in fees, that same call would cost $451.



The allowable charge for an Advanced Life Support emergency transport would be roughly $347, but with the increase in fees, that same call would cost $451.

Cohasset bills according to rates set for Advanced Life Support as it provides its own paramedic services. Lincoln said 70 percent of the calls the department answers are ALS calls. Lincoln said before the switch to paramedics, when calls came in, the department would end up transporting many patients to the hospital who needed advanced life support. With paramedics on staff, "Now, we give help on the way," he said.

The movement toward offering ALS service began in 1998, when then Town Manager Mark Haddad negotiated with the fire department union to have the next eight people hired be trained paramedics. The goal was to bring the number of paramedics on the town payroll up to eight, to help ensure paramedics are on every shift.

Having paramedics on staff allows the department to provide more advanced treatment. Without ALS, a heart-attack victim, for example, would have to endure a 20-minute ride to South Shore Hospital before they were treated with life-saving drugs. Paramedics are able to administer those drugs, as well as employ a heart defibrillator.

Selectmen voted to OK the proposed ambulance fee increase last week.

Race for selectman seats is shaping up

he would like to help restore the balance of economic diversity.

In addition, Vanderweil said his third goal is to work toward fiscal stability and controlled tax rates, which as a citizen, is of great importance to him.

Shadd has seen her three children through the school system, and was very involved with many different aspects of the schools along the way.

Shadd has served as President of the PSO, was a member of the CMHS school council from 2000 to 2004, and was involved when the schools were going through the accreditation process. Currently, one of her children is off at college, and the other two are in high school.

In addition to her experience with the schools, Shadd also served on the Advisory Committee from 1997 to 2003, and even served as Vice Chairman for a time. She has also been a longtime Director of the Cohasset Conservation Trust.

"I've been off the Advisory Committee for a couple of years, and I missed being involved with the issues," she said, adding it was nice to have a break, and now she is ready to get back into serving. "I look forward to working with other boards and the citizens of the town," she said.

Shadd said she greatly enjoys working on policy issues, and she gained much experience with policy during her time on the Advisory Committee. She said she realizes the challenges ahead and said she looks forward to "making progress and resolving some of the issues we're facing right now."

Shadd said she isn't running with any particular agenda in mind. "All the issues at the forefront are important and I'd like to continue working in a positive way to move forward," she said. The town is currently in a unique position with a new set of people in the top positions, and Shadd said between the new town manager, superintendent, and police chief, "There's a lot of room to start fresh. It's a great time for the town."

Roger Hill of Highland Avenue pulled papers roughly two weeks ago, and said with the other candidates that have come forward since then, he doesn't think he'll be turning his papers in. "I'm very happy on the Advisory Committee," he said, but had gone ahead with plans to run for office based on the fear the race might be uncontested.

Hill has run for the Board of Selectmen twice in the past. Three years ago, he ran against Selectman Ronnie McMorris, who recently announced she will not be running for reelection, as well as Selectman Fred Koed, who pulled papers to retain his seat last Friday. Hill said during that election, he came within roughly 14 votes of Koed and 26 of McMorris.

The following year, Hill ran against Selectman Michael Sullivan for a single seat on the board, and came in second. Following the election, Hill joined the Advisory Committee where he has been for the past three years.

In other election news, Pamela Wilson of North Main Street is still the only candidate who has pulled papers for the one year remaining of Chartis Tebbetts' term. Tebbetts recently resigned from the School Committee.

Nomination papers for the Annual Town Election for 2005 are available at the Town Clerk's Office. The last day to take out nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 17. In order to hold an elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. Please note that you are not running for office until you take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies your signatures.

Vietnam took a heavy toll on the town, as eight men were killed, including Peter J. Albiani, Jr., Allen F. Keating, William C. Laidlaw, John Paul Lyon, Edward R. Maree, Craig M. Simeone, and Dennis J. Reardon. Cohasset lost the same number of soldiers during World War II. The worst eight months of Vietnam were in 1969, when the town lost five men, four at six-week intervals.

For his service in the war, Cogill was honored with many military awards including the Bronze Star Medal "V" for valor, the Purple Heart medal, the Military Merit medal, the National Defense medal, the Vietnam Service medal, the Vietnam Campaign medal, a parachutist badge, a combat infantry badge, and numerous other campaign and unit awards.

To ensure his memory is never forgotten, a memorial square has been dedicated in his honor, which residents drive by every day. Located in a fitting spot, Cogill's memorial square can be found at the intersection of Church and Doane Streets in the Beechwood area of town, just down the street from his family home.

Full-day kindergarten plan raises academic questions

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school department has floated starting an optional, full-day tuition based kindergarten program as a way to provide more educational opportunity for youngsters and increase revenue. Although a formal vote has not been taken to implement the program, many questions have been raised since its proposal, including whether students who do not participate will be at an academic disadvantage from their participating peers.

At a Feb. 2 budget summit with the Advisory Committee, Board of Selectmen, and School Committee, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh discussed the possibility of offering full-day kindergarten beginning this fall. She said the state requires every town to provide a half-day kindergarten program and that will not change.

"The option is adding an additional half-day," she said, adding parents have been "most supportive" of the concept.

"I'm not going to roll the dice with my kids."
— Pat Waters, Advisory Committee

Students, who attend the full-day program would be charged roughly $1,800 each per year, while students who attend the half-day program will not be charged. Walsh said there would be money available to offer a sliding fee scale for families that cannot afford the full tuition cost. She said every family will have the option to enroll their child in either program, and would make the choice that best suits their family situation.

Advisory Committee member Pat Waters said he has a child, who will be entering kindergarten this fall. He said in his opinion if a full-day program is offered — making the choice to not enroll his child and possibly put the student at a disadvantage — would not be an option. "I'm not going to roll the dice with my kids," he said, adding he didn't understand how the public school district could offer such a program, but not fund it. "You're asking half a class of a kindergarten class to subsidize the school budget and it's not right," he said.

Waters added, if the program is intended to serve more as a revenue producer than as an enhancement to education, "Don't call it full-day kindergarten (to guilt parents into wanting to enroll their children)."

However, Walsh reiterated the program is optional and today many children have been in school full-time since they were 2-1/2 or 3 years old and are ready to be in kindergarten on a full-time basis. The school district would like to be able to provide that opportunity, she said.

Advisory Committee member Susan Kent said while the implementation of full-day kindergarten is something she supports in concept, "We have a covenant with these people" meaning the parents of kindergarten students. In her opinion, Kent said the town should avoid charging for what she feels are services a public school system should automatically provide.

Kent agreed with Waters and said some parents might feel if their child isn't participating in the full-day kindergarten program for whatever reason, he or she might be at a disadvantage from those who are.

Walsh said she has worked in other school districts which have full-day kindergarten programs and she has seen a number of parents, who wish to keep their children at home and would much prefer serving as the child's teacher for the second half of the day. By making it an option for children to stay and continue their lessons for a full day, those parents, who wish to keep their children home may do so, she said.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said his wife Jackie often takes care of their grandson during the school year, and he said the both his grandson and Jackie's lives are enriched by spending time together learning. In his view, they would much prefer having the option to keep the grandson with them for the second half of the day.

Survey shows support for full-day kindergarten

A full-day kindergarten feasibility task force, established in the spring of 2003, has been working hard to determine whether full day kindergarten is an option, and what kinds of financial benefits it could have. Members of the task force included Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan, Curriculum Coordinator Ruth Fennessey, Osgood Adjustment Counselor Bob LeCount, as well as parents, kindergarten teachers, preschool teachers, and special education teachers.

The group developed and distributed a district survey to collect input regarding whether residents would like to see full-day kindergarten implemented in Cohasset. Surveys were distributed to parents of Deer Hill and Osgood students, as well as the local preschools.

Sheehan presented the findings of the surveys to the School Committee in December, and said roughly 159 surveys — or 20 percent —were returned of approximately 475 distributed at Osgood, 375 at Deer Hill and from 25 to 50 at local preschools. Roughly 52 percent of parents, who responded, said they would enroll their child in a tuition-based full-day program, while 30 percent said they would not enroll their child. Seven percent were unsure, and 7 percent reported enrollment was not applicable.

The task force report states research has shown children have greater academic and social success in school by participating in full-day kindergarten programs, and that full-day kindergarten children perform better than half-day kindergarten children. It also states children are better prepared to make the transition to first grade, and that children score higher on achievement tests if they are enrolled in full-day kindergarten programs.

The task force also examined data relative to full-day programs across the state and found 55 percent of Massachusetts school districts offer full-day kindergarten. However, space and fiscal resources have been the top two barriers to implementing programs. In fiscal year 2004, 71 percent of districts starting new programs were charging parents a tuition ranging from $1,265 to $3,700 per year for the second half of the day.

Dog succumbs to icy waters

Second canine to require rescue

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Last week, there was a happy ending to the story about a local dog that fell through the ice on Little Harbor.

But this week, there is sad news to report. A different dog that wandered out onto the ice at roughly the same spot, fell through and succumbed to the icy waters of Little Harbor despite the fire department's efforts to save it last Friday morning (Feb. 4).

Fire Capt. Robert Silvia said the ice rescue sled kept breaking through the ice off Beach Street impeding efforts to reach the barking dog, which he described as a mixed breed weighing about 35-40 pounds.

Silvia explained two firefighters in immersion suits worked with the sled and a boat, which they borrowed from the area, to try and reach the dog.

He explained with the snow cover, Little Harbor and the yards that back onto it all look the same. But with temperatures above freezing, the ice under the snow on the water's surface got very thin.

"Two weeks ago we were able to put a sled on it," Silvia said about the Jan. 24 dog rescue. "But that wasn't the case last week."

"Two weeks ago we were able to put a sled on it. But that wasn't the case last week."
— Fire Capt. Robert Silvia

Silvia said he was concerned about the firefighters, Frank Mahoney and Bob Protulis, trying to rescue the dog.

"Anytime you put guys in the water there's a danger to say the very least," he said, explaining the two men were tethered to shore.

He also explained that animals, like people, can succumb to hypothermia.

The veterinarian treating the yellow lab saved two weeks ago was pleased with the outcome because a lot of times when the core temperature drops, the animal does not survive, Silvia explained. According to Paulina Cowen, the lab's owner, her dog was having violent seizures by the time she got it to the Hingham Animal Hospital. The veterinarian and his staff worked on the dog for two hours and "pulled a miracle and saved her," Cowen stated in a thank you letter-to-the-editor this week to the fire department and veterinarian.

The lab had been in the water for 45 minutes or more. Firefighters estimated it had only about 30 seconds left before it would have succumbed to the freezing water.

Last week, the mixed-breed dog died just as the firefighters reached it.

Silvia said there have been reports of kids on the ice in the cove in the harbor, which he noted is really disturbing because salt and tidal flows make it even more likely the ice is unsafe.

"This is a lesson for everyone," he said. "The ice looks safe enough, but it isn't."

Water quality problem solved

TTHMS drop to acceptable level

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It has been roughly one month since members of the Water Commission informed residents the town had violated a water quality standard, and had exceeded the maximum contaminant level of 80 parts per billion for drinking water for Total Trihalomethanes, or TTHMs. Fortunately, quick action and collaboration has solved the problem.

"The key is running the plant 24 hours a day," said Chairman of the Water Commission John McNabb, which will keep water flowing, thereby reducing TTHM levels. TTHMs are formed when chlorine mixes with organic matter, and by keeping the water continually in motion, chlorine has less opportunity to react with the organic matter in the system. Although there is no immediate risk from drinking water with elevated levels of TTHMs, it is a known carcinogen, that if ingested over many years can cause damage to the liver, kidneys, and central nervous system, and may increase the risk of cancer.

McNabb said when the department found its average over the last year was in the range of 100 parts per billion, it immediately began taking action to correct the problem. By first changing the coagulant used during the treatment process, test results from early January showed levels had dropped from 96 ppb, as the department reported in December, to 80 ppb. Levels have continued to drop and were recently as low as 71 ppb.

At weekly Water Department meetings, McNabb, as well as Commissioners Glenn Pratt and Nathaniel Palmer, have worked closely with the department's engineering consultants from Tutela Engineering Associates, Inc., Weston & Sampson, and Norfolk Ram, as well as American Water, which operates and maintains the Water Department for the town, to solve the problem. In addition, the department has been in consultation with two national TTHM experts, Tim O'Brien of American Water and Dr. David Reckhow of UMass Amherst, who have offered valuable advice.

McNabb said the department has already completed an eight day 24-hour operation trial run at the water treatment plant, during which time tests were conducted three times per day. The end result showed levels had been reduced by an additional roughly 35 percent, or around 44 ppb.

"The key is running the plant 24 hours a day."
— John McNabb, Water Commission

McNabb said by being able to operate the plant for 24-hours per day, instead of the roughly eight hours during which it is currently operating, TTHMs will be reduced and the continual flow of fresh water through the system will also improve taste and odor for customers. However, operating the plant constantly will require additional staff, and there will be some planning necessary before it becomes a reality. In the future, McNabb said the department will be looking into purchasing instrumentation which would allow the plant to run unmanned part-time.

Other steps to ensure the town will continue to receive high quality drinking water include moving the pre-chlorination point to after the filter, and installing baffles in the finished clearwell at the plant by the end of March. A baffle is a barrier in the clearwell (or tank) that can effect a maze for the water to follow. This will ensure when chlorine is injected at a certain point, it will have time to dissolve in the water, thereby reducing the ability of the chlorine to create TTHMs. In addition, by the end of June the department hopes to replace the filter media, to increase the removal of organic matter, which will also help further reduce TTHM levels.

All water systems use chlorine to disinfect their water, and McNabb pointed out chlorine is a very important cleansing agent which is essential to public health, but the challenge is to use it in balance. "You can't take it out or you'll have a much worse problem," he said, as untreated water in other countries has in some cases caused people to die of bacterial infections. He said it is a constant balancing act to reduce the contact time chlorine has with the water, while still keeping within the required contact time to kill bacteria.

Compliance with the TTHM standard is based on the average of four quarterly samples. McNabb said as a result, even though the problem has been solved, he is anticipating the town will still be in violation at the end of the first quarter, as previous readings will be factored in. However, he said the department expects to reach compliance for the second quarter, and to meet the standards consistently in the future.

Cohasset's water supply includes the Aaron River Reservoir and Lily Pond, and the Water Department has been working since early 2003 to meet the 80 ppb standard. However, improvements at the plant did not take effect soon enough in 2004 to reduce the running annual average. Testing for TTHMs is a regulation that did not apply to the town prior to 2004. McNabb said previously, only large cities with a population of more than 10,000 residents were required to test.

The Water Department will send out a notice to all customers very soon with an update on the developments at the plant, but in the meantime, there is information available on the department's Web site at www.cohassetwater.org. The department encourages any residents with health related questions to seek advice from their physician.

Unsightly Rosano Triangle could undergo transformation

Office-residence gets zoning OK

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

FILE PHOTO

The Zoning Board of Appeals has set the stage for a professional office/residence where the mountain of loam now sits at 3A and lower King Street.

This is one landmark whose pending demise its owner is even lauding.

A recent Zoning Board of Appeals decision could translate into the end of the notorious 27,000-square-foot "Rosano Triangle" known for its unsightly mountain of loam and storage of landscape materials at the corner of Route 3A and lower King Street.

Even its owner, Joseph Rosano, says he's embarrassed to say he owns the parcel he readily describes as an "eyesore and junkyard for earth material" which sits at the end of a residential street.

"Who wants to live next to that?" he asked, although some neighbors argue he has done little to clean up the existing site.

But it hasn't been for lack of effort on Rosano's part to transform the construction storage site into an aesthetically pleasing office-home.

In the past five years alone, Joseph Rosano has twice before applied for special permits and variances to transform the site that haven't passed muster. (Its current non-residential use predates zoning and is therefore grandfathered.)

According to the ZBA decision filed this week, here's the history of attempts to rezone the site:

- 1956 — variance denied having a business in a residential district;
- 1978 — rezoning denied at the annual Town Meeting, from the residential district to the highway business district;
- 1992 — variances denied to allow a building with a doctor's office and single apartment. While the doctor's office was granted via a special permit, no variance was granted;
- 2000 — variances and special permits denied for two one-bedroom apartments and an automobile sales office
- 2003 — variances and special permits denied for a two-story professional building containing two residential apartments.

This week, the ZBA granted Special Permits with conditions to allow the construction of a professional office and single residential unit at the site, housed in a single structure. The plans are reduced in scope from the 2000 and 2003 applications and meet parking setback requirements. They also require the first floor be used as a medical and/or professional office and the second floor as a single residential apartment. Cedar trees will be planted to provide 100 percent screening from residences; signage will conform with the bylaw; and the site will include 19 parking spaces.

ZBA Chairman Woody Chittick explained a home-office use is permitted in a residential district; the only difference here being the professional, who has the office, may not be the same person who resides in the residential unit.

The ZBA decision states the board concluded the proposed non-conforming uses of the premises as a combined professional office building and single-unit residence is far less detrimental to the neighborhood, and to the town as a whole, than is continuation of the existing non-conforming use.

Chittick said while the decision – a copy of which has been filed with the Town Clerk and Planning Board — may not please every neighbor, he hopes Rosano does "an A-1 job" fixing the area up.

Rosano said he is going to model the structure after the antique colonial at the corner of Beach Street and Highland Avenue, which is in an historic district.

Rosano said he hopes to start work on the site in the spring. There are other issues to be resolved, including a Board of Health approval for a septic system upgrade.

"This is the best use anyone can make of that site without a doubt," he said.

Friends group to focus on Wompatuck

Wompatuck's user groups. This includes anyone who comes through the gates at the park, not just residents from Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell and Scituate.

Boles, who is from Brockton, believes the Friends' members will be drawn from "the diverse groups that use Wompatuck State Park, although local representation from the surrounding towns will be encouraged."

Steve Cobble is also a NEMBA member and is acting as a liaison between Friends and the mountain bike community. He has a strong feeling that this group will be a benefit to Wompatuck and all its users. As a member of Blue Hills Trail Watch and Bike Quincy, Cobble has seen other groups make a positive difference in community recreation.

Cobble has been the organizer for the initial meetings of the Friends and he's excited about the prospect of cultivating more people's input.

"Hopefully the Friends group will have support from all users so we can have a diverse set of ideas and opinions," said Cobble. "As far as NEMBA is concerned, we are not there to take away or relieve them in any way of the ongoing trail maintenance projects. If anything, the Friends would be a community voice that would remind people who has been doing this work."

Cobble is from Quincy and noted people from all over the region use the park and want to be involved.

"So far we've got people from Marshfield, Plympton, Carver, Brockton, Quincy, Hopkinton, Acton, Hull, and just about every South Shore town," he said. "Members are mostly involved because they enjoy the park in one way or another."

Alice Mainville is from Amesbury and hopes the Friends will be successful for both users and the area.

"Groups like Friends of Wompatuck create a win/win situation," she said. "They are committed to the preservation of open space which in turn provides the public with a valuable resource for outdoor recreation. There is no cost to the government or the taxpayer. Without groups like Friends, cities and towns may otherwise not be able to afford to provide this service."

Mainville's perspective on cost savings comes from her experience as a former municipal councilor. And her comments bring up a point Wompatuck users might not know — monies collected by the park can end up in different coffers.

For example, fees collected at Wompatuck for camping or even for parking will go right to the state. But, if someone makes a donation to the park, it stays at Wompatuck and is used for the betterment of its facilities. It hasn't been determined yet if the Friends will try and generate its own funds to be earmarked for park improvements, but if so, those monies should remain at Wompatuck.

Gammon said he thinks the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), whose jurisdiction includes state parks, will charge fees as it sees fit and that money goes back into the state government. But, donations to the park's conservation trust fund can be used for Wompatuck as well as any funds raised by the Friends.

Fixing gates and improving park buildings may fall under the umbrella of the state's responsibilities, but building bridges and adjusting trail routes takes time and money. To generate some of this income, the Friends has already reached out to local businesses.

Community voice

Jim Quinn, owner of the Bicycle Link in Weymouth, has been riding in Wompatuck for decades and his shop hosts a road bike racing series in the park during the summer. The attention and assistance of park staff and various users has made his events quite popular. For this reason, Quinn recognizes the importance of a community voice within Wompatuck.

A jogger runs past the sign directing visitors to Wompatuck State Park, whose grounds are shared with Hingham, Scituate, Cohasset and Norwell.

"As the owner of a business that readily recommends Wompatuck State Park to many of its customers, I feel that I have an obligation to belong to the Friends of Wompatuck," said Quinn. "As a bicyclist, I never forget how lucky we are to have the park for the road riding and off-road riding that we do. I'm sure that I speak for all the local cycling clubs."

Jim Dillon of Scituate echoes the hope for positive community involvement, although he's not sure the Friends will draw a wide audience.

"I don't think that (people will) care, unless they use the park, and care what goes on there," said Dillon. "The last meeting we had several neighbors that had concerns about what was going on near the South Pleasant Street gate and if that area was going to be cleaned up. We all listened, we all now know what's up, we all know what's going to be done and why. We were all winners."

Boles of the Mountain Bike Association hopes that the Friends will add to this winning feeling.

"I hope the park that I enjoy so much will improve as time goes on," said Boles. "And that it will continue to provide an unspoiled natural outlet where the area's people can enjoy an outdoor experience."

Anyone is welcome at the Friends meetings, whether they use Wompatuck once a year, seasonally or every day.

"Wompatuck is not just trees, ponds, wildlife and fresh air," said Gammon, the park supervisor. "Wompatuck is fun, fitness, memories, work, history and more."

To get involved in the Friends of Wompatuck, interested people may show up at a meeting and/or sign up for the mailing list at the Visitor Center.

The next meeting of the Friends of Wompatuck is set for Tuesday, Feb. 15 at 7:30p.m. at the Wompatuck Visitor Center. If you have questions about any issue involving Wompatuck or want more details on the Friends of Wompatuck, call Steve Gammon at 781-749-7160.

Friends of Wompatuck to meet

The Friends of Wompatuck State Park will hold its monthly meeting on Tuesday Feb 15 at 7:30 p.m. at the Mason A. Foley Visitor Center. The F.O.W. group is a volunteer citizen's organization dedicated to improving the park. The group is currently working on the final draft of its mission statement. Officers will be elected shortly. All interested citizens are invited to join the group. Come help preserve, protect, and improve Wompatuck. For further information contact Steve Gammons at 781-749-7160

CLEAN OUT YOUR ATTIC!

Cohasset's own "Lord and Ladies" has begun planning for a giant Estate Sale to be held on Saturday, May 14 to benefit Our World, Children's Global Discovery Museum. So start cleaning out those attics, garages and closets! Donations of all types of furniture, mirrors and pictures, rugs, lamps, tableware, table linens, books and brick-a-brack are being sought. Proceeds generated from this Estate

Sale will go towards the installation of the Museum's new Bio-Diversity exhibit slated to open September 2005. Please drop off your treasures at Our World on Wednesday's from 4-6 p.m. and Thursday's from 12-2 p.m., or please call the Museum's Director, Michele Dupuis, at 781-383-3198 to arrange a specific drop-off time. Your donation is tax-deductible.

SEMESTER AT SEA

Congratulations to Kevin Sullivan, a junior at Hamilton College, who is enrolled in the SEA Semester program at Sea Education Association in Woods Hole. Kevin successfully completed the Sea Semester's six-week shore component earning academic credit for study in oceanography, nautical science, and maritime studies.

At the program's Woods Hole campus, Kevin developed a research project that will be tested and completed aboard SEA's 134' sailing school vessel the Robert C. Seamans.

Kevin will be sailing from Papeete, Tahiti, with a port call in Nuku Hiva, Marquesas and a final destination of Honolulu, a journey of approximately 4,000 nautical miles and six weeks at sea. Please let us know the outcome of this experience Kevin.

ST. SEBASTIAN'S HONORS

The following students were named to the St. Sebastian's School Honor Roll for the second quarter of 2004-2005. Paul Cotter, grade 12 ,received Honors w/ Distinction. Paul's parents are Dr. Paul & Margaret Cotter. Dominic Jancaterino, grade 8, also received Honors w/Distinction. Domenic's parents are Dr. Jon & Patricia Jancaterino. Super job to both of you.

DEAN'S LIST

The University of Vermont recently recognized Brenna E. O'Donnell, a freshman communication science major in the College of Arts & Sciences for her work.

Brenna made the dean's list with a grade-point averages of 3.0 or better and ranked in the top 20 percent of her classes. Great work.

SECOND PLACE

An error was made in last week's column. Rebecca Dickenson actually won second place in the Song and Aria Competition for the Junior Division at the Conservatory, not third place. Sorry about this error Rebecca, keep up the wonderful singing.

GIRL'S TRAVEL HOOP

Congratulations go out to our fifth-grade girl's travel basketball team. They're working hard this season, competing in the very challenging South Shore Girl's Basketball League. Keep up the good work! Team members include: Stephanie Brierley, Abby Brown, Allie Farren, Olivia Franklin, Elizabeth Hagearty, Whitney Jaffe, Elly Leong, Scarlett McQuade, Jen Mullin, Kayla Orner, Isabel Robinson, Anna Seraikas, Elisa Tedeschi, and Julia Thompson.

ANNIE AUDITIONS

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will hold auditions for one of the world's best-loved musicals "Annie" directed by Jessica McDonald, Music Direction by Robert Kniffen. Girls ages 6-13 and teen girls and boys are welcome to audition on Tuesday, Feb. 15 from 6:30-9p.m. Adult men and women, ages 20 and up, are invited to audition on Wednesday, Feb. 16 from 7-10p.m. Please prepare 12 bars of an upbeat song, preferably from the show

The following roles are available: Annie: 10-13 years old (this part may be double cast), 6 Orphan Girls: ages 6-12, Daddy Warbucks: 40's, Miss Hannigan: 40-50, Lilly: 20-30, Rooster: 30 and up, Grace Farrell: 20-30, Bert Healy: 30 and up. There are also many various roles for maids, butlers, secretaries, cabinet members and Hooverittes. Some of these roles can be played by teens.

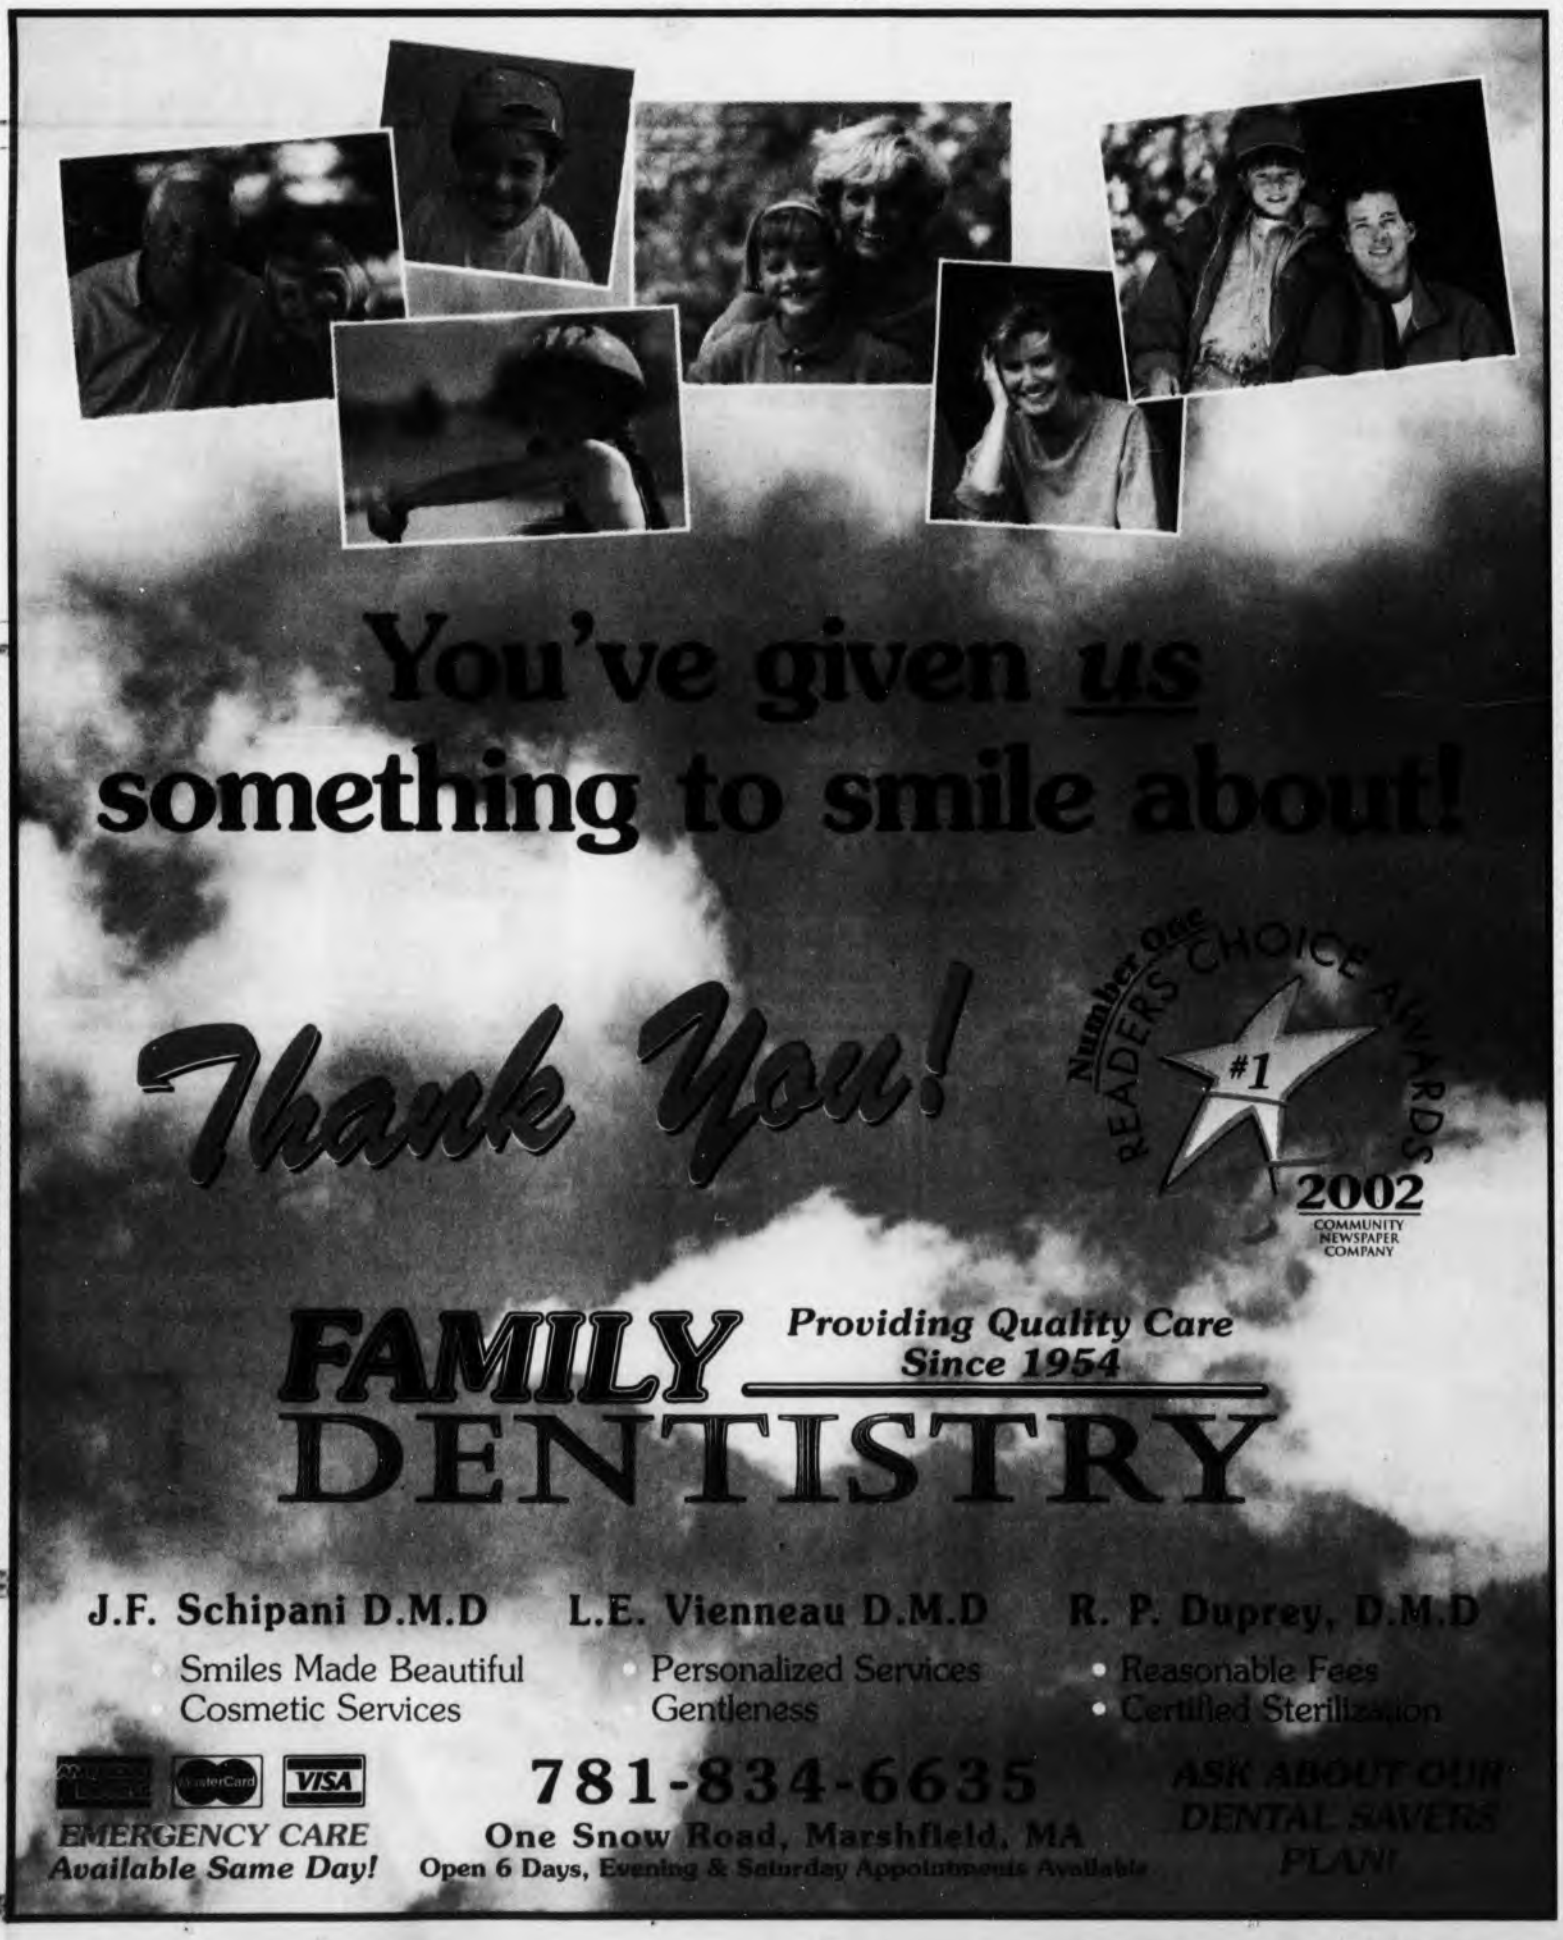
Rehearsals will begin on Sunday, Feb. 27 with performances being held the first 3 weekends in May. Please email Co-Producer Jean D with any questions at jeand@artcraft.com or call 617-750-8987.

WHAT A DOLL!

What little girl wouldn't smile like Alexandra "Ali" Driscoll,6, being surrounded by all these dolls! The antique dolls and doll furniture are part of an extensive collection donated to the Sea Chest Consignment Shop off Rte. 3A (behind Lapel's cleaners). Proceeds from the shop benefit the non-profit Road to Responsibility of Marshfield that is dedicated to serving the needs of individuals with disabilities.

HOMELESS BENEFIT

If you are lucky enough to have cabin fever by the middle of this winter and also compassion to spare around Valentine's Day, please consider contributing and celebrating at the third Valentine's Fund Dance for the homeless in 2005. The Valentines Fund Dance to benefit the homeless will be held this year at the Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor on Saturday evening, Feb. 19, from 8 p.m. to 12:30 p.m. and your presence would be a wonderful addition to a fantastic evening. The requested donation is $20 per person and a "creative black-tie" outfit is the look (and creative is the key). There will be dancing to two great rock and roll band, The Pemberton Hill Players and Shaken Not Stirred, auctions of art works and a drumhead signed by all five members of Aerosmith, along with so much more.



Absolutely all proceeds go to benefit Bread & Jams, Inc., a Self-advocacy Center and day shelter located in Harvard Square, Cambridge. For dinner reservations pre-event, call Atlantica at 781-383-0900 and to reserve tickets for the event itself, call 781-383-6568.

TWICE THE PRIDE

Congratulations go out to not one, but two girls from a Cohasset family. Tess Foley (a freshman) and her sister Cara Foley (a junior) both received academic honors at Boston College by making the university's dean's list for the 2004 Fall Semester. Tess is majoring in communications in the University's College of Arts and Sciences and earned a 3.6 GPA and second honors. Tess is also a member of the Boston College fellows program. Cara is majoring in communications in the University's College of Arts and Sciences as well and also earned a 3.6 GPA and second honors. The girls parents, Mary and Bill Foley, are filled with twice the amount of pride for their two daughters.

That is all for this week. Send me all of your news and information no later than Tuesdays by noon.

Third-grader Victoria Bryan, 8, adds dots to the pink heart she decorated in Ann Berman's after-school art program.

Art class has a heart

"We're trying our hardest," said Berman, adding with the blizzard three weeks ago, her students lost some art time when school was cancelled. However, they are well on their way to providing roughly 300 painted hearts for the event.

Whittemore said in addition to the children, there have been many people who have come together to make the Valentine Fund Dance possible. Local bands, the Pemberton Hill Players and Shaken Not Stirred, will both play during the benefit, and have generously donated their services. In addition, there will be a drumhead auctioned off, which has been signed by all five members of Aerosmith, as well as art by local artists, including Donna Green and Tina Watson. Whittemore said there have been so many people from in and around Cohasset that have donated their time or services, it has been wonderful to see, and he is really looking forward not only to raising money for a good cause, but to having a great time. "It's a great cure for cabin fever," he said.

Berman said she really enjoys being able to provide her students with an opportunity to become involved in projects such as this, as they can realize that even at a young age, they can truly make a difference. "My kids are doing a great job, and we're really happy to help," she said.

Fourth-grade student Bryanna Valentine said she has painted about five hearts for the fundraiser, and she is very glad to be making something for someone else to enjoy. "I switch them a little every time so they're all different," she said, but all are combinations of pink, white, and red. She said she has enjoyed being a part of the project because she thinks it's nice to help people who don't have anything.

...they are well on their way to providing roughly 300 painted hearts for the event.

Giselle Hart who is also in fourth grade, said she comes to after-school art about once a week. Because she enjoys working with clay, one of the best parts for her was rolling out the clay and stamping out the heart shapes. She said it has been a lot of work, but she has enjoyed expressing her artistic side and even tried painting one of her hearts with a plaid design.

Third-grade student Angel Hunter said Valentine's Day is one of her favorite holidays, especially because her birthday is the day after, and she has had a lot of fun participating in the Valentine's Fund Dance project. She said so far, she has painted about eight hearts, and she feels "really good," about having been able to help.

Thirdgrade student Jake Masci made his first heart Tuesday. "I think it's nice to help for the fund-raiser and I like painting too," he said.

But Maggie Ernst who is also in third grade has been very busy, and said she has painted 10 hearts. She said red is her favorite color, "and that's why I'm using it."

The Valentine's Fund Dance will be held at the Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor, Saturday, Feb. 19 from 8 p.m. until 12:30 a.m. The requested donation is $20 per person. In light of people's contributions to the tsunami victim's in Southeast Asia, the donation for this year's dance has been lowered by 20 percent.

Whittemore said while many people have been extremely generous in remembering those who have been left homeless as a result of the tsunami, it is very important to remember there are more than three million adults and children who experience homelessness each year here in America.

Hors d'oeuvres will be provided by Atlantica staff. For dinner reservations pre-event, please call Atlantica at (781) 383-0900. To reserve tickets for the event, please call (781) 383-6568, as there will be a limited number of tickets available at the door. All proceeds will go to benefit Bread & Jams, Inc.

OPINION

Special Education

As a society, we have the obligation to educate all children whether through regular education programs or special education services.

Massachusetts has one of the most comprehensive special education laws in the country and many would argue that is indicative of the government and culture of our state, which truly believes "no child should be left behind."

But with that being said, there are extenuating circumstances like those being reported in Cohasset that can put too much of a burden on "us" – the residential taxpayers.

We understand two children, who do not live in town but whose legal guardian does, are going to require out-of-district tuition for special care next year, in fiscal year 2006 and Cohasset must foot the bill.

Because the state's "circuit breaker" program operates a year behind – meaning it is based on special education costs for the prior year – the Cohasset school budget has to absorb the lion's share of the expense, which could be several hundred thousand dollars.

We agree with School Committee Chairman Rick Shea, this isn't a school problem, it's a town problem. Those out-of-district tuitions – even though they represent a relatively small percentage of the total school budget — could fuel the need for higher taxes to cover the cost which affects all taxpayers. It's important to remember that most of the school budget is salaries with only roughly 30 percent for everything else, including supplies, maintenance and other services.

There are very sensitive issues here; the school department can say little because it has an obligation to educate all students under its care, even if that requires a special school or full-time nursing home.

However, adding the responsibility for these tuitions onto the school budget at the 11th hour seems inherently unfair. It is impossible to plan and budget without being able to predict a substantial cost such as this. It is one thing to estimate how many new families with children are coming to town and it's quite another, to figure in enormously expensive out-of-district tuitions without warning.

We urge the Selectmen and School Committee to invite state Sen. Robert Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley to a meeting as soon as possible to discuss special legislation to help Cohasset. Perhaps there is a way to allow the "circuit breaker" in these extreme cases to kick in for the current year. It's worth exploring.

One number cruncher

The Selectmen need to open the warrant and insert and article for the annual Town Meeting expanding the town finance director position to also oversee the school budget. In other words, the finance director would also be the "business manager" for the schools.

We are "one" town with two budgets that are approved as one at Town Meeting. It is apparent that having one person oversee both would not only expedite the process but provide for much better communication and even unity.

We're not sure what legal hurdles might have to be cleared to accomplish this; it could be Cohasset would need a home rule petition.

It's a bold step and one the Selectmen need to take now, even if the School Committee balks at the idea.

From where we sit, we're deeply concerned the taxpayers don't have the stomach (or the wallets) to endure another override this year, which doesn't bode well for our schools if current financial reports continue.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Paying the price for being unable to work together

TO THE EDITOR:

The idea of a circular firing squad seems to have inspired Cohasset: witness the inane behavior of the townspeople in failing to drive the Cook estate project to fruition.

Responding to a need for affordable housing, a group of responsible citizens put together this rather complicated project. A large majority at Town Meeting understood its economic benefit as well as its role in easing the pressure by the Commonwealth to provide senior affordable housing, and voted to approve it. The subsequent bidding process resulted in selection of the Northland Corporation to develop the project.

Unfortunately, more detailed examination of the site revealed inadequate capacity of the soil to absorb the clean treated water discharge from an on-site waste treatment plant. Although the capacity of town's waste treatment plant could be increased to accommodate Little Harbor and Cook and the other currently known developments, the Cook project was denied access to that capacity for fear of setting a precedent that would result in exhausting our treatment capacity with subsequent developments and before all homes needing hook-up are served.

Hull has plenty of excess capacity which is for sale, and Northland is interested in connecting to the Hull plant. But our Sewer Commission claims the right of approval of any sewer pipe crossing town property, and is denying that approval.

Because the Town's elements are unable to act together cohesively with a common goal: (to make the project work), what is Northland to do? It could abandon the project and leave the trustees of the Cook estate to sell the land for conventional development, or it could cut its ties to the Town, make a new deal with the trustees, and develop the site with "market-rate" units, few enough in number to match the limited capacity of the soil to absorb the effluent from an on-site treatment system. Thus we would lose out on the much needed affordable units, and lose the one-time profit we would have gained from the original plan.

And guess what? At least one selectman is reputed to be encouraging Northland to do just that!

Just to thicken the stew, several individual citizens have publicized their peculiar objections and can be expected to continue.

If there are any winners in this orgy of self-destruction, it surely isn't us. Maybe some developer will profit from the leavings.

Special interest group loses sight of big picture

TO THE EDITOR:

What's best for the Town of Cohasset? Shouldn't that be the question on any resident's mind as they hear about, read about, talk about or (dare we hope) seek to learn more about the collection of choices the Town is faced with making in the near future? Sadly, in the case of the plans to sewer the Little Harbor area, that is not at all what seems to be getting the most attention.

This Town committed years ago to sewering certain areas around Little Harbor. If you had polled Town Meeting last Dec. 6, I don't believe a single person would have raised a hand against that idea. We have as a Town invested $2 million dollars so far towards that goal. Yet, certain people who will, not coincidentally, directly benefit from that project have decided we're not moving fast enough to suit them.

It appears that they feel they are in direct competition with every other pending potential sewer project and that they want more of a commitment. They have a right to their opinion, wrong as it may be, and to make it heard. But they are very wrong to try to demonize elected Town officials in doing so; and to agitate for things that are clearly not in Cohasset's interest, such as seeking to have the Town fined or suggesting it volunteer to add more teeth to the Second Amended Final Judgment the Commonwealth holds against us, just for their convenience.

Little Harbor is only a piece of the puzzle, after all. We need to sewer other crucial locations to protect our watershed and we need more capacity to do so. We need to consider how to take advantage of available neighboring capacity as we develop and build a second treatment plant. We need to erase the affordable housing shortage and be able to manage future growth. I don't expect to see sewer in Beechwood in my lifetime, but it should be written somewhere in our book of good stewardship, since it sits right on the water supply.

Many people in Cohasset, not least the Selectmen and other boards, have been working towards these goals for some time. The Cook Estate project right now offers a rare chance to make some genuine progress, without any impact on the Little Harbor effort, and with the added benefit of producing substantial income to the Town. If anything should be a priority, it should be not losing this opportunity!

We should continue working together on getting these things done, for all of us. A Special interest group should not be working against the interest of the Town, persisting in distracting it from its important business, for its own members' personal gain.

HEALTH NOTES

Our water and warnings about shoveling snow

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Board of Health recently met with John McNabb, chairman of the Water Commission, to discuss Trihalomethanes TTHMs and the remediation work going on to remove them. One of the initiatives is to improve the accuracy of prediction and assessment of the presence of TTHMs in various parts of the water supply system.

High levels of TTHMs exist only in limited locations within the distribution system, and that the level varies with the time the water is in the pipes. Hence the age of the water in the pipes is important and measurement of this parameter in the system is necessary.

Accordingly, the Board of Health was requested and voted to permit the Water Department to conduct a test in which fluoride is removed from the water supply for a period of four weeks. As you know, fluoride is included in the water supply in a concentration of one part per million to prevent tooth decay in the developing teeth of infants and growing children. The purpose of removing fluoride is to do a tracer analysis: Shut off the flow of fluoride and measure its concentration at many places in the distribution system; the rate at which the concentration of fluoride drops at any location gives an indication of travel time of water from the plant to that site. Removal of fluoride for a period of two to four weeks will have no negative health effects on the developing teeth of infants and children.

It's important for the water supply to contain the lowest possible levels of TTHMs and important for you to follow the progress of the Water Department in removing them. The Commissioners have been meeting weekly and will continue meeting weekly until the problem is solved. The Commissioners have made considerable progress, and the TTHM level is now within the acceptable range. However, the Town must provide a three-month running average of TTHM levels for the past four quarters to the State and, because of carryover high levels from last year, the levels to be reported next will be higher than acceptable. Meanwhile, the Water Dept. web page www.cohassetwater.org is an important resource and can give excellent information on the problem, what is being done and what you can do.

Shoveling snow and heart attacks

Shoveling snow is hard work. Everybody knows that, but it can also bring on a heart attack. According to recent articles in the press, David Nyhan, popular Boston Columnist and several others in the greater Boston area (at least six have been reported recently), have suffered fatal heart attacks while shoveling snow.

The reason is that snow shoveling is a so called isometric exercise in which muscles are contracted against heavy loads for relatively extended periods.

Train construction can proceed

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER AND MARK BRENNAN

Editor's note: On Jan. 11, the Town Manager appointed Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan as Special Assistants to the Town Manager for the Greenbush rail restoration project. Tom will be involved in overall affairs and Mark will concentrate on engineering issues. You may contact them via email or phone or at their office in Town Hall. (Since they are out of Town Hall often for meetings, is advisable to call ahead.) They say they each look forward to serving all of the Cohasset residents and helping with their questions and concerns. This column will be run periodically to inform Cohasset residents about the Greenbush project and its schedules.

As you may have read recently, the legal appeals regarding the Greenbush environmental wetland permit application have been withdrawn. This has freed the MBTA to proceed with project construction in Cohasset. Preliminary information from MBTA says that Cohasset can expect that the tree flagging along the right-of-way will begin about the end of February or early March. The marking will be done before the trees and brush are cleared along the right of way. When construction does start, it will be about a two-year process. We will report back to you with more details after a construction meeting scheduled with the MBTA on Feb. 9.

The archeological dig in the Town Parking lot was expected to be complete this week. As you can see, the weather has thrown the MBTA a curve ball and weather will be the dominant factor in determining when the site can be buttoned up and the parking space restored for your use.

Since the MBTA is going to completely reconstruct the Town parking lot, federal law requires them document and preserve any historic or archeological resources below ground, even though they will be covered over by the new construction.

Until then, the missing parking space is being replaced with temporary space behind Olympic Citgo and adjacent to the new James Way Shops. This dig is an important part of the overall project. Since the MBTA is going to completely reconstruct the Town parking lot, federal law requires them document and preserve any historic or archeological resources below ground, even though they will be covered over by the new construction. Cohasset's old 1800s roundhouse site falls under this protection. The MBTA has obtained the services of UMass Amherst and others to expose and document the remnants of this important part of Cohasset history.

After several meetings with local residents, Police and Fire Departments, and DPW officials, comments on the redesigned intersection of Spring Street / Pond Street as well as the rail crossing in that area were given to the MBTA on the deadline date of Feb. 1. Typically, official responses from the MBTA could take anywhere from one to three months. We do expect to have informal dialog with the MBTA well within this time frame.

Under the new configuration, Pond Street will meet with Spring Street before the rail crossing and proceed toward St. Anthony's. Spring Street will go to the right of Sunset Rock, the very large rock at the present intersection.

Essentially, the Pond Street / Spring Street intersection will be separated from the rail crossing which will be on Spring Street, toward St. Anthony's. Spring Street will run to the right of Sunset Rock, the large rock at the bottom of the Pond St. hill, rather that to the left.

Brush clearing

The MBTA has notified Cohasset that they are ready to begin marking the train right of way in preparation for clearing trees and brush. The procedure will be as follows:

The MBTA will mark trees along the right of way with ribbons of plastic black and red striped tape. The marked trees will be on either side of the rail bed.

The trees marked with ribbon will not be removed. They mark the outer perimeter of the right of way. All trees inside of the marked trees will be removed.

After trees are marked, in two to three weeks, the space between the marked trees will be cleared of all brush and trees.

If any landowners have any questions with the trees that are marked on your property, please contact either of us at the phone number or email addresses below.

Setting the sewer record straight

COMMENTARY

RONNIE MCMORRIS

Mr. Offerman and Ms. LoJacono of 111 Nichols Road are simply wrong when they assert that the Town of Cohasset has failed to fulfill its legal obligations under the Second Amended Final Judgment (SAFJ), or that we are a community of willful polluters who uncaringly allow waste to enter our waters. In fact, the Town of Cohasset takes its responsibilities and commitments very seriously, particularly to the environment. We have spent more than $20 million to date to ensure that our legal obligations under the Judgment are met. Every taxpayer in Cohasset has contributed to fulfilling this commitment, which has included the sewering of North Cohasset and the expansion of the central sewer plant and district. We pride ourselves on being a community in the forefront of environmental protection. Our wetlands regulations and our water protection rules are significantly more stringent than the Commonwealth's.

In addition, the Town and the Board of Selectmen have consistently supported the sewering of the Little Harbor area as the next priority. The taxpayers have funded the required studies and designs of that system. Since the late 90s I have been convinced that sewering this area is the most cost effective and environmentally sound solution to fixing inadequate septic systems. My view has never changed. The Town continues to make progress on this project, yet the Nichols Road couple insist that Cohasset has not complied with the SAFJ (La Jocono, 1/28/05 Mariner); and that DEP should levy fines against Cohasset (Offerman, 2/14/05 Mariner) to force that compliance.

Those seeking amnesty from the requirements of Title 5 in order to sell their houses have different concerns from those who will stay in Cohasset, and pay for and use those sewers.

There are clearly competing interests as to how and when the Town proceeds with the sewering of Little Harbor. Those seeking amnesty from the requirements of Title 5 in order to sell their houses have different concerns from those who will stay in Cohasset, and pay for and use those sewers. Town officials who are responsible for long-range legal and financial planning must examine the town's overall debt structure and bond rating. It is ultimately the obligation of these officials, who are the legitimate representatives of all residents, to balance these competing concerns. Securing benefits for one area can and will be accomplished, but research and negotiation are an integral part of protecting the best interests of the entire town.

Cook Estate

Similarly, Karen Quigley is wrong (Mariner, 2/4/05) when she suggests that the Town's senior housing project on the Cook estate poses any threat to the Little Harbor sewer project; or any sewer project for that matter. The developer of the Cook project, Northland, was chosen by a diverse group of Cohasset residents. They have consistently requested the ability to tap into Hull's excess capacity. That request has never threatened a drop of capacity earmarked for existing homes in Cohasset. Town officials should be working with the Northland group to secure that capacity and I will happily participate in those negotiations.

We are proud that we came together as a community to build and refurbish schools, libraries, fields and other public buildings. That is Cohasset at its best! We can be equally proud to join together to produce affordable housing for Cohasset seniors on the Cook property. The need for such a project grows each year, as longtime residents struggle to live in this community. The Cook project is still our "Golden Opportunity" to provide housing options for generations of Cohasset seniors, secure a substantial profit from the sale of the town's land, and guarantee close to $500,000 in added yearly revenue to pay for education and other town services. In addition, Cohasset can add 37 units of affordable housing to its required production under chapter 40B, making a significant step toward regaining control of the town's growth. The project is a win for everyone, and town officials should respect the work of numerous senior housing committee members, elder board members and most importantly the vote of the Town Meeting, and make it happen! The older generation deserves that effort and that respect.

Ronnie McMorris, a former member of the Conservation Commission, has served on the Board of Selectmen for nine years.

Response to Little Harbor questions

COMMENTARY

JACK BUCKLEY

Mr. Jenkins raised a host of important questions about Little Harbor (Cohasset Mariner, Feb. 4). Given the town's general need to minimize spending, I submit that many of his questions can be addressed "in-house" at a fraction of the cost of outsourcing it all.

Six out of the 10 questions raised by Mr. Jenkins can be answered by properly trained high school and college age students. These questions are data driven concerns with clear objectives and precise deliverables.

For example, Mr. Jenkins asks about the fecal coliform levels in Straits Pond. Assuming base-line data exists from the time period before the area was sewered, a sampling program can be implemented and a comparison can be made; thus, his question can be answered within Cohasset's existing educational structures, resources, and community support network. Likewise, data questions about septic system records can be answered by students properly trained to examine records and maps on file.

Further training might have students conduct field observations to ground truth paper and electronic information. Finally, properly trained students might even begin the politically unpleasant work of tracing pollution concerns to their sources.

Though I speak only as an individual resident and not a representative of any group or institution in our community, I do enjoy a perspective as a participant in a growing collaborative effort to train and challenge students to address questions such as those raised by Mr. Jenkins.

Students bring incredible enthusiasm, interest, and skill to the table when asked to help solve real problems in the real world.

The Center for Student Coastal Research, the Cohasset Board of Health, Cohasset High School, the Gulf Association, Cohasset Education Foundation, the Town of Scituate and supporting state agencies such as Coastal Zone Management are currently developing a scope of services and deliverables to answer comparable questions in the North Scituate area of the Gulf River. This work is grant funded, and is administered by CZM; but it will be executed primarily by Cohasset High School students and Cohasset High School graduates. In fact, our grant proposal (which we're told received the highest score) was based almost entirely upon student data and student analysis.

The goal of the grant-funded project is to advance the collaborative capacities of students, municipal officials, and other concerned institutions (state agencies, watershed associations, etc.) to identify, quantify, and remediate non point source pollution in the upper Gulf River emanating from North Scituate storm water outfalls, suspected illicit discharges, and suspected leaking septic systems.

The scope of services and deliverables expected of us in this project are comparable to the scope of services suggested by the questions raised.

- Analyze land use data
- Ground truth existing maps of catch basins and outfalls
- Provide towns with GIS up-dated maps
- Review records and map systems; establish electronic database
- Identify possible failing systems
- Identify possible illegal sewerage connections
- Continue water quality monitoring
- Research best management practices
- Engage in outreach and education
- Submit final project report

As stated above, this work will be completed by high school and college students, under the direction of high school teachers who will enjoy invaluable support "behind the scenes" from professional engineers, environmental scientists, citizen-activists, and state officials of various academic backgrounds.

It is very much a team project with students playing the critical role of researcher, analyst, and author of scientific reports.

Can it be done? Can we deliver? As one of the project leaders, I find it quite daunting, but doable. Students bring incredible enthusiasm, interest, and skill to the table when asked to help solve real problems in the real world. But this intersection of education and solving community issues requires a sustained, year- round effort supported by an educational program that doesn't yet exist. Should the community seek to establish a more elaborate structure, I believe we are well positioned to create a dynamic educational program for that pays dividends to the community.

What's in a name — plenty!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I see where the board of trustees of Governor Dummer Academy have smartened up after, lo, these 282 years and voted to change the name of the private boarding school up in Byfield.

"Private boarding school," that's where parents pay $33,000 in tuition, room and board so their kids can riot after the Patriots win the Super Bowl and the Red Sox win the World Series;

The trustees, who voted for the change in December, feel that "dummer" and "academy" in the same sentence are contradictory in terms, like military intelligence and developing third world nation. They'll pick a new name in May.

It is, like so many decisions made in the academic world today, a marketing ploy, same as naming the science lab after the football star and the math chair after the millionaire real estate magnate who flunked out after his freshman year.

The academy was named for William Dummer, an otherwise undistinguished governor of Massachusetts from 1723-28...

Although their school's name didn't seem to bother Governor Dummer's 391 students and only one of eight applicants were admitted, the trustees felt being identified as a "Dummer student" did nothing to enhance enrollment.

"First impressions make a difference," said Headmaster John M. Doggett. "Outside of the Boston region, the first impression sometimes doesn't convey what the school is all about."

Besides, it's not really a name change, it's a "name refinement."

The academy was named for William Dummer, an otherwise undistinguished governor of Massachusetts from 1723-28, who died in 1761 and left his estate in Byfield for the establishment of a school.

To my knowledge no one ever called him a "Dummer governor," although I can't speak for some of his successors.

Governor Bill will still be considered the founder of the school, even if his name is spoken in hushed whispers on Founder's Day and older alumni will probably be able to bring their diplomas in to insert a name more appropriate to an academy graduate.

Name changing among schools is nothing new, although it's mostly done on the college level and for different reasons.

Trinity College in North Carolina became Duke University after the tobacco-growing Duke family dumped bill of large denominations on the struggling campus, too much for just the naming rights to a mere building.

A few years ago, the trustees of Beaver College in Glenside, Penn., were considering a name change but I never learned how it turned out. I never knew why they wanted to change the name either and I'm not going to speculate, not in a family newspaper, anyway.

Some high schools on the South Shore have undergone name changes, although I'm not sure if the names actually were changed or just allowed to drift away.

When I covered high school sports on the outskirts of the circulation area for the Quincy Patriot Ledger, Hanover had Sylvester High School, Holbrook had Sumner High and in West Bridgewater it was Howard High School.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

LETTERS FROM PAGE 10

Personal attacks are uncalled for

TO THE EDITOR:

In reading the last few editions of The Mariner, I was struck by the low-level of the discourse and tone of many of the letters to the editor.

It is no secret that there are a multitude of issues and challenges facing Cohasset today. The proposed solutions to these problems are varied and, in some cases, controversial. However, the interjection of personal attacks and character misrepresentations about any of our elected officials or other volunteers has no place in this town government, nor will these personal slights help move us forward as a community to address these matters.

This is a wonderful town and a special place to live and raise a family. For this we should thank the many hard-working members of this community who have answered the call of public service and made the needed sacrifices in their own lives, so that all of us may benefit. While we should encourage civic debate, and certainly no official should be beyond appropriate public scrutiny, we need to keep in mind that all of our selectmen, school committee members, commissioners and town volunteers are also our neighbors and in many cases, our friends.

In particular, it is very disturbing to read the weekly wave after wave of personal attacks on Selectmen McMorris, Sullivan and Spofford. These are three individuals who have dedicated a substantial amount of their time and energies to Cohasset. The three of them have put in thousands of hours in volunteer work; hours that could have been spent with their families, their businesses or in some other pursuit. All of us are the beneficiaries of this work, and whether or not you agree with their policies or decisions, you have to respect the fact that they stand by their principals and are willing to take the heat for what they believe is right.

I, for one, thank them for their forward-thinking and reasoned-minded positions, as well as for their continued commitment to this community.

Advocacy is OK but not divisive discourse

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing because of the level of discourse in this town that has been displayed in public meetings and in many columns and letters in the "Cohasset Mariner." We have witnessed elected and appointed officials and employees of this town be vilified and maligned because they are trying to do their jobs. Regardless of what side of an issue you find yourself, any reasonable person would agree that the name calling, spurious accusations and character assassination that we have seen is disgraceful, unnecessary, divisive and counter-productive. The lack of respect and absence of civil behavior that some individuals seem to think is appropriate in dealing with Cohasset town officials and employees has no place in our town.

Of course, advocacy is important. Proponents of any issue have the right and the obligation to make their case and encourage support. Conflicting interests may be revealed and resolved. There is no reason to demonize individuals or a group in order for another special interest group to succeed.

Sewering the Little Harbor area is a good idea. It is also vital that we continue to protect our water supply and delivering sewer to the Beechwood area should continue to be a priority. The Department of Environmental Protection identified the Lily Pond area, including the Aaron River Reservoir, as one of the priority areas to be included in the Wastewater Management Plan. There should also be support and assistance for residents with failing septic systems. Finally, we have an obligation to many citizens in this town to complete the Cook project, which may be the only development offering affordable and reasonably priced homes in Cohasset. It is certainly the only development in Cohasset that has been created, designed and approved with the advice and assistance of the residents of this town. There is no reason why the good people represented by each of these groups should be in conflict with each other. This is not a sum-zero game.

Little Harbor is on-line and seems to be only subject to financial constraints. The Beechwood area is finally receiving attention. There will also be a warrant article brought forward at Town Meeting to attempt to assist residents with septic systems. Finally, It is my understanding that Hull has the capacity for the Cook Estate. Let's look into it. The purpose of moving the Cook Estate forward is not to benefit a private developer, as has been alleged, it is to proceed with our commitment to the people of this town.

We have to ask the right questions, Mr. Jenkins' letter of last week is an excellent example of where we might begin. It is up to us to get the right information and attempt to make informed, rational judgments, in a civil, mutually respectful way, about these very important issues confronting our Town.

The Advisory Committee will be conducting pre-Town Meeting hearings during February and March and inviting the proponents and all interested parties. The hearings will be advertised and everyone is invited to attend. I encourage every citizen to make the effort to read, question and understand the warrant articles and come to Town Meeting on April 2 and make your voice be heard.

Questions about full-day kindergarten

TO THE EDITOR:

The following letter was sent to Dr. Denise Walsh, Superintendent of Schools, with a copy to the Mariner.

We are writing to express our concerns over the proposal to add a tuition-based full-day kindergarten program to the Cohasset Public Schools. As parents of an incoming kindergartner, we are troubled by the lack of information thus far made available to parents who are being asked to register their children for the fall of 2005 starting on Feb. 7, 2005. We are being asked to indicate a preference for full-day or half-day program without any information to support the decision.

In order to make an informed decision, parents require information regarding the curriculum to be implemented in both the half-day and full-day programs including the differences between the programs. We need to know how about the benefits of full-day kindergarten. We need to understand how this is different from the existing KEDS program. We need to understand exactly what our children would be getting for the tuition.

In addition, we would like to understand how the district plans to deal with the differences in the academic preparedness of the following year's first grade class if the full-day kindergarten program is not fully implemented or available to all kindergarten students. As we understand the current proposal, only 60 students will be eligible to attend a tuition-based full-day kindergarten program. If a parent cannot afford or does not believe their child is ready for a full-day Kindergarten program, or if the demand exceeds the available space, what differences will there be in the academic preparedness of those students for first grade? How will those students be distributed among the first grade class? If the demand does in fact exceed the space available, what is the district prepared to do? How will those spaces be "awarded?"

We understand, that the Town of Cohasset and the School District are undergoing a difficult fiscal period and in such a time it would be irresponsible to ignore the cost of implementing such a program. However, we are deeply troubled that "profitability" and "revenue enhancement" have been offered as partial justifications for the proposal. We understand that revenue generated by the program will not be maintained in the program but will be used to fund other programs as well.

If full-day kindergarten is truly in the best interests of our children, then it is in their best interests regardless of whether it is "profitable" or "self-sustaining," and it is in the best interests of all children regardless of whether their parents pay for the privilege. If it is truly in their best interests it should be offered and available to all students and implemented among all students. We believe it is a dangerous proposition to offer such fundamental services only to certain students - those willing to pay for them - and to deny those opportunities to others, thereby compelling them to start their academic careers off in an inconsistent and inequitable manner. We believe that the questions and issues outlined in this letter and the concerns of all parents need to be fully addressed before this program as proposed is implemented. We are advocating additional time to discuss and review this program and to allow time to develop a sensible and fair program for all the students of Cohasset. We do not believe there is sufficient time to do this in an inclusive manner for the 2005-2006 academic year.

A happy ending

TO THE EDITOR:

With so much criticism and contention about the people who serve our town, both as professionals and volunteers, here's a Happy Ending story complete with Heroes.

A week ago Monday, my yellow lab fell through the ice in Little Harbor and was in the water for well over an hour. Thanks to the cool heads and skill of the Cohasset Fire Department, and particularly the willingness of one man to go out on the ice, she was rescued.

She was barely alive and having violent seizures by the time I got her to the Hingham Animal Hospital. Dr. Waters and his skilled, compassionate staff, working on her for over two hours, pulled a miracle and saved her.

I can never adequately express my gratitude to the competent professionals who came to my aide. Thanks to the Cohasset Fire Department, Dr. Waters and his staff, I have a dog I treasure back in my home.

Cook Estate and Hull Sewer

TO THE EDITOR:

This past week I informed myself about the capacity of the Hull Sewer Plant because I want the Cook Property Plan to go forward and I do not want it to effect the capacity for existing homes.

May I suggest that Cohasset take advantage of the 1,000,000 gallons per day available capacity of the Hull Plant.

The Hull Sewer plant is already treating the Massachusetts State Highways contaminated ground water under the land fill. It is doing so by having it pumped out and trucked to be treated in Hull. Pretty costly for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. If the Commonwealth tied up to the Hull system via 3A (a state highway) then the Cook property and Avalon could tie in on 3A.

I have worked on the Senior Housing Committee with Joe Buckley, Jim Lagrotteria, and Joe Nedrow and many others over 10 years. It has been a long haul and the Cook proposal is such a wonderful opportunity. The "BEST". The town would receive $750,000 from Northland, bring an income of $450,000 per year to the town and yet not add to the School population. The Developer was chosen with great care with Guidelines from the town and in a competitive process. It is a beautiful project with 58 homes and 37 rentals. The 25 percent affordable of these will be mixed in with the market rate (a top of $600,000). The location has envisioned paths to the Stop and Stop on one side and to the library on the other.

Avalon would also be able to hook up if the Commonwealth went forward and as I understand it the 2 bedroom apartments would bring an increase to the school population which has already been estimated but I am not sure of the amount.

Frankly I firmly believe it is time for Cohasset to welcome affordable housing. It is our obligation if we want to remain a diverse community.

A matter of semantics

TO THE EDITOR:

While watching recent school committee meetings, I realized that as a business person, I infer completely different meanings from terminology used by the educators.

Enrichment, when my children were in the Cohasset schools, was an activity during school hours that offered an opportunity above and beyond the normal classroom work to enhance their understanding and scope of knowledge. To educators today in Cohasset, it is a fee for service after school babysitting program

Self-supporting or self-sufficient programs in the real world are those that are able to exist from the revenue produced. Such programs besides being able to provide salaries for staff should also be able to meet all employee expenses such as health insurance, pensions, worker compensation and liability insurance fees and unemployment costs. The fees should also cover plant expenses such as rent or mortgages ($50+ million for Cohasset schools), heat, lights, phones, equipment, supplies, cleaning, maintenance, building insurance and any licenses.

Making a profit in a business sense means that your revenue stream meets all of the above expenses plus taxes and that the income produces a surplus that can be used to expand your business, repair, replace or update worn or broken equipment, etc.

In the world of education the terms self supporting for the Keds program and making a profit in the lunch program seem to be somewhat interchangeable and mean that they are able to pay salaries and hopefully cover the costs of supplies and if they are lucky maybe health benefits. Typically employee benefits are not in their realm because in their minds all the employees are 'town employees' and as such employee expenses are someone else's responsibility.

As to the school facilities, the educators are quick to develop fees for the use of the facilities by outside groups but cannot comprehend that all the costs they incur in using the facilities for non-education fee for service programs need to be met. Whenever these plant expenses are passed along to the taxpayer that means there is less money available for the children's education.

The school officials don't seem to realize the actual costs of their fee programs and what to charge users to meet these expenses. All costs must be covered and if the users don't pay, then the taxpayers must assume the liability. Thus funds that could be used for education are not available.

In September we are to embark on two new tuition programs that we have been told could make us

This can result in high blood pressure. Weightlifters frequently have to fight against high blood pressure; a common problem. Further, exposure to cold can cause constriction of the arteries in some people which is an additional burden on the cardiovascular system. And high blood pressure is one of the major risk factors for heart attacks.

Warning signs

Some heart attacks are sudden and intense, where no one doubts what's happening. But most heart attacks start slowly, with mild pain or discomfort. Often people affected aren't sure what's wrong and wait too long before getting help. Signs that can mean a heart attack is imminent are:

• Chest discomfort.: Most heart attacks involve discomfort in the center of the chest that lasts more than a few minutes, or that goes away and comes back. It can feel like uncomfortable pressure, squeezing, fullness or pain.

• Discomfort in other areas of the upper body: Symptoms can include pain or discomfort in one or both arms but particularly the left arm, the back, neck, jaw or stomach.

• Shortness of breath: May occur with or without chest discomfort.

• Other signs: These may include breaking out in a cold sweat, nausea or lightheadedness .

If you or someone you're with has chest discomfort, especially with one or more of the other signs, don't wait longer than a few minutes (no more than 5) before calling for help. Call 9-1-1. Get to a hospital right away.

Calling 9-1-1 is almost always the fastest way to get lifesaving treatment. Emergency medical services staff can begin treatment when they arrive — up to an hour sooner than if someone gets to the hospital by car. The staff are also trained to revive someone whose heart has stopped. Also, patients with chest pain who arrive by ambulance usually receive faster treatment at the hospital.

Cardiac arrest strikes immediately and without warning. Here are the signs:

• Sudden loss of responsiveness. No response to gentle shaking.

• No normal breathing. The victim does not take a normal breath when you check for several seconds.

• No signs of circulation. No movement or coughing.

If cardiac arrest occurs, call 9-1-1 and begin CPR immediately. If an automated external defibrillator (AED) is available and someone trained to use it is nearby, involve them.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

a profit – the extended K and pre-K. The quoted rate to be charged is $1500/student. When a school committee member was queried regarding the costs it was stated that it is in line with other programs, i.e. other public schools like Milton. But we receive a much have a lower rate on school reimbursement, 60 percent to their 90 percent and get less on our state Cherry Sheet than Milton.

Private facilities like the Community Center would charge approx. $3000 for a similar program. The discrepancy was explained away because 'we don't have to pay rent'. But we all have to pay the money we spent to build and renovate the schools.

Currently there is a $50K new grant but I have not had anyone return my call to discuss if it is a one-time occurrence, renewable yearly or dependent on state funding and liable to disappear. With their dismal history of managing paying programs how can we believe that the schools will even meet their costs let alone make a profit.

We must get our priorities straight. The children's education must come first. With the increasing costs of education, we can no longer use our tax dollars to subsidize fee programs that suck funds from needed budgets. The years of unaddressed deficits from the lunch program alone would have easily paid for several teachers.

Cohasset is ranked ninth in the 300+ towns in Massachusetts for real estate taxes, with our average tax bill being $7804. There is no other town on the South Shore that is even in the top 15. The closest town is Duxbury whose average real estate tax is $5843, almost $2000 less and their overall per pupil expenditures $7657 which is $948 less than our per pupil expenditures of $8605.

For FY'06, in a worst-case scenario, our debt service for the school renovation could add $800K to our real estate tax bills and we may be faced with another operational (always added to our taxes) override. To maintain the quality of education we can no longer give away the store.

Lady hoopsters one win away

CHS girls hope to qualify for state tourney with win tonight over Hull Pirates

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

With an 9-7 record under their belt, it appears the Lady Hoopsters remain within striking distance of landing a tournament spot.

Don't bet the house on this outcome quite yet.

Yes, under the watchful eye of Coach Levangie, the squad has matured on several fronts. A sturdy defense? Check. Individual talent? Check. Take a peek at Co-captain Casey Anderson's monstrous scoring stats.

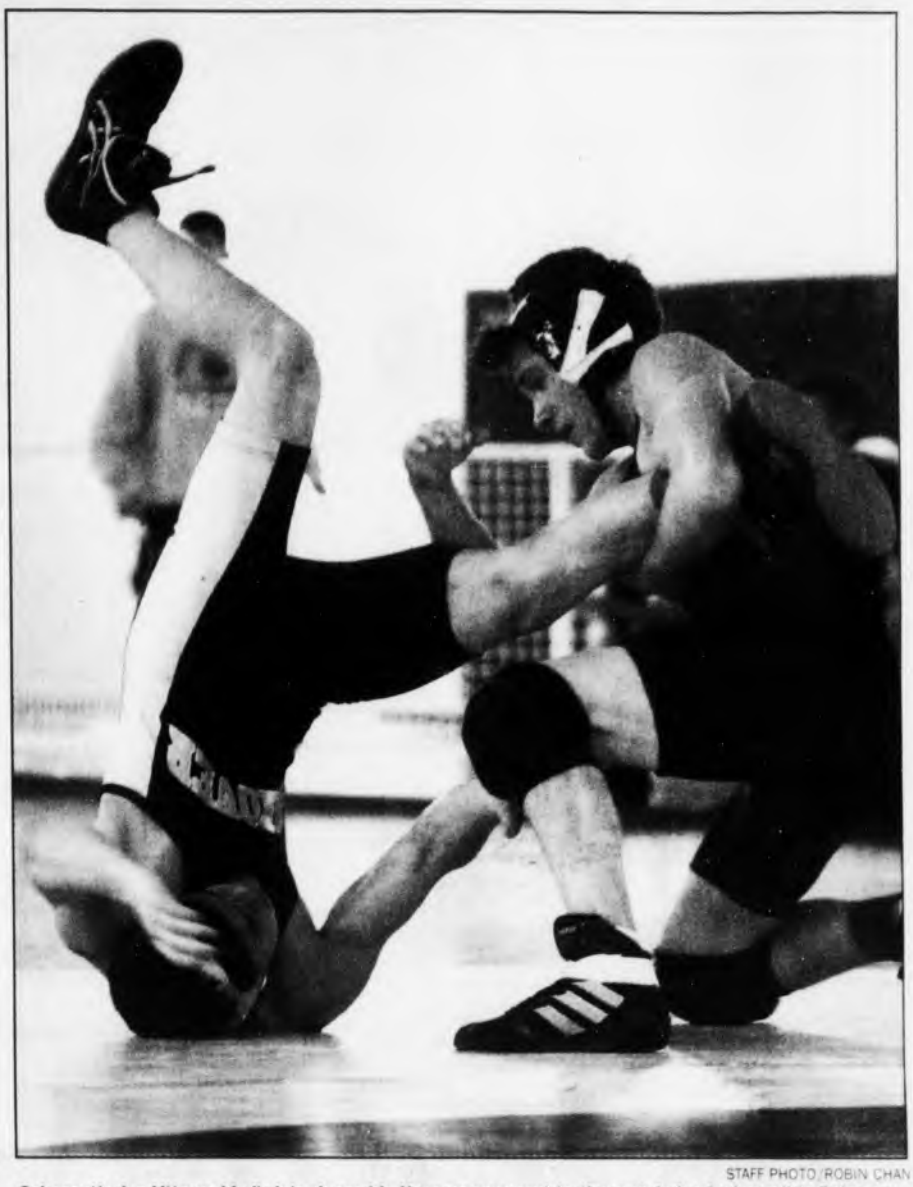
How about a strong work ethic? Just glance into a Skipper practice and you'll find the players working harder than Santa's elves on Christmas Eve.

So what's holding the girls back from leading the league? It simply boils down to an inability to consistently put the ball in the hoop.

Now let's get things straight. Shooting doesn't appear to be an issue for the whole squad. Casey Anderson consistently averages 20-plus points per game. Co-captain Nicole Whitney, Mia Lieb-Lappen, Lacey Richardson, and Chelsea Grossman all display exceptional promise. The problem lies in their need to flow well offensively as a team.

Hull at Cohasset
6:30 p.m. tonight
Senior Night

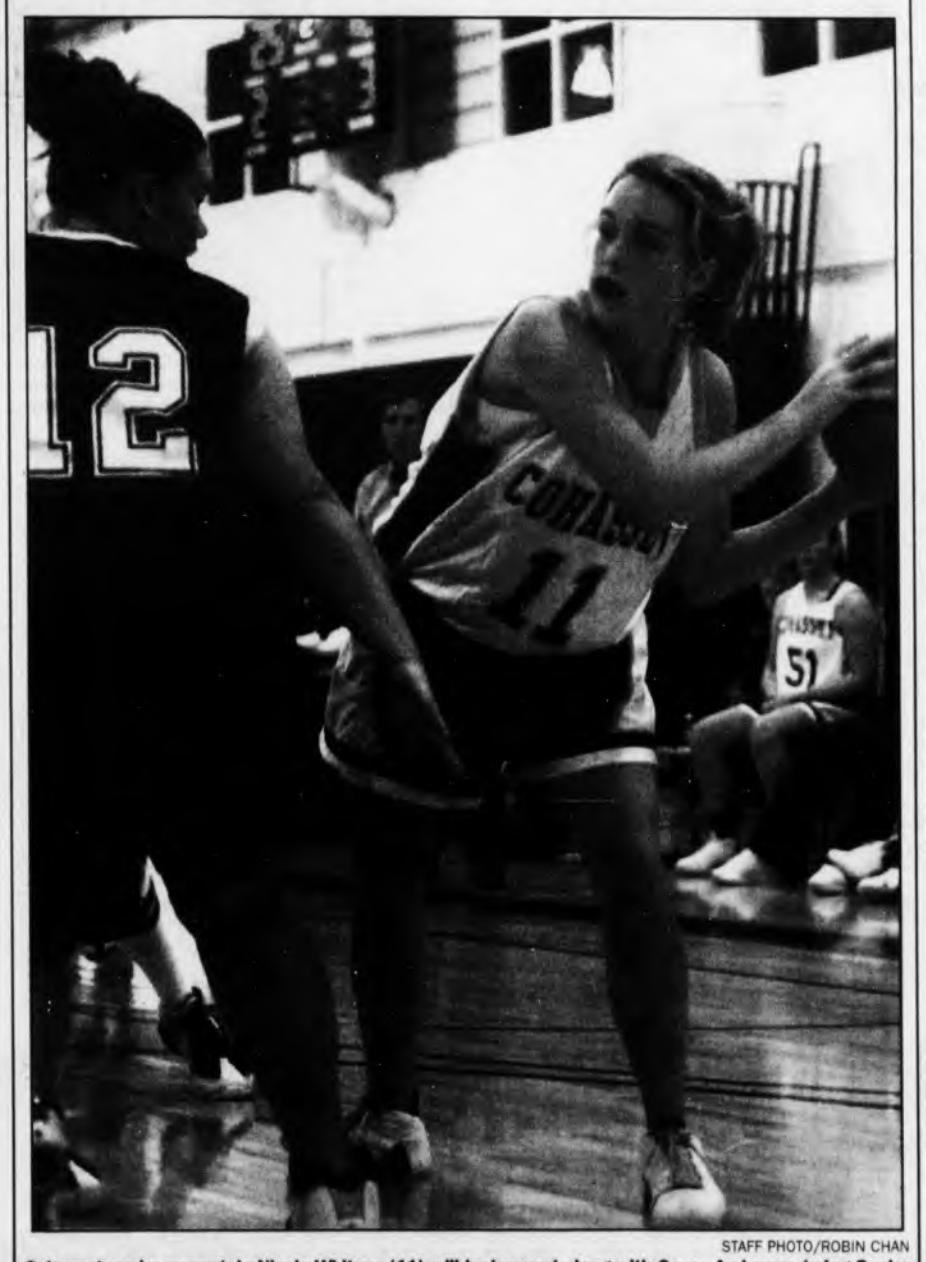
Before we get too whiny about their play, let's discuss a very dominant Skipper performance last week against Nantucket. Coach Levangie declared this outing the girls' "best game of the year." Casey dropped 14 points on the Whalers, closely followed by Chelsea Grossman with 12.



Lacey Richardson, Nicole Whitney, and Katie James harpooned the Whaler offense through their exceptional man-to-man defense. At the final buzzer the red numbers illuminated "Cohasset 44, Nantucket 19."

Then came the rough seas two days later. Buoyed by their commanding victory over Nantucket, the Lady Skippers thought they could capitalize on the momentum when they traveled to Carver. Instead, the Crusaders penetrated the Skipper armor leading to a no-nonsense 51-37 Carver victory.

Two factors drove the Carver dominance throughout the game: outside shooting and speed. The Crusaders trumped the outstanding performance of Casey Anderson (29 points) and the reliable Cohasset defense.



Levangie found the lack of

Time to shine

Wrestlers looking for big wins at this weekend's sectionals

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Several Cohasset grapplers will embark on a journey today that they hope will end with at least a state championship.

Two of the three Skippers who earned those honors last year - Joe Kehoe and Matt Baroudi - are back to defend their titles.

Kehoe has been virtually unbeatable this season, losing only one match all year. The senior has bounced back and forth between the 152- and 160-pound weight classes this season and is almost a sure bet to be in the mix for a title this year.

Baroudi has battled through a couple injuries and has wrestled well in the matches he has participated in. In Cohasset's last tune-up last weekend - a quad versus strong programs in North Attleboro, Leominster and Franklin - the senior went 3-0 in the 189-pound division.

Other likely contenders for state titles include:

Jon Littauer (119), who was 22-2 heading into last week's action. The senior has usually been dominant in his matches, consistently getting pins over his opponents.

Kevin Dinsmore, with 20 wins against just two losses toward the end of the season. A gifted athlete who has split time between 130 and 135, Dinsmore's season was highlighted by a win at the North Quincy tournament last month.

Div. 3 South sectionals today, tomorrow Holliston

Both Dinsmore and Littauer picked up two wins at last weekend's quad.

Matt Casey, a senior with the same record as Dinsmore. Casey has shown his stamina at the year's big tournaments, winning Marshfield and dominating North Quincy before forfeiting the final two matches due to injury.

Shane Dorian, a junior who has won over 80 percent of his matches in the 140-pound division. Dorian, Dave McKenna (145) and Nick Cambi (215) round out Cohasset's top wrestlers.

The recent blizzard meant the Skippers did not get all the preparation for the sectionals and states they had been hoping for. The snow wiped out a big quad match with Marshfield, Middleboro and Rockland that would have given the team further preparation for the postseason with some tough matches.

Kehoe likely would have wrestled Middleboro's Nick Kelly, and Dorian would have faced Rockland's Jackie Erickson. Both Cohasset wrestlers lost tough matches to those opponents earlier in the year.

The grapplers also recently defeated Holbrook, 36-6. Dorian, Casey, Kehoe, Gannon Dorian, Cambi and Adam Smith all picked up wins at that dual meet.

Following last weekend's quad, Cohasset ended their dual meet season with a 16-2 record.

This weekend's sectionals will take place in Holliston. The states take place next weekend.

Gymnasts hit the magic number

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

All season long, the Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team's goal has been to top the 130-point mark in their team score.

Consider it done, done and done.

The girls hit the mark last Friday against Marshfield (130.25), Monday against Notre Dame (130.2), and Tuesday against Bridgewater-Raynham (season-high 130.7).

Combine those three with a 129-point performance against Carver last Thursday, and the team came out with four wins to finish the regular season with an 11-2 record.

More importantly, however, those four scores will be the deciding factor in whether or not the team qualifies for the South sectional. Head coach Kara Connerty says she and her team will find out this Tuesday whether or not they have made it.

Sectional qualification is based on the average of a team's top four team scores. Connerty said the team qualified last year with a similar average to what they have this season.

The coach was quite pleased with her team following the win over B-R.

"The girls looked great, and they are competing at the level that I think was expected of them," Connerty said.

Norwell senior Samantha Rosen scored a 33.1 in the all-around Tuesday night, highlighted by first-place finishes in the floor (8.8) and vault (8.8). Norwell junior C.J. Himberg placed second on the beam with an 8.2. Connerty praised Himberg for the consistency she

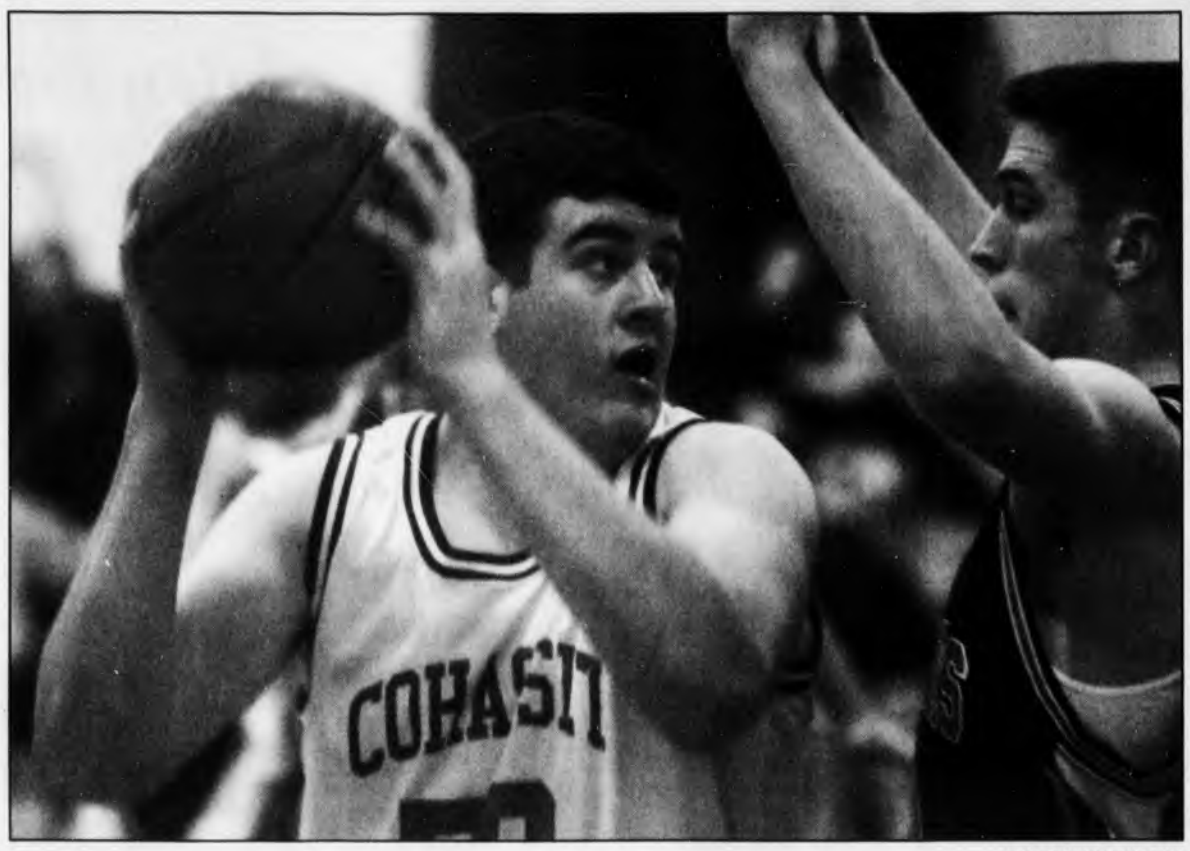
Skippers earn victory on home floor over Cape Cod Academy

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

They were playing their third game in as many days, but the Cohasset boys basketball saved their best for last and picked up their third win of the season.

Hosting Cape Cod Academy, a team they had beaten down the Cape earlier in the year, the Skippers played a strong 32 minutes Wednesday night and came away with a 42-33 win.

Freshman guard Pat McCarthy led all scorers with 12 points, while sophomore big man Justin Alexander had nine points and nine rebounds.



The win came on the heels of a couple competitive league games with Mashpee and Harwich.

Head coach Dorian Bryant said after the win that his team continues to mature and learn what it takes to play winning basketball.

"Our team has been playing well of late, and they're gelling together as a group," he said. "They're playing much harder, and it shows. We've been competing with every team we've played lately."

Bryant was clearly pleased with his team's effort on the road against Mashpee, a very athletic club with a good chance of qualifying for the state tournament. The coach said his team played as hard as they had all year, adding that he saw some good signs of leadership from junior co-captain Trevor Brady and others.

scoring, except for Anderson, a persistent problem.

"It's pretty much the same story," he said. "They play brick-wall defense, but just can't get their shots to fall."

Co-captain Nicole Whitney looked at the game in a slightly different manner.

"We never gave up," she said. "They were very good shooters, and we were just off in our game."

Freshmen Meg Anderson provided further positive news by managing to make some nice contributions at the point guard position. Things look pretty optimistic when you realize Meg has three more seasons to go.

Going forward in the schedule, Coach Levangie says he wants to "focus on one game at a time." Sounds like a plan right out of the Belichick playbook. Nothing wrong with that strategy.

After defeating Mashpee on Monday and falling to Harwich the next day, the girls have nine wins and need one more to qualify for the state tournament.

The Skippers hope to get that accomplished tonight at home against Hull. A ferry ride to Nantucket looms tomorrow.

The season will close out with a mini-road trip to Norwell on Tuesday and a home game against Hopedale on Thursday.

Senior Night

Parents and fans are urged to celebrate Senior Night, tonight at the Girls Varsity Basketball Game at 6:30 p.m. at Cohasset Middle-High School. Watch our senior co-captains Casey Anderson and Nicole Whitney be honored for their tenure and leadership in our girls basketball program. All are invited!

Brady led the team in this game with 15 points. Sophomore forward Jon McCarthy added 10.

The final score of the Skippers' 60-38 loss to Harwich on Tuesday does not tell the whole story of the game. Cohasset hung tough with a good team that is led by senior two-guard Ryan Soares, one of the best players in the South Shore League.

Cohasset was within 12 with three minutes to go, but a couple Soares threes put the game out of reach. Other than that stretch, the Skippers had been playing strong defensively.

Three players led the team in the scoring column with eight points apiece. Alexander, Pat McCarthy and junior forward Chris Bryan all contributed in the losing cause.

Alexander has been playing some nice games of late, and could be solidifying himself as the team's big man of the future. Bryant, a former starting center for Cohasset in the mid-90's, helps lead fundamental drills in practice for his team's frontcourt players (the guards also get their own specialized attention).

A big, strong 6-foot-3 athlete who is also an offensive lineman on the football team, Alexander has been learning to use his size more effectively, according to his coach.

"For the last three games, he's really been doing the stuff that we're trying to teach him," Bryant said. "Justin has been stepping up extremely well for us. He's starting to understand how to make moves around the hoop. Instead of just throwing it up there, he's making strong moves to the basket."

Bryant also said freshman center Jake Cuneo is another big guy who has been making good strides as of late. In the backcourt, the coach says Jon McCarthy and sophomore Nick Zappalo have both been improving and playing well as of late.

"They're all starting to pick it up a little bit," Bryant said. "You always like to see the team pick it up toward the end of the season."

The boys have a tough task today when they travel to Hull. Tomorrow, the Skippers will travel to Nantucket, and then host the Whalers on Monday. The season ends Tuesday with a home game against Norwell.

Skaters have their backs to the wall

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Even at 4-8, the Cohasset hockey team's goal remains the same: make the tournament.

It will take six wins in their last eight games to do so, no easy feat.

The Skippers have two games remaining with Carver (the first last night, the second this Wednesday at Pilgrim). Both are games Cohasset should win.

Nothing will come easy after that. Tonight, the Skippers host Mashpee at 6:50. It won't take much time for the rematch, as Cohasset will venture down to Falmouth to take on the Falcons on Tuesday at 7:30.

Another rematch takes place a week from tonight, when Cohasset will travel to take on Wareham at the Tabor Academy rink in Marion. The Skippers won their season opener against Wareham in a tight, well-played 5-3 contest, and Wareham will surely be looking to repay the favor on their home ice.

Even if Cohasset wins all five of those games - a tall task, indeed - it would still have to win one more to qualify against a very good team. That win would have to come in one of the following three games: Tomorrow in Orleans against league-leading Harwich/ Provincetown (8 p.m. face-off); Feb. 19 against Westwood in Canton (6:30); and Feb. 21 against Norwell at Pilgrim (4:10).

Before last night's game against Carver, the Skippers had split their last two games. They defeated Hull on Saturday, 5-2, and lost Monday to Blue Hills, 4-0.

Senior captain Ted Straughn notched a hat trick against the Pirates, scoring two in the first period and tallying an empty-netter in the closing seconds. The first-line center has been Cohasset's leader and most consistent player this season.

Conor Holway and Mark Donovan scored the other goals against Hull. Cohasset head coach Ben Virga praised Holway, a sophomore defenseman, who he says could be a potential captain in the future.

"Conor has been learning a lot from our seniors this year; he has great potential as a person, not just a player," the coach said.

Donovan was part of a line against Blue Hills - joining Corbin Faber and Kurt Gritzan - that Virga said did a good job of fore-checking and back-checking, and not allowing any goals while they were on the ice.

Youth football and cheerleading

On Monday, Feb. 28, 2005, the Scituate/Cohasset Youth Football & Cheerleader Organization will be holding its Annual Board of Director Elections at the Scituate Public Library at 7:00 p.m. The public is welcome to attend.

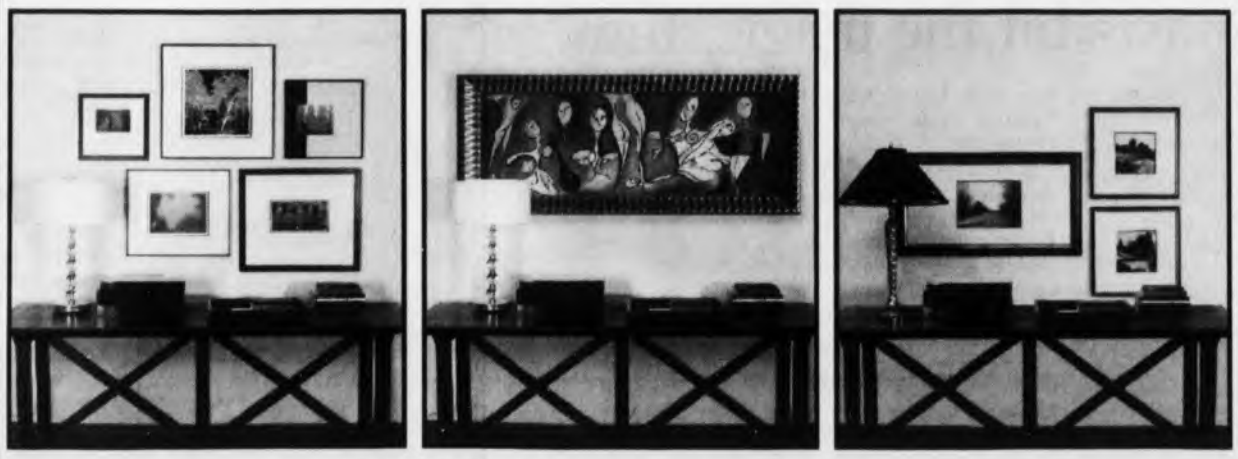
has shown all year long, particularly on the beam.

The beam event was won on Tuesday by Cohasset senior Nancy Durkin with an 8.4. As was expected, Durkin has been a critical part of the team's success this season, and she stepped up huge in the Marshfield meet with a career-high 34.2 on the all-around.

Against B-R, Norwell junior Erin Kelly scored well on the floor exercise (8.2) and the beam (8.0). Norwell sophomore Melissa Murphy earned an 8.0 on the vault.

The other top performer on the night was Cohasset freshman Corinna Durham, who had an 8.2 on the vault and a 7.8 on the floor.



If Nor-Coh does qualify for the sectional, it will be the third time in four years they have done so. Considering only about 5 percent of all teams in the state make the tournament, as Connerty pointed out Tuesday night, this would be quite an achievement.

Before that, there is the individual league meet, taking place this Saturday at Marshfield High School, beginning at 10 a.m.

Congratulations go out to our 5th Grade Girls' Travel Basketball Team. They're working hard this season, competing in the very challenging South Shore Girl's Basketball League. Keep up the good work!
Team members include: Stephanie Brierley, Abby Brown, Allie Farren, Olivia Franklin, Elizabeth Hagearty, Whitney Jaffe, Elly Leong, Scarlett McQuade, Jen Mullin, Kayla Orner, Isabel Robinson, Anna Seraikas, Elisa Tedeschi, and Julia Thompson.

Not a Super Afternoon for all of Boys Travel Hoop

It was an afternoon of mixed results as the boys middle school travel teams journeyed to neighboring Hull for some pre-Super Bowl hoop action.

The 6th graders started the day. Robert Jones lit up the newly renovated Hull High School gymnasium with spectacular shooting, great passing and strong defense. All pistons were firing for the 6th grade group. Jack Carrier hit two baseline jumpers in a row for Cohasset, enabling the boys in blue to take an early 12-4 lead.

The game was fast paced and full of action. Frequent substitutions kept fresh legs on the court for Cohasset. Hull quickly called a timeout and regrouped, scoring three unanswered baskets.

Derek Youngman frequently found himself in the right place at right time with his defensive steals and his ability to convert these steals to points for Cohasset. Whether he was going the distance himself, or feeding a streaking Jones for the fast break, Youngman's focus and determination proved to be unstoppable.

The second half started out strong with the Jones/Youngman tag team proving to be too much for Hull to handle. Anders Goetz got in on the action and was a tenacious defensive threat to Hull with his quickness and anticipation. Gabe Seksay dominated the paint. Not only was he a rebounding menace, he blocked a shot, preventing Hull points.

Drew Cobin hit a sweet 15-foot jumper to give Cohasset a comfortable 10-point lead.

On the next transition, while pressing, Cobin accurately anticipated the long pass and stole the ball. Eric Wasal took to the low post and rebounded well, converting offensive rebounds to points. Sam Richardson came on strong, open for the fast break layup and sinking two critical free throws in the second half.

Robbie Hill, Mike Monaco and Ben Campbell confidently managed the tempo of the game with controlled and precision passing and strong defense. Youngman scored nine and Jones, with his own persona cheering section, contributed 18 points in the victory.

The seventh grade boys got off to a quick start with Johnny Maher feeding an open John Kearney for the first points. Taylor McQuade then found a waiting Robby McCunney for another two. Things looked promising.

Maher was strong defensively with great anticipation, stealing the ball from waiting Hull players. Cohasset was outsized by Hull and it took solid positioning and boxing out from McQuade, Maher and Chris Brown to prevent second chance points for Hull.

Eamon Davis was a defensive threat with his quick hands, tormenting the Hull point guards. Davis with a great steal went coast to coast for the easy bucket, not once but twice.

An early turned ankle kept playmaker Kevin O'Connell sidelined for much of the game.

Solid passing in the first half, and Cohasset's ability to find the open man kept the game exciting. Maher found Will Wise for two and then Brendan Doonan for two. Jeff Charles kept up the defensive pressure and with nothing but wind at his tail, and converted a steal for a bucket.

The halftime break was a not a benefit to Cohasset as the boys came out in the second half cold and had difficulty finding the net. Hull took advantage of the cold hands of Cohasset and not only tied the game but took the lead for the first time.

Cohasset's strength of passing and shooting in the first half was absent in the second half. Despite playing with nothing but heart, they ended up on the short end of the game. Davis was the high scorer with eight points followed by Maher with seven and McCunney with six.

In what can only be described as a David vs. Goliath match up, the eighth graders were outsized by Hull.

Not to be intimidated, Cohasset got on the board first with an Evan Richardson to John Sturino bucket. Nick Savage, playing bigger than he truly is, ripped a massive rebound and fed Richardson for an easy lay up.

Would this game end up with the good guys winning like the fairy tale? Hull quickly regrouped and began a run and gun offensive strategy, scoring frequently. Cohasset valiantly tried to keep step for step with their longer legged opponents, but struggled.

Danny Brady kept strong pressure on Hull, stealing the ball and keeping them from scoring. On Hull's next possession it was replay time, with Brady stealing the ball and going the distance for two.

Dan Martin, facing bigger opponents, used precision timing in blocking shots and grabbing rebounds. Positioning in the paint allowed Cohasset to try to compete for rebounds. Cohasset's advantage in this match up was their quickness, as Marcus Charles stole the ball on the press and found Martin in the paint.

Owen Landon was tireless using strong defensive pressure. Nick Simonds and Mike Fithian traded big man responsibilities with Martin, Savage and Adam Berger.

Hull came out in the second half stronger and faster than in the first half. They built an insurmountable lead. In what could be perceived as an act of un-neighborly conduct, the Hull coach kept his starting rotation in until the nine-minute mark despite the likelihood that our boys in blue wouldn't be able to catch up.

Not willing to go quietly, the Cohasset squad kept up the pressure. Brady for Ryan Daly for a bucket, Landon drove the lane for two, and Lenny Brown found Brady for two. In the end, however, David did not beat Goliath.

Girls travel hoops report

8th grade girls defeat Carver

A balanced scoring attack and tough defense were the key elements in the eighth grade girls' 33-16 victory over Carver at the CHS gym Sunday afternoon.

Ten players of the 14-member squad put points up on the board with no player getting more than six.

Kayla Farren and Gabriella Flibotte tingled the twines for six points each, while Maura Barnes, Carly Zappolo, and Sammi Lehr all chipped in with four point efforts. Carly Salerno, Kalie Madge, Tess Calorio, Sarah Coggins, and Rachel McMorris also hit for a bucket apiece.

The Blue & White's half-court trap proved too much for Carver, as Madeline Leahy, Caitlin Mahoney, and Marissa Tangherlini each had big steals that were converted into Cohasset lay-ups. Liz Tetreault had two blocked shots to help the Cohasset Eights dominate the inside.

The eighth graders continue to improve each week and are really getting the hang of the fast-paced, very competitive South Shore League.

6th graders clinch a playoff berth

The sixth grade girls split a pair of games over the weekend, dropping a tough, hard-fought 16-11 decision to highly-ranked Hanson Saturday night, but then bouncing back to run away with a Super Sunday 32-6 triumph over Carver at the Cohasset High gym.

The Sixers now stand at 6-5 on the season, with the victory over Carver clinching a playoff spot in this, their first year in the South Shore League.

The Carver win also was notable for a number of other reasons:

– Carli Haggerty pumped in 16 points, a best-ever offensive effort by a member of this Sixer team;

– The 32 points marked the team's second highest-ever point output;

– In addition to Haggerty, five other Sixers lit up the scoreboard. Emma Quigley sank two, three point field goals, giving her three on the season; Lindsay Davis and Liza Kinneally both tossed in a hoop and a free throw; and Kate French and Logan Pratt each hit for a bucket.

The coaching staff also had high praise for guards Amy Costa, Olivia Murphy, Rachel Fredey, and Caroline Fein who

COASTAL STARS

Squirt A

Connor Maher anchored a stingy defense, and Dan LeBlanc scored the game's only goal, as the Squirt A Coastal Stars earned a 1-0 win over the Brewins. The game's defensive tone was established early when Mike Carbone's give-and-go with Neil Conway was saved and Steven Harrington was denied from in front.

The Stars set up several opportunities with sharp passing, but the Brewins goalie made stops on Jonathan Spitz and Patrick Burchill. EJ Culhane, DJ Evans, Kevin McDougall, and LeBlanc were superb in front of Maher, and the Stars forwards backchecked aggressively.

Jake Durkin, Harrington, and Conway got back to disrupt potential breaks. With just over seven minutes left in the second, LeBlanc picked up a loose puck in the neutral zone and skated it across the blue line. Finding daylight at the right circle, LeBlanc jetted past the defense, cut in on net, and backhanded inside the right post for the 1-0 lead.

The Brewins defense stayed tight after the goal. Trevor Salmon fed Carbone in front, but the shot was saved. Chris Carpenter's give-and-go with Harrington was saved. Spitz' shot was saved, and Harrington was robbed on the rebound. Conway set up Salmon out front, but the shot was saved. Meanwhile, the Stars defense was even better than the Brewins'.

Maher took a point-blank shot off the chest. Culhane broke up a 2-on-1. Kevin McDougall, DJ Evans, and Dan LeBlanc scrambled to break up plays in front. With 7:17 left in the game, the Stars incurred a penalty. Steven Harrington, Chris Carpenter, EJ Culhane, Dan LeBlanc, Mike Carbone, and Patrick Burchill combined to kill the man advantage. Kevin McDougall, Dan LeBlanc, Neil Conway, and Jake Durkin killed another penalty two minutes later. Maher made two brilliant saves, one on a shot from in front and the other on the rebound.

The Brewins pulled their goalie with a minute left, but the Stars withstood the extra skater and left town with the win.

Mite B

Reminiscent of the Patriots style of play, the 13-1-1 Coastal Stars Mite B team continued to outplay the competition. Coming off a bye week, the Stars showed no signs of rust when they out-hustled and out-muscled the Falmouth Mite B team.

At 8:32 in the first frame, Matt Doyle opened the scoring flood gate. Aidan Beresford (aka "The A Train") got the helper on Doyle's first goal.

At 6:22 Tucker Ambrose gained the blue line, shredded 3 Falmouth players and backhanded the Stars 2nd goal. The penultimate goal of the first period came at 1:46. Doyle featured a pass to a streaking Patrick Graham who then sent a lead pass to Bryan Bowman. Bowman scored a blistering shot 5-hole. With 45 seconds to play in the first period, defenseman Brendan Evitts (aka "Orr on Ice"), sent a laser slap shot from the blue line which found the back of the Falmouth net in a hurry.

Not to be outshined by his twin brother, Jack Evitts started the second period from behind his own net and went coast to coast .....Ray Bourque style to score on a wrap around. At 6:19 Sam Rice muscled the puck out of the corner and shoveled a picturesque pass to "A-Train" Beresford who went top shelf to make the score 6-0. Nineteen seconds later, Doyle scored his second with a missile wrist shot.

In an effort to stop the barrage of Stars offense, Falmouth called a time out and went on an offensive attack. Falmouth began swarming the Stars net only to be denied by Goalie Kal Maier. Maier stood tall between the pipes and showed Tom Brady calmness to any shots on net.

The defensive tandem of Michael Lund and Robert Reidy looked like Brad Park and Bobby Orr - preventing any shots on Maier.

Trailing 7-0 Falmouth put a great offensive effort on the ice but couldn't penetrate the defensive strength of the next shift, Declan Leahy and James Hussey. Hussey would stand them up and Leahy would sit them down.

The front line of Curtis Golden, Joey Redfearn and Tom Powers made you forget about the striking NHL players. Golden, Redfearn and Powers were clicking on all cylinders and scored the final goal of the second period, Golden to Redfearn to Powers who blasted a one timer past the outstretched Falmouth goaltender.

Game – Set - Match!

Mite C2

The Coastal Stars Mite C2 hockey team lost a heartbreaker to Duxbury on Saturday 1-0 at Hobomock Arena.

The Stars played solid defensive hockey all game, displaying solid back checking and thwarting several breakaway scoring chances by Duxbury with great hustle plays. Mats Nelson, Shaelyn Tobin, and Robert Bothwell were all standouts on defense and Tucker Antico played a solid game double shifting through out.

The two teams skated to a scoreless first period. The Stars White Line centered by Derek Benson with Brian Mathews and Tucker Antico on wings and Shaelyn Tobin and Robert Bothwell on defense provided good offensive pressure during the period but were stonewalled by a strong Duxbury defense and good goaltending.

Benson had the best scoring chance of the second period taking a puck from his own blue line and beating the Duxbury defense towards the goal only to be stopped by an outstanding save from Duxbury's goalie. Andrew Kuppens, Seamus Ryan, and Harry Sheldon all played a strong period keeping the puck in the Duxbury zone for most of their shifts.

Duxbury got on the board early in the third period. Christopher Phillips, who was once again stellar in goal for the Stars made a super save on a Duxbury Breakaway. However, Duxbury was able to score on the rebound. The Stars red line had several scoring chances in their last shift of the game with both Antico and Ryan just missing goals.

After pulling the goalie in the final shift, the Stars "Fire" line consisting of Kyle Bowman, Gunnar McKenzie, Jo Jo Carbone, Mats Nelson, Derek Benson, and Brian Mathews had several chances at tying the game but in the end came up a little short.

Squirt C4

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 team took second place in the Martha's Vineyard Invitational Hockey Tournament Jan. 28-30, 2005. The Stars squad won the first three games on Friday and Saturday, qualifying them for the championship game on Sunday verses Brockton.

The Stars arrived on the Island ready to play, shutting out the South Shore Seahawks 5-0 in the first game Friday night. Stars defenders Tristan Wiggin, Nick Craig, Jonathan Gardner and RJ Neuls stole the show, intercepting and turning aside any Seahawk players setting foot in their zone. Michael McPartlin opened the scoring for the Stars in the first period. Forwards James Daley and Andrew Tautkus widened the win with two goals each in the second and third periods.

The Stars faced the Taunton Brewins on Saturday morning and came away with a 6-1 win. Tautkus racked up another two goals for the Stars. Ryan Melia, Daley, Gardner and Tommy Coyne each scored to keep the Stars out front for the entire game.

Saturday night, the Stars faced their toughest opponent, Brockton. Both teams came into the game undefeated. The Stars played shift after shift of intense hockey and came away with a hard-earned 5-4 win. Stars defensemen Wiggin, Craig, Gardner and Neuls came up big again, repeatedly feeding forwards Daley, Tautkus, Seamus Feeney, Tautkus, Melia, McPartlin, Liam Rose and Coyne the puck.

McPartlin and Daley capitalized, scoring two goals each. Taukus also slipped one past the Brockton netminder. Stars netminder Max Hemingway made several exceptional saves to keep his team in the game.

On Sunday morning, the Stars faced Brockton once again in the championship showdown. The Stars made several rallies into the Brockton zone but were denied by a vengeful Brockton defense and goalie. Brockton scored in the first and second period. During the third, both teams fought to the end, but it would be Brockton that came up with the 2-0 win. Despite the loss, Stars goalie Max Hemingway had his best game, saving over 20 shots fired on his net, including an eye-popping glove save that awed all in attendance.

Stars C-2

The Coastal Stars C-2 team continued its win streak with a shut-out over Hanover at Gallo Arena on Super Sunday.

Alec Hurd provided keen goaltending behind a determined Coastal Stars defense of Adam Jackson, Coleman Hernon, Jake Denton and Mick Barry. Anchored on more than one occasion by the, ever-present, Chris Bjorkman.

Exceptional passing by Nick Mulrey, Ethan Maher, Brandon Queenan, Colin Bell and Tim Cavanaro allowed Nate Morse and Jack Kuppens to score two goals each in the 4-0 shutout.

The Hanover team never gave up on the game. The shutout seemed a formality until a Hanover player streaked in from an errant pass and broke away with ten seconds left on the clock. He had Hurd beat with six seconds left as he faked right and went left. In desperation, Hurd dove across the crease with his stick to deflect the screaming shot wide and preserve the shut-out.

Coastal Stars C-2 improved to 19-2-1.

Girls travel hoops report

FROM GIRLS TRAVEL, PAGE 19

pressured the opposing guards early in the game with a half-court trap which forced many turnovers by a Carver team which had scored 18 points against the Blue & White in their first meeting this season. Forward Carly Martin also turned in her usually-solid game under the boards, hauling in a gaggle of rebounds.

In Saturday's tough loss to Hanson, the Blue & White showed that they can play against any team in the league. Cohasset's 21-10 defeat in the teams' first meeting earlier this season is the only game thus far this year in which the Cohasset girls were never really in it. However, on Hanson's home court Saturday night the Blue & White almost turned the tables. The Sixers played a tight, 2-3 zone defense which limited Hanson to just two field goals as Cohasset took a 9-5 lead at the half.

Haggerty scored six of the Blue & White points thanks to some fine assists from Emma Musto and Quigley, the latter tossing an "over the top of the defense" pass from half court into the lane for a Haggerty short jumper. Kinneally hit a bucket and French sank a free throw to round out the Cohasset first-half scoring.

However, with the Cohasset girls still struggling with beating a full-court press, the Blue & White managed just one field goal by Haggerty the rest of the way. Hanson, on the other hand, was the beneficiary of two obvious non-calls by the refs for traveling which would have negated five Hansen points.

However, the key factor in the game was that Cohasset hit on just 1-of-14 free throw attempts, compared to their opponents' 4-for-8 shooting from the charity stripe. If Cohasset had hit a few more of their 10 free throws in the first half, the Blue & White girls might have been able to open up a bigger lead by the intermission with a different final outcome. Still, despite the defeat, the play of the Sixers was highly-encouraging – and the coaching staff promises a lot of free throw practice in the weeks ahead.

5th grade boys win in triple-OT

Think the Superbowl was exciting? You should have seen the action at the former Weymouth Naval Air Station last Saturday when the Cohasset 5th Grade Boy's Basketball team battled Hull through 40 minutes of regular game time and 3 overtimes before finally winning 21-19

With just 11 seconds left in the last OT, Robbie Mahoney made a look-away out of bounds pass under the hoop to Jamie Faber who swished the 3 footer to seal the win.

This low scoring game saw the lead change four or five times in the OT periods. Every basket and every rebound was met with thunderous cheers from the Cohasset and Hull fans. Big buckets were made in the game by Pat McCormack, Willy Brown, Jamie Timothy, John Collins, and Chris Murphy.

Pat Kearney made a clutch free throw on the front end of a one – and – one to send the game into the second OT. Jay Salerno and Nate Brown dominated the boards with 7 rebounds each, denying Hull of any second chances on a missed shot.

The win more than likely qualified the boys for the upcoming playoffs, a great accomplishment for their first year of travel ball. And while they'll play hundreds of games in the years to come, it is a safe bet that they will never forget this one!

Mariner papers win NEPA awards

Community Newspaper Company/South was among newspapers recognized for editorial excellence at the annual New England Press Association awards banquet held Saturday in Boston. A record-number of entries were submitted by daily and weekly newspapers throughout New England for the annual contest.

What we deliver to our readers each week is something we take great pride in, and it is especially rewarding to have that work recognized for excellence."

Among the awards handed out, CNC/South received four first-place awards. The Marshfield Mariner reporters Amanda Gontarz and Elizabeth Malloy won first place in health reporting for their series of stories about the possibility of hepatitis being traced to Rick's Deli and the subsequent fallout.

Braintree Forum editor Cathy Conley earned a first place in the editorial writer category. Matthew Gill garnered first place for social issues feature story for the Scituate Mariner and photographer Chris Bernstein won a first place for feature photography for the Abington/Rockland Mariner.

Other CNC/South awards included:

Samantha Brown, Cohasset Mariner, second place, coverage of racial or ethnic issue

The Hingham Journal, second place, editorial pages

Matthew Gill, Scituate Mariner, second place, serious column

Patrick Cronin, Abington/Rockland Mariner third place, general news story

Alice Coyle, Abington-Rockland Mariner, third place, arts and entertainment reporting

Patrick Cronin, Abington/Rockland Mariner, third place, investigative reporting

Cohasset Mariner staff reporter Samantha Brown placed second in the annual NEPA Better Newspaper Contest in coverage of a "racial or ethnic issue" with her story about , CHS senior Shan Shan Nie, who is Chinese and was one of 50 METCO students in Cohasset.

OUR WORLD UPDATE

Donations for estate sale are needed

Time To Think Spring Cleaning Cohasset's own Lord & Ladies has begun planning for a giant estate sale to be held on Saturday, May 14, to benefit Our World, Children's Global Discovery Museum in Cohasset. So start cleaning out those attics, garages and closets. Donations of all types of furniture, mirrors and pictures, rugs, lamps, tableware, table linens, books and brick-a-brack are being sought.

Proceeds generated from this estate sale will go towards the installation of the Museum's new Bio-Diversity exhibit slated to open September 2005.

Drop off your treasures at Our World on Wednesday's from 4 until 6 p.m. and Thursday's from noon until 2 p.m. or call the Museum's Director, Michele Dupuis, at 781-383-3198 to arrange a specific drop-off time. Your donation is tax-deductible.

IT'S HAPPENING

Amateur gardeners meet Feb. 15

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet in the Community Meeting Room of the Pratt Library on Feb. 15, at 9:30 a.m. Visitors are welcome.

A short business meeting will be followed by a program: "Name that plant, horticultural identification."

Coffee will be served.

The next meeting will be March 15. "Floral Arrangements in Recycled Containers."

For more information, call Martha Hurtig at 781-383-0530.

Living History tape featured in program

The Cohasset Historical Society will begin its Spring Lecture Series with a review of one of the Living History tapes. On Wednesday evening, Feb. 16, Bert Pratt's interview with Elinor Kennedy, a Cohasset school teacher for more than 25 years, will highlight "the way things were." The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Society's Headquarters in the Pratt Building, 106 N. Main St.

Mrs. Kennedy was a very special teacher who is still very much a part of the hearts and minds of former students. Even after retirement, many pupils made it a point to keep in touch with her. This program is open to both members and non-members. Plan to attend and bring your school memories and memorabilia to share. There is no charge for the program and light refreshment will be served.

Other programs in the Spring Lecture Series, held the third Wednesday of the month, will include; March 16, Steven Bobo, "The Pinkies and Cohasset's Maritime History"; April 20, David Wadsworth, "A Virtual Walking Tour"; and May 18, Jim Baker "A 16th Century World View".

All programs are free of charge and open to the public.

Lunch and camaraderie

The Cohasset Senior Center is the location for Scituate Cohasset Newcomer's Club's (SCNC) first annual lunch and cookie decorating. See children's smiles light up the face of some senior members of the community and make some new friends. The lunch will be held at the South Shore Community Center at 3 North Main St., on Wednesday, Feb. 23 at noon for lunch and cookie decorating.

The Newcomer's Club will provide a catered lunch for all attendees (incl. volunteers and children) of salad, lasagna, pizza and ice cream. Supplies for cookie decorating to be provided by Newcomer's Club. This event is recommended for children over the age of three, and a caregiver.

Valentines Fund Dance is Feb. 19 at Atlantica

The Third Annual Valentines Fund Dance to benefit the homeless will be held this year at the Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor Saturday evening, Feb. 19, from 8 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. The requested donation is $20 per person for the creative black-tie event. In view of people's contributions to Southeast Asia, the donation this year has been lowered by 20 per cent.

While our hearts go out to the more than 3 million made homeless by the tsunami, we must also take care of the more than 3 million adults and children who experience homelessness each year here in America. There will be dancing to two great rock and roll bands, The Pemberton Hill Players and Shaken Not Stirred. There will also be auctions of art works and a drumhead signed by all five members of Aerosmith, along with silent auctions and raffles of local artists' works, gift certificates and merchandise from local and Harvard Square merchants and restaurants.

Absolutely all proceeds go to benefit Bread & Jams, Inc., a Self-advocacy Center and day shelter located in Harvard Square, Cambridge. Hors-d'oeuvres will be provided by Atlantica staff. For dinner reservations pre-event call Atlantica at 781-383-0900. To reserve tickets for the event call 781-383-6568 as a limited number of tickets will be available at the door.

Storytellers aid Tsunami victims

On Feb. 18, at 7:30 p.m., two storytellers, Jay O'Callahan, who was recently featured twice on channel five's "Chronicle Magazine" and Derek Burrows, who has just returned from presenting programs at the White House, combine their talents for a Story Tsunami Benefit at the First Parish Unitarian Church in Cohasset, also featured will be Flutist Barbara Wall, storyteller Bob Reiser and storytelling hosts Andrea Lovett and Wiesy MacMillan.

What makes this fundraiser unique, is that the tellers will be telling many of the folktales, myths and legends from the Tsunami affected areas and sending the money back to countries where these tales originated.

Folktales often reflect the cultures of their origins and in this way give the listener an opportunity to meet the people through their stories. O'Callahan will also be telling community building stories as a way to draw the two communities together through stories. This performance is for families with children no younger than 12.

There will be a second performance with Andrea Lovett, Wiesy MacMillan, Diane Possitonian, vocalist, Katie Shepard, harpist Jen Poole, on Sunday Feb. 20. "Children's World Global Discovery Museum, (in back of Cohasset Library), for younger children at 2 p.m. Tickets are $10.

These relief efforts are a collaboration of the National Storytellers Network (NSN)/the First Parish Unitarian Church and the Children's Global Discovery Museum. The NSN is producing these storytelling events nationally with storytellers donating their performances to benefit the Tsunami Survivors. The entire proceeds for this event will be given to the Red Cross (through The Unitarian Church) and Oxfam (through Children's Museum and NSN) where 99 percent of your dollars will be given to those that need it most. The evening concert will be at 23 North Main St., The Unitarian Church. Tickets cost will be $25 in advance, $30 at the door. The following merchants will have tickets for sale: Nobles Camera Shops, Buttonwoods Books, Storybook Cove, Hanover, Marshfield Hills General Store, Marshfield Hills. For more information, call 781-871-5892.

Tea party rescheduled

A Valentine Tea Party will be held Friday, Feb. 25 at 2 p.m. at Second Congregational Church, Bates Hall.

The event is sponsored by Cohasset Elder Affairs and will feature Marie Frasier Dunn, Tea Historian, Specialist, and Lecturer who will present an afternoon Tea Seminar, including History of Tea, Legend of Tea, Customs of Tea, Tea Leaf Readings, The Finale. Tea and desert will be served.

Call 781-383-9112 or come into the center to sign up. As seats will be limited. All seniors welcome.

There is more to a nice cup of tea then people are aware of. Tea has played a part of History, Health, and even Politics. The event has been rescheduled from Feb. 11 because of the potential of snowy weather.

Family Square Dance at First Parish House

First Parish in Cohasset, a Unitarian Universalist congregation, will host a Family Square Dance Sunday, Feb. 13, from 4 to 6 p.m. Dan Pearl, a caller well-known throughout Massachusetts, will be accompanied by Carol and Steve Bittenson, who play fiddle and guitar, respectively.

Beginners and other non-experts are particularly welcome — especially children of all ages. Pear and his group will explain square-dancing basics. This promises to be a lively way to beat the mid-winter blahs. Cocoa, hot cider, and cookies will be provided.

This event will be held in the Parish House on Cohasset Common, and the entire community is invited. There is a nominal charge to cover out-of-pocket expenses: $10 per person or $15 for an entire family. Tickets may be purchased through Sandy Bailey, parish administrator, 781-383-1100, or at the door.

Wine-tasting brunch benefits Alzheimer's

On Sunday, Feb. 20, Bridgemans Restaurant in Hull will host a Wine-Tasting Brunch by the Sea at noon. There will be an exciting menu of food and wines to accompany each course. An expert will explain each of the wines. Paul Wahlberg, the young and passionate chef at Bridgemans, promises an exciting menu. Bridgemans received an "excellent" rating from Zagats Review 2004 and "Best New Restaurant South of Boston in Boston Magazine's "Best of Boston." A raffle for baskets of wines and goodies will add to the fun, along with the amazing view of the beach.

Above cost proceeds of this event underwrite activities of ADSGSS, Inc., which is entirely supported by donations and volunteered staffing. Since 1938 the monthly newsletter, mailing costs, outreach brochures, packets of information, help line and Family Respite Assistance Program (1991), which helps families pay for local day-health programs, are part of the ADSGSS mission to help local families cope with Alzheimer's disease.

A Wine-tasting Brunch by the Sea will delight your palate as well as benefit those local families who depend on ADSGSS for information and support.

Reservations are a must, seats are $65 per person. Call JoAnn Mitchell at 781-749-5417 for reservations.

Art Deco gala Feb. 12

There will be an elegant evening at the Paul Pratt Building Feb. 12 at 7 p.m. to benefit the Cohasset Historical Society. This very special party is designed to show off the society's new headquarters and highlight the possibilities of this historic setting as an exciting community space adaptable to many uses.

The decor for the Art Deco Gala will be the creation of "Party by Design" and Art Deco dresses from the society's unique Cohasset Collection will be on display.

Passed hors d'oeuvres and an elegant buffet will be catered by The Borrowed Butler. An open bar will provide the drink of your choice.

A jazz trio of talented South Chore Conservatory musicians will play music of the '20s and '30s for listening and dancing.

Come in Art Deco attire or not! Valet parking will be available at St. Anthony Church.

OBITUARIES

L. Emmett Holt III

L. Emmett "Bim" Holt III, 75, died Feb. 3, 2005 at Massachusetts General Hospital after along battle with leukemia.

He was the former Assistant General Manager Operations 1977-1981 and then Assistant General Manager - Public Affairs 1981 to 1984 for General Dynamics, Electric Boat Division.

Upon graduation from Yale as an engineer in 1951, he started work at Electric Boat Company (later to become General Dynamics) in Groton, Conn., during the very early stages of the design and construction of the first nuclear submarine, Nautilus. He was one of the early pioneers of the nuclear Navy. In 1964 he moved to Cohasset to oversee submarine construction at General Dynamics' newly acquired shipyard in Quincy. In the 1970's Bim managed the design and engineering team in Quincy that built the Lykes Steamship Seabees, the largest dry cargo ships of their time and then the largest liquid natural gas tankers ever built.

In 1977 he returned to Electric Boat as Assistant General Manager - Operations, responsible for all shipyard construction and testing of nuclear powered submarines. In 1981 he was appointed by the Secretary of the Navy to the Committee for the Joint Study of the Trident/SSN 688 Submarine Program reporting directly to the Secretary of the Navy. He retired in 1984 as Assistant General Manager - Public Affairs.

Bim was devoted to his community in Cohasset and was a past member and chairman of the Advisory Committee, Government Study Committee, Harbor Study Committee. Historic District Commission. The Quincy City Hospital Building Advisory Committee and a past commodore of the Cohasset Yacht Club. While living in Mystic and Stonington, Conn. He was a director at the Lawrence Memorial Hospital, The Southeastern Connecticut Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Ram Island Yacht Club, past Rear Commodore of the Wadawanuck Yacht Club, and long-standing member of the Cruising Club of America.

Boats were his passion, especially ones powered by sail. He had three Limbo's that the family cruised and raced extensively along the East Coast. to Bermuda, and into the Great Lakes.

In retirement he picked up his hammer to build a summer house on Vinalhaven Island in Maine. Along with family and friends, he spent three summers as carpenter, wall boarder, plumber, electrician, painter, and dock builder. He continued to refine his skills as a craftsmen and built many fine pieces of furniture for his children. During the off season he and Lib enjoyed traveling with trips to Africa, Turkey, Spain, Alaska, Portugal, the Baltic's, Ireland and France.

First diagnosed with acute myelogenous leukemia in 2002, Bim was fortunate to achieve a remission for two years, thanks to the devoted and talented health care team at Mass, General Hospital. Last year he and his wife, Lib; bought a boat, named her Denial, and enjoyed cruising "in denial" all the way from Pensacola, Fla. to Vinalhaven, Maine.

He leaves his wife Elizabetn "Lib" (Alcorn) Hall, his wife of 50 years; son, L. Emmett Holt IV and his wife, Gwen of Hamilton, Mass.; daughters Louisa Boatwright and her husband, Bill of Newport, R.I. and Carrie Scholz and her husband, Chris of Skaneateles, N.Y.; and grandchildren Cordelia and Calvert Hatt, Chelsea Scholz and Victoria Boatwright.

A Memorial Service was held at the Second Congregational Church on the Common in Cohasset on Tuesday, Feb. 8. Interment will be at Brown's Head Cemetery, Vinalhaven, Maine this summer.

Arrangements were handled by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, gifts in his memory can be made to Massachusetts General Hospital Ellison 14 c/o MGH Development Office, 100 Charles River Plaza, Suite 600, Boston, MA 02114.

Doris I. Gould

Doris I. (Caplette) Gould, 91, a 50-year resident of Cohasset, died Jan. 19, 2005, at Life Care Center of the South Shore in Scituate.

Born in Uxbridge, daughter of the late Joseph N. and Mary Caplette of Sutton, she was a graduate of Millbury High School and Becker College in Worcester.

Mrs. Gould was employed as a lab technician for The Felters Company in Millbury.

A veteran of World War II, she served in the WAVES as a yeoman third class, stationed at Pensacola Naval Air Station.

She enjoyed gardening, cooking and travel.

Mrs. Gould was a member of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset and a volunteer for the Cohasset Elder Affairs.

Wife of the late Roland V. Gould, she leaves a sister, Marjorie M. Dunn of Gardner; two nephews, Kevin W. Dunn of Marshfield and Brendan J. Dunn of Landing, N.J.; a niece, Kristin M. Landry of Fitchburg; eight grandnieces and nephews; and six great-grandnieces and nephews.

Graveside services were conducted in Saco, Maine at the Laurel Hill Cemetery.

Arrangements were by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 North Main St., Cohasset, 02025.

Irma James

Irma (Mulhern) James, 78, of Cohasset, retired vice president of Hingham Institute of Savings, died Feb. 5, 2005, at home.

Mrs. James worked at the bank for 16 years and retired in 1975.

A lifelong resident of Cohasset, she graduated from Cohasset High School in 1944.

Wife of the late Eustis A. James, she leaves three sons, Alan S. James of Elgin, Texas, Richard B. James of Canton and David E. James of Aurora, Ill.; a brother, George M. Mulhern of California; a sister, Louise Davis of East Millinocket, Maine; six grandchildren; and nine great-grandchildren.

A private memorial service was conducted at Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. Burial was private in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Arrangements were by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Faith Quilt being created at St. Stephen's

"It is my hope that this quilt project will enable people of all ages and faith experiences to learn from one another."
— The Rev. Beth Wheatley-Dyson

Beginning this Saturday, Feb. 12, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset will be hosting the creation of an interfaith, pictorial "Faith Quilt." Each Saturday from noon-2p.m. throughout February and March, participants will gather at Walton Roger's Hall at St. Stephen's, to share the stories of their own faith journeys and collaborate in the design and creation of the quilt.

For participants from St. Stephen's the exercise will be a Lenten Program, and interested individuals from all faith traditions are invited to take part in the process.

The Rev. Beth Wheatley-Dyson, Assistant Rector of St. Stephen's, hopes the quilt-making process will bring the community together in a new way.

"It is my hope that this quilt project will enable people of all ages and faith experiences to learn from one another," she says. "It is through our shared dialogue and work that connections are made and our individual faith journeys deepened."

The St. Stephen's Community Faith Quilt is one of50 faith quilts being created throughout greater Boston, as part of a larger three-year interfaith dialogue effort, the Faith Quilts Project. Noted Boston artist and quilt-maker Clara Wainwright, founder of Boston's First Night celebration, was inspired to launch the Faith Quilts Project by the events of 9-11 , particularly after seeing a PBS documentary one year later titled "Faith and Doubt at Ground Zero."

"After September 11, I became fascinated by the power of faith for both good and evil," Wainwright says. "I decided to explore different faiths through the medium of quilts, which seems a positive gesture in such a polarized world."

Collaborative Faith Quilts are currently underway in communities in and around Boston, representing many faith traditions, including Muslim, Jewish, Buddhist, Hindu, Mormon, Native American, Baha'i, Wiccan and several Christian denominations. The 50 completed quilts, including the St. Stephen's community quilt, will be exhibited in April 2006 in a month-long, city-wide celebration of "Faith, the Arts and Community," accompanied by faith-inspired music, film, poetry and dance.

The grand opening exhibit will be held at the Boston Center for the Arts Cyclorama in Boston's South End, followed by exhibitions in other public venues, including the Boston Public Library, Boston City Hall, and the Cambridge Multicultural Arts Center.

Those interested in participating in the St. Stephen's Community Faith Quilt are invited to drop in St. Stephen's, 16 Highland St., Saturdays between noon and 2pm, from Feb. 12-March 19. There is no charge to participate. For more information contact Mary Downes at 781-545-5707, or visit the Faith Quilts Project web site to see images of quilts already completed: www.faithquilts.org

Abbey series talks of 'Cellular Wisdom'

Glastonbury Abbey's Interreligious lecture series "Listening to Other Voices: the Roots That Feed Us" continues Feb. 17, at 7:15 p.m. at the Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center in Hingham.

Dr. Joan King will speak on "Our Bodies — Inner Teachers of Wisdom." King is author of "Cellular Wisdom." She was on the faculty of Tufts University School of Medicine where she directed the neurosciences course and conducted research. She is the founder of "Beyond Success," an individual coaching program for developing potential and creativity.

Reservations are recommended, 781-749-2155. (Lectures are free, donations gratefully appreciated.)

Buddhist meditation

Buddhist meditation is held on the second and fourth Sundays, 7 p.m., at First Parish Hingham, Old Ship Church, 107 Main St., in the Parlor. All are welcome.

Old Ship classes

"Building Your Own Theology," which begins Sun., Feb. 13, 12:30 p.m., is a 4-5 session class, led by Gene Ward, First Parish (Old Ship) Hingham's intern minister.

A Unitarian Universalist adult religious education curriculum enables each participant to examine his or her religious beliefs in detail. Over these sessions, participants will develop a personal credo, a statement of religious understanding. Future session dates to be announced.

Attendance at all sessions is desirable. For more information, contact the church office at 781-749-1679.

Over 173,000 children in our community aren't sure when they'll have their next meal. Our children deserve better. With your help, we'll get food to the children who need it.

173,000 kids in eastern Massachusetts don't just go to bed tired. They also go hungry.

Give More Than Thanks this holiday season. We need money, food, and time to help in our efforts to end hunger in eastern Massachusetts. You can give in so many ways:

- For every $1 donated, The Food Bank can distribute $5 of donated food.
- For every 10 pounds of food donated, The Food Bank can distribute enough food to provide 7 meals.
- 10 volunteers can sort enough food in 3 hours to provide 1,850 meals.

The Greater Boston Food Bank is a non-profit organization that annually distributes enough food for over 16 million meals. Please join us in our efforts to provide food for our hungry friends, neighbors, and colleagues.

Everyone has a role in ending hunger.℠

Please visit us at www.gbfb.org or call 617-427-5200 to learn more about The Food Bank, to donate money, to donate food, or to volunteer your time.

Dennehy does justice to Trumbo

Brian Dennehy as Dalton Trumbo

Hollywood screenwriter's story takes the stage in Boston

The role of legendary screenwriter Dalton Trumbo ("Exodus," "Spartacus," "Roman Holiday" and "Papillon") — in "Trumbo: Red, White and Blacklisted," now at Boston's Virginia Wimberly Theatre — may not be the best-known part Brian Dennehy has ever played, but the actor still has great belief in the power of the story.

"I've done a lot of plays, and many of them have been great. The writing in this, however, is as good as anything I have ever done," explained Dennehy at a recent press conference at Boston's Calderwood Pavilion. "It requires an actor to be as dramatic, as funny and as bitter as any play I've ever done."

That's high praise from a performer who has won Tony Awards for his portrayals of two of the most fabled male characters in the American theater canon — Willy Loman in Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," and James Tyrone in "Long Day's Journey Into Night," by Eugene O'Neill.

Christopher Trumbo — by coincidence a Dennehy classmate at Columbia University — used his late father's correspondence to write "Trumbo," which tells the story of the writer who — in 1947 at the peak of his career — refused to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee, investigating allegations of rampant communism in the film industry, and was imprisoned for a year as one of the "Hollywood Ten." Trumbo's letters, most of which were written from jail, tell the story of his family's survival and his own quest to break the blacklist.

"Dalton Trumbo was a huge American figure. He could not have happened anywhere else in the world," says Dennehy. "He was an extraordinary man, someone with real passion and humor. He wrote all the time, and not just screenplays and novels, but letters to his wife, his son and even the telephone company. He was not only incredibly honest, but he also had a huge, deserved ego."

As an actor, Dennehy understands that screenwriters aren't well-known to most moviegoers. "I hope this piece can be a real learning experience for people who know little about Dalton Trumbo or the era in which he lived. It was a time in our history that was interesting, perverse and fascinating.

This piece (a hit off-Broadway with everyone from Nathan Lane, Alec Baldwin, Tim Robbins, and Richard Dreyfuss to Dennehy taking turns in the lead) has so much passion, humor, philosophy and family interaction that it works magnificently as a powerful human drama."

The Huntington Theatre Company will present Brian Dennehy in "Trumbo: Red, White and Blacklisted" at the Virginia Wimberly Theatre at the Stanford Calderwood Pavilion, 527 Tremont Street, Boston, through March 6. For tickets and information, call 617-266-0800 or visit either the box office or www.huntingtontheatre.org.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

COMING UP SHORT?

A recent study suggests that if you are short, you may be predisposed to hearing problems. According to Swedish researchers, the potential for adult hearing problems may develop during the prenatal period, and this potential appears to be particularly prevalent among shorter-than-average adults. These findings are based on the theory that events before birth, such as malnutrition or exposure to alcohol/nicotine, may cause disease in adulthood. Studies among randomly selected men have shown that short men were twice as likely to have hearing loss. The research also showed that shortness was associated with a family history of hearing loss. While studies such as this are in their preliminary stages, they might provide one more reason to get your hearing checked.

Your ability to hear is as unique as your fingerprints. Age, noisy environments, inherited deafness, medical conditions, and childhood and adult illnesses can all combine to produce different types of hearing losses in different people. We hope you'll turn to the services of a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER when you need help with your hearing. You can count on us to find the hearing instrument best suited to your hearing abilities. Have a free hearing test here at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building, in Weymouth. Just call 781-337-1144 for an appointment.

P.S. The study mentioned above also found that short workers had worse-than-expected hearing for their ages.

Red Sox brass offer tips on what to do off the field in Fort Myers

By MICHAEL O'CONNOR
HERALD STAFF WRITER

FORT MYERS, Fla. — It's only February: Valentine's Day hasn't even arrived, and the groundhog has promised that winter again will be the Guest Who Would Not Leave. On the other hand — or, more aptly, baseball mitt — pitchers and catchers will be reporting soon. That means spring training and that means Red Sox and that means this Gulf Coast wintering grounds of our very own World Champions. Given the newly exalted status of the Olde Town Team, it should come as no surprise that New Englanders again will be flocking to Florida for a wintertime look at their boys of summer. Veteran players, rookies and other camp-invitees will be swatting liners, grabbing grounders and remembering what it feels like to throw off a mound. And their fans, in shorts, shades and sandals, will be there to cheer them on — and get more autographs and face time than they ever will come opening day.

But spring training is not just about training; Fort Myers offers a lot more than Major League Baseball facilities. Indeed, there are plenty of things to do away from City of Palms Park, which the Sox have called home since 1993. And we contacted several folks with some serious Red Sox connections who made their preferences known. First off, Theo Epstein wants it known that he's down there to work, and that means long days at the team's facilities, followed by more work, with maybe a late bite at the place he and several colleagues lease. "I'll play my guitar and then hit the sack," the dutiful GM said.

But Epstein admits to having a weakness for exceedingly undercooked fish, and when he and his cadre break out, they head to Blu Sushi, 13451 McGregor Blvd. "It's one of the best places downtown, where they've really been developing what looks like older buildings (a la Quincy Market)," Epstein said. "And Blu has a good bar, too." The place is renowned for its martinis, and offers both indoor and outdoor seating. Farther along at 3583 McGregor Blvd., for those who prefer their food cooked at above room temperature, there's Brixz Grill & Bistro. Yeah, sashimi's on the menu, but so is pan-seared crab cake and Asian chicken skewers. Brixz also boasts a delectable filet mignon. Also on McGregor Boulevard (at No. 11481): Bostonians yearning for home cooking can check out Clancey's, a bar/restaurant that features both pub food and more ambitious fare.

Red Sox radio announcer Joe Castiglione, who has lived on the Massachusetts South Shore for years, recently purchased an off-season residence in the Fort Myers area because he and his family have come to enjoy the region. And a big part of the attraction is the array of recreational amenities to be found. "My wife and I like to ride bikes and use our kayaks," Castiglione said. "There are all kinds of places to do that down there." The Sanibel/Captiva mini-archipelago that juts into the Gulf just off Fort Myers boasts some of the best kayaking in North America. Sanibel is home to the world-renowned J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge, where paddlers can explore protected cays and coves, and even follow a meandering saltwater river. Hundreds of species of birds winter here — and yes, there are alligators to be observed (from a safe distance). "And the shell beaches on Sanibel are just incredible," Castiglione said. That view was shared by team part-owner Les Otten, who was participating in a Red Sox fantasy baseball camp last week with "The Swamps," which Otten described as "about 20 old guys from the Boston area. Just call them 'an elite group of seniors' who love the game." Otten described Sanibel and Captiva as "having the Caribbean right off Fort Myers. Absolutely beautiful."

He said that back on the mainland, visitors should explore the Thomas Edison Estate (2350 McGregor Blvd.), dedicated to the legacy of the city's famous winter resident (the Henry Ford Estate also is open for visitors nearby). Come mealtime, Otten and his fantasy campers head to the Veranda restaurant downtown (2122 Second St.) or hit the waterfront and Joe's Crab Shack (in the former Chart House restaurant at 2024 W. First St.). Cyclists can ride for miles along the Fort Myers shoreline. "It's so nice and flat," Castiglione said with a chuckle. "That's why we like it. And not much traffic." He also has pedaled the bike trails at Marco Island, about an hour's drive farther down the Gulf Coast. After all that exercise, he and his wife dine at his "all-time favorite Italian restaurant," Mona Lisa, 7091 College Parkway off Route 41.

Fishing at sunset at Fort Myers, Fla.

For shopping, he suggested the upscale Bell Tower center, which Castiglione compares to Boston's Copley Place. Sox assistant trainer Chris Correnti, whose main residence is in Fort Myers, said fishing, freshwater and salt, keeps plenty of visitors busy, including Sox players. "Some of the guys will go out on a charter for marlin and snook, and fish for bass on a lake," Correnti said. "I gotta say, the fishing down here's pretty good." Check out Magic Hook Charters (www.magichook.com) or Hawkeye Charters (www.fishwithhawkeye.com) to get a taste of what local waters have to offer. They also offer fly-fishing trips for light-tackle enthusiasts. Last but hardly least, the Sox trainer added, "There are endless golf courses around here." But you knew that, didn't you?

Unsung hero honored as top citizen

Coe is a member of 'Greatest Generation'

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

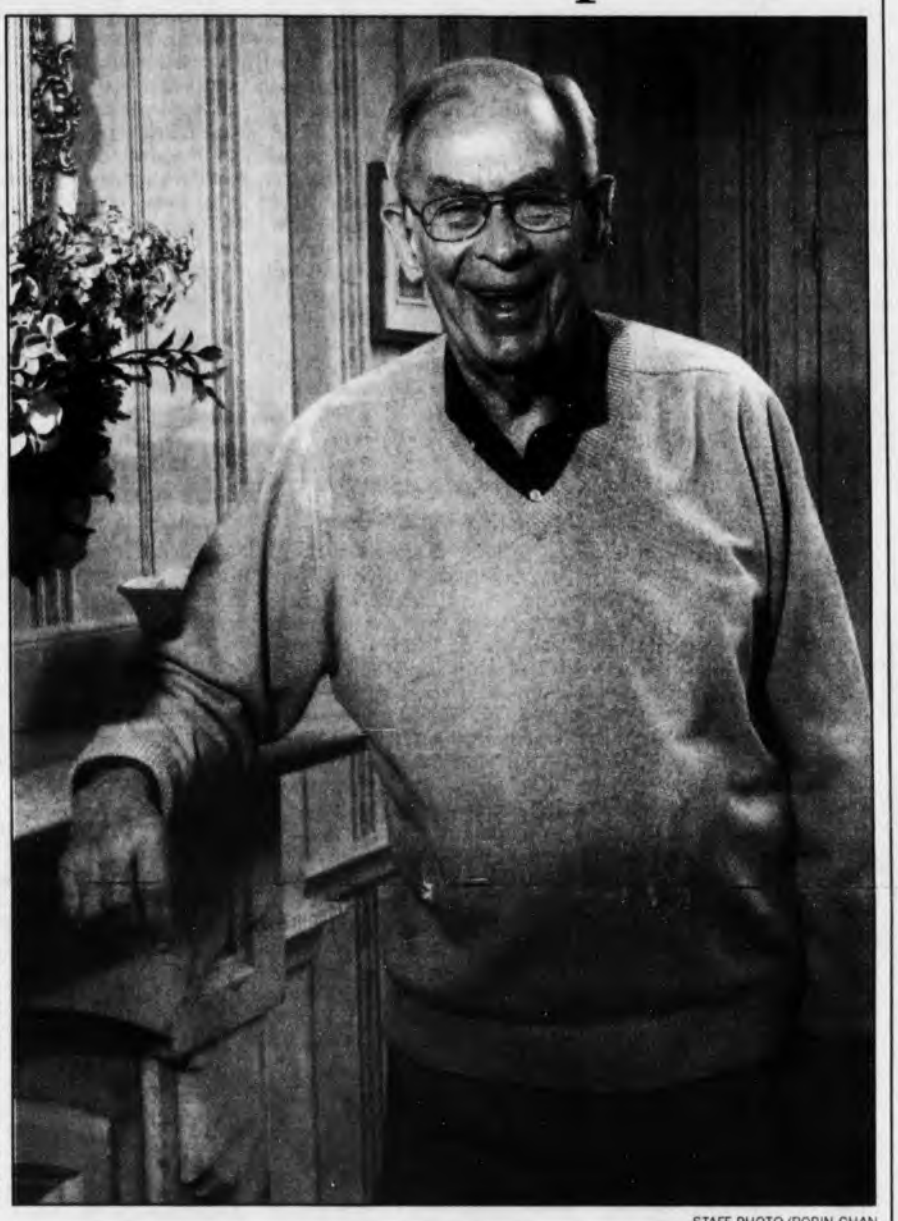
Tom Healy of Cushing Road knows the kind of man Joe Coe is.

When Healy's late wife was ill, Coe would stop by on Thursdays with a meal for Tom and Josephine, courtesy of the Senior Center.

Coe's kindness and friendship, which the two men developed years ago when their sons became childhood pals, propelled Healy to nominate Coe for Citizen of the Year, this year and in prior years.

"He's the most gentle guy in the world," Healy says.

Healy isn't alone in his assessment and although — with a total of 16 nominations from 21 different people — reaching a decision wasn't attained without considerable discussion, this year's selection committee unanimously decided to recognize Coe as the Citizen of the Year.



Although most of Coe's service is quiet and behind the scenes – he is best known to the wider community for his service as the beloved "Town Crier" each December during the annual Village Fair on the Town Common.

In a tri-cornered hat and armed with a bell, the self-professed "people person" meets, greets and directs hundreds of visitors to the various activities hosted by local churches at one of Cohasset's centerpiece events every year.

"I like people," says Coe, who was surprised and delighted with the news he was being honored as the town's top citizen. "I was very surprised and very pleased."

Today it's hard to imagine that

School board may see race

Four residents show interest

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Until Wednesday, the race for School Committee looked as if it might be dull. However, in true Cohasset fashion, at the 11th hour residents began coming out of the woodwork. If pulling nomination papers is an indication, there could be a two-way race for both open seats.

With the deadline fast approaching yesterday (Thursday), the Town Clerk's office saw a flurry of excitement this week with residents pulling nomination papers for positions on the School Committee. When the Mariner went to press with just hours to go before the 5 p.m. deadline, another resident was expected to pull papers for the one-year seat and two had pulled for the three-year.

Lee Jenkins of Jerusalem Road was expected to take out papers for the one-year seat on the School Committee yesterday (Thursday). "It's time for the schools to no longer be an island but be an integral part of the com-

Kindergarten funding scarce

Cohasset is on state waiting list

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The state is singing the praises of full-day kindergarten programs but is giving limited start-up aid to towns. Currently 17 towns across the state, including Cohasset, have found themselves vying for start-up grants, and without the funding, many will not get off the ground.

The Massa-chusetts Department of Education is required to file a report to the House and Senate Committees on Ways and Means on the progress which has been made to increase the number of full-day programs, and ensure those which are operating are high quality. The report states to aid in that mission, for the past six fiscal years, the Commonwealth has been delegating funds to various school districts to help promote voluntary full-day kindergarten programs. Between two different grants under the state's Kindergarten Development Grant Program, schools have been given the funding both to begin full-day programs and keep them going.

But as with many state programs, resources are becoming scarce and since FY02, the Naval officer loved

By Samantha Brown

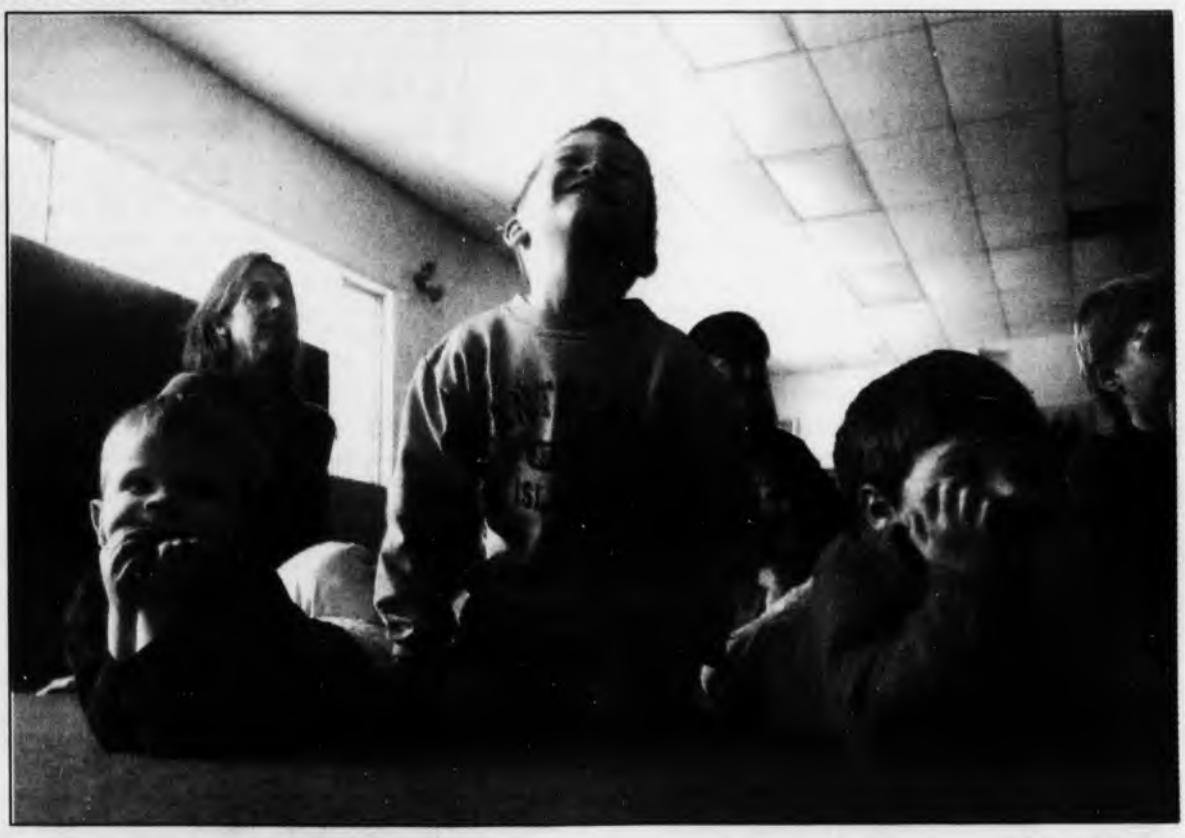
Lt. Perry Higginson Johnson spent summers in the town he loved.



Lt. Perry Higginson Johnson was always a hopeless romantic. When he met his wife Jan Pierce in 1940, knowing she was someone he couldn't and wouldn't let go, he immediately began to woo her, sending her one dozen roses the very next day. The two were married in April, 1941, and their connection continued to grow, until Johnson shipped out on a mission with the Navy reserves which would separate him too soon from the love of his life.

As was the calling of many Cohasset residents during World War II, Johnson enlisted in the service. Perhaps as a reaction to the events of the day, Johnson signed up to serve on Dec. 7, 1941 — Pearl Harbor Day. Johnson had graduated in 1938 from Harvard College, and then went to work for his father until the Navy called the reserves to active duty in late summer 1942.

Although he grew up on Beacon Hill in Boston, Johnson's family has a long history in Cohasset and it is a town they all deeply loved. Every summer, he and his three younger brothers and two younger sisters would stay at their grandfather's house on Quarry Point, next to Sandy Cove. Johnson's grandfather Fredrick Higginson's house was located at 149 Atlantic Ave., and Higginson had come back to Cohasset every year since the

TM article discussions

The Advisory Committee plans to hold four sessions to discuss Town Meeting Warrant articles and both proponents and opponents as well as any board or groups which would like to have a say in the articles will be invited to attend. The meetings will be televised, and all are welcome to sit in on the open sessions, to be held in the Selectmen's meeting room beginning at 7 p.m. At the Feb. 24 meeting the following articles will be discussed:

article 17: emergency management notification article 22: wastewater management article 23: soil erosion article 24: storm water article 25: alternative energy sources article 26: assessors compensation article 27: tax exemptions

Strategic Plan meeting success

The school department hosted a meeting last week to begin assigning small groups to serve as smaller Action Planning subcommittees to implement the various goals of the Strategic Plan. Supt. Denise Walsh said it was a very successful event and more than 50 people were in attendance. "It was a great turnout for our first session," she said.

Walsh said the school department hopes to have plans for implementing the Strategic Plan by the end of this school year, to ensure when school opens in the fall, the department will be ready. She added one of the goals of the Strategic Plan is to enhance communication with the town, and she encourages all town employees or board members to consider becoming a part of the process. "It's not too late to join," she said.

The next meeting to discuss Action Planning will be held March 8.

School interview process to begin

Applications for various school department openings are in, and screening committees will be interviewing candidates beginning this week.

"We are in competition across the state and there aren't enough people to take on these jobs," said Supt. Denise Walsh, adding the department will want to work as quickly as possible.

Currently there are openings for the position of Middle High School Principal, Assistant Principal, Curriculum Coordinator, Financial Assistant, one English teacher, one math teacher, and one French/Spanish teacher. Walsh said there will be a different screening committee appointed for each position. The interviews will be conducted over a two-week process to be followed by site visits and other due diligence. Walsh said she hopes to be able to make the appointments in April, but positions will not be filled until after the budget is formally approved at the April 2 Town Meeting.

For more information, please contact Supt. Denise Walsh at (781) 383-6111 or via e-mail at: dwalsh@cohassetk12.org.

Alternative energy sources committee

The Board of Selectmen is looking for residents to serve on a committee to investigate alternative energy sources, such as harnessing solar and wind energy. The committee will either be appointed by Town Meeting or by the board itself. It will be charged with investigating various "green" energy methods, and will report back to the Annual Town Meeting with its findings in 2006.

To date, residents Andrew Willard of Stockbridge Street and Luciano Lauretti of Jerusalem Road have expressed interest in being a part of the committee alongside John Dunn of Schofield Road, who brought the idea forward to selectmen with Merle Brown.

In his letter of intent, Willard said he believes it is "a wonderful idea for Cohasset to begin the process of exploring new ways to provide power to the town and lessen our footprint on this earth." He said he has had a strong interest in renewable energy for many years and has supported paying a higher rate on his electric bills to support the purchase of energy generated by renewable methods.

Professionally, Willard has been in manufacturing sales for the past nine years and has worked with firms that are building and inventing new energy generation and storage devices. He has worked with firms in both the fuel cell and solar energy industry along with firms specializing in energy storage with a primary focus on transportation.

Lauretti told selectmen in his letter of intent for the position that he has background experience in project financing and operations of large natural gas fired cogeneration facilities. He also has experience in banking and private equity investments.

Interested candidates should submit a letter of intent to Town Manager Bill Griffin at 41 Highland Ave., or contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Article sponsor name removed

After the Special Town Meeting, Susan Etkind, 88 Nichols Rd., said it came to her attention that her name was listed as a sponsor of Article 16, a citizen's petition dealing with recall elections. In a memo to the Board of Selectmen, Etkind said, "This was quite a shock to me and an error. I researched this at town Hall, looking at all the petitions and in writing to Mr. (Michael) Buckley."

"My name was not on any petition relative to this article. I did not support it. I regret that you were led to believe that I did," she said.

Update on Cook Estate

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she has been receiving many calls from residents interested in the Cook Estate project. She said at the next meeting of the Board of Selectmen, scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 22, members of the Senior Housing Committee and Sewer Commission are going to be asked to attend the meeting to provide an update. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will be held in the Selectmen's meeting room. All are welcome to attend, and the meeting will also be televised.

Marlette, Evans are featured

On the next edition of Our Town, scheduled to begin showing on Thursday, Feb. 24, at 8:30 p.m., Comcast channel 10, meet incumbent Town Moderator George Marlette and election challenger for that position Dan Evans.

Find out what Our Town roving reporter Rich Ofsthun finds when he goes out looking for hidden agendas in Cohasset.

Our Town will host the televised candidates debates for those running in contested races. March your calendars for March 23 for studio taping!

Our Town will also be showing in two new/additional times slots: Mondays at 9 p.m. and Tuesday 9:30. Both on Comcast channel 10. Our Town invites viewers to share their thoughts, questions and ideas by e-mail to OurTown@theclickstudio.com. Tune in.

Train assistants provide update on Greenbush project in town

Beechwood Street crossing problematic

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In the month since Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan were appointed as Special Assistants to the Town Manager for the Greenbush rail restoration project, much has been accomplished as the two have hit the ground running, prioritizing and tackling each project head on.

Gruber said right away, the two found there was an immediate need to get down to business. He said there were many drawing packages the town was missing, and still others the town had not yet responded to, including plans for the intersection of Spring and Pond streets, which had been collecting dust at Town Hall.

"We only had until Jan 31 to make comments," he said. The men were appointed Jan. 11.

Gruber and Brennan immediately scheduled a neighborhood meeting, which needed to be rescheduled due to the blizzard. In the end, Gruber said roughly eight abutters, members of the police and fire departments including the safety officer, attended the meeting. "We got a good number of comments," he said, which have been submitted to the MBTA.

Brennan and Gruber have also had a pre-construction meeting with the MBTA and conservation issues during construction were discussed as a top priority. Brennan said the Department of Environmental Protection was there, which served as a good advocate for the town.

The MBTA has already begun marking trees for brush clearing in the right of way. Gruber said it is important to note the trees which are marked are the ones that are being saved, and all trees between two marked trees are the ones which will be removed. Any tree with a red and black striped ribbon will be left alone, he said.

Brennan said MBTA officials said at the meeting that clearing would be complete by March. However, the point was raised that various migratory animals would be in transit until possibly May, and clearing cannot be done during migratory periods, which will delay the plans. Digging for the tracks would follow, and then station work would begin. It is estimated the sites will be ready for wetland restoration by the spring of 2006, but the same problem with migratory animals would be encountered, which would push the project back an additional few months. At that point, the MBTA can begin laying the tracks.

Another area of concern is the crossing at Beechwood Street. Gruber said the configuration of the driveway located at 39 Beechwood St., a Victorian home which has been converted into condominiums, coupled with the grade crossing, has made for an unsafe situation.

Currently, viewing the property from the street, the driveway for the condominiums runs from the back of the house and along the right side of the property, virtually straight down toward the street. The rail bed runs almost parallel with the driveway, which needs to be relocated as it is too close to the crossing.

Plans have changed from implementing four-quad gates to standard crossings at Beechwood Street because the fire department has been told it will help with delays as the gates will be down for a shorter amount of time. Because only two gates will be implemented, median barriers will be installed on either side of the crossing as a safety measure, which is required by the MBTA for whistle-free train corridors. Median barriers are a little higher than a standard curb and are roughly four feet wide.

Gruber said at this point, "The T is ready to throw up its hands," because the Beechwood crossing has been an issue for so long. However, he said he believes it is a serious safety issue and cannot be forgotten. He said the way the driveway has been laid out, it is imperative for the ladder truck to arrive on the scene first because it may not be able to fit up the driveway if the two pumper trucks make it there first. A situation like that is not a solution in his eyes.

The way the plans are currently drawn suggests that a driver would need to make a perfect turn when coming down Beechwood Street from South Main Street to make a right into the driveway.

In addition, the way the plans are currently drawn suggests that a driver would need to make a perfect turn when coming down Beechwood Street from South Main Street to make a right into the driveway. "I've never seen a driver that did it to the inch," Gruber said. He said he and Brennan are going to mark the proposed driveway in chalk in an empty parking lot, possibly at one of the schools during vacation week, and use the ladder truck — the department's largest vehicle — to test what the turning radius really is and what would be safe for the driveway.

The town parking lot is the "naughtiest problem we've come across," said Gruber, adding the mitigation agreement calls for 182 parking spaces and plans currently show 149. Gruber said part of the problem was the fact the MBTA designed the lot using its own parking measurements, 8-1/2 feet by17 feet, when the town requires 9-1/2 feet by 20 feet per zoning regulations. Making that change alone brought the number down to roughly 160 spaces.

Other changes to the lot further reduced parking spaces, and that is an issue Brennan and Gruber hope to have an answer to by the end of the month. "Right now we're looking at every piece of unbuilt property down there," which could potentially be purchased to make way for more parking. Gruber and Brennan will also be doing their best to see how many spots the town is actually working with now, as it is hard to tell in light of the construction which is taking place in the lot.

In addition, certain spots could be considered as 15 minute or employee only parking to help keep the spaces open which are closest to the shops for those doing quick errands, but that would be a change the Town Manager would have to decide to make.

For more information on the Greenbush project, please contact either Tom Gruber, Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Affairs via e-mail at cgbaffairs@townofcohasset.org or Mark Brennan, Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Engineering at cgbengineering@townofcohasset.org. Village project nearing deadline

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After years of discussion and many drafts, plans for the Downtown Revitalization project are still not set in stone. Without a firm direction, the project cannot move forward, and with a deadline of May 30 to use funding from grants, an extension will be required.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer attended a meeting last week of the Downtown Village Revitalization Review Committee, and said there is still much work to be done before the project can move ahead. With the upcoming MBTA Greenbush line construction planned by the municipal parking lot, the town needs to have firm plans in place for the improvements it will make on its own in the adjacent area.

"We're going to end up with fewer spaces if we don't do something," Dormitzer said.

The review committee has been charged with looking over and "tweaking" plans for the downtown area, submitted by the Waterfield Design Group, consulting engineers based out of Winchester. The Waterfield engineers were hired by Former Town Manager Mark Haddad in the spring of 2002. The goal of the project is to update the streets and sidewalks of the downtown area, making the Village more aesthetically pleasing. Improvements are slated to take place from South Main Street by the Red Lion Inn down to the intersection of Depot Court, and around the corner, to the intersection at Ripley Road and Pleasant Street.

Dormitzer said further meetings of the committee are scheduled for the coming weeks and members will be reporting back to the Board of Selectmen with suggestions. However, because out of the 15 companies that requested information on the project, only one bid was submitted, it suggests there is something unattractive about the project as a whole, and Dormitzer said the town must take another look at the plans and potentially make some changes in its approach.

At previous meetings of the Board of Selectmen, Dormitzer has suggested splitting the project into parts and putting it out to bid again. If the town chooses to go that route, it could potentially find experts willing to work solely on their area of expertise, and the project could come together one piece at a time. Areas companies tend to specialize in are paving, sidewalks, excavation and utilities, and curbing, he said.

Dormitzer said of the $1.5 million the town originally had to make the improvements, $1,353,357 remains, which will have to include provisions to pay for construction administration and oversight. He said a good portion of the money which has been spent to date was paid out to the Waterfield Design Group for redesign work. Dormitzer said in his view, the funds remaining are not adequate to carry out the rest of the project, "unless we can bid out more effectively."

The new streetscape is part of the $1.8 million Village Revitalization Project, which is being paid for by grants and private donations. The project has been in the works for upwards of seven years and the discussions surrounding the design of the Village streetscape have been going on for 2-1/2 years. The PWED grant the town has received to help pay for the project will expire May 30, unless the town can secure an extension. Town Manager Bill Griffin said he will send a letter requesting an extension this week or next.

Cohasset on waiting list for full-day kindergarten grant money to help cover full-day kindergarten start up costs has not been available. As a result, towns like Cohasset which would like to begin implementing full-day programs but have limited funding with which to work in order to begin the program on its own, have been put on a wait list until more funding becomes available. In addition to Cohasset, the towns of Duxbury, Randolph, Shrewsbury, Walpole, and Westwood are also on the list.

"If and when there are additional kindergarten grant monies, we're in line, and other communities are there with us," said Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh. The school department has been faced with some budgetary trouble as many line items from FY05 were either underbudgeted or not budgeted at all. At the recommendation of Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan, Walsh has proposed optional tuition based full-day kindergarten as a way to help generate revenue for the district as well as provide Cohasset's youngest students with more opportunities in education.

"If and when there are additional kindergarten grant monies, we're in line, and other communities are there with us."
— Supt. of Schools
Denise Walsh

The proposed FY06 budget for the schools includes projected tuition revenue from full-day kindergarten enrollment, totaling $108,000, based on the assumption 60 children will attend at a tuition rate of $1,800 each. It also includes projected tuition from the start up of a new school-run preschool, totaling $22,000. Currently, a preschool is being run by the South Shore Educational Collaborative out of the Osgood School. If the preschool program is run by the school, it will follow the same curriculum frameworks as the higher grade levels, which as a private preschool the SSEC classes are not required to do, and the school district will receive tuition payments.

The budget assumes grants for both the preschool and full-day kindergarten programs together will total $50,000. It is estimated it will cost $15,000 to begin the preschool program. However, Sheehan has recommended hiring an additional kindergarten teacher to better accommodate the full-day kindergarten program.

Although drafts of the FY06 budget currently include offsets from grants, the DOE progress report also states during FY05 there were no funds available to aid towns in beginning full-day programs.

While funding poses a problem, the space to host the programs does not, which is not a luxury all school districts have. The Cohasset public schools have come through a lengthy construction and renovation process which has yielded bigger buildings, meaning the extra children which will be in the building all day long can be easily accommodated.

For more information on full-day kindergarten, please contact Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan at (781) 383-6117. Packets of information are available at the school.

Naval officer loved life

1880s.

On Sundays during the summer, Johnson's youngest sister Rosmond Cross remembers how their father Howard Johnson, affectionately known as "Mr. J" would take Perry, along with his sister Kathy and brother Howard, to Sunday school at the Unitarian Church. The elder Howard would drop the children off, and would then play a round of golf. The three children would walk home from the service together, and the first one home would be allowed to lick the ice cream churn. Cross said without fail, Perry was always ahead of the rest.

The three children would walk home from the service together, and the first one home would be allowed to lick the ice cream churn.

After Johnson was married, he and his wife would spend the summers together in Cohasset. Jan said she remembers spending summer days by the "cocktail bar," a special flat area in the granite side of Sandy Cove. Johnson's father would set out two long planks and roast 20 to 30 lobsters at a time, but dinner came at a price. He wouldn't dish them out until one could prove they were able to split their own lobster. Jan said she can still split a lobster.

Johnson's cousin Charlie Higginson, although much younger, remembers fondly looking up to his older relative. Higginson said he remembers the older cousins playing noisy games of softball on Quarry Point. Higginson said he also remembers the large fishing parties from the dock on the elder Howard's motor boat, "The Loon." Those looking for a big catch would use long bamboo poles with green fiddler crabs for bait. Higginson said although he was too young to go, he remembers catching the green fiddler crabs for those venturing out onto the high seas.

When Johnson shipped out, he was stationed on the USS DeHaven I (DD-469), a destroyer escort built at the Bath, Maine shipyard that was attached to the Pacific Fleet in the Solomon Islands. The ship was operating near Salvo on Feb. 25, 1943 when her air support missed her and she was attacked by Japanese kamikazes. Johnson, as second in command, was at that time a deck officer. Rushing to the aid of a comrade, he had just carried a wounded sailor into the ward room for medical attention when the destroyer was hit.

The ship did not sink immediately, but in the end roughly 38 were wounded and 167 men were lost. Among those who did not return home was Johnson, whose body was never recovered. Johnson was only 27 years old.

Johnson is remembered by many for his service to the country. His name is on a plaque, located at the Memorial Chapel at Harvard College, which was dedicated to the members of the Harvard University Class of 1938 who gave their lives for their country. Fellow Cohasset resident Howard Gleason is also memorialized in the chapel.

In addition, Cohasset residents are reminded of Johnson's sacrifice every day as they pass by the memorial square dedicated in his memory at the intersection of Atlantic Avenue and Beach Street, just down the road from his grandfather's house, where he spent so many memorable summers.

Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt provided the Mariner with the information for this article. For more information on Perry Higginson Johnson or any of the Cohasset veterans who have paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom, please visit the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

School cuts outlined to reduce FY'06 budget

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school department budget is on the chopping block for a second year in a row — with officials looking at potential cuts in the event an override fails at the annual Town Meeting.

School officials are facing roughly $700,000 gap between what they say they need and what the town has said it can afford to give. The gap in costs is due largely in part to the increase in special education out-of-district tuitions. Although the town has agreed to give the school department a 2 percent increase over last year's budget, school leaders are contending with about a $500,000 increase in special education tuitions alone, which must be funded. Proposed cuts to the budget have been considered for the 3.8 percent operational budget increase, excluding the 4.3 percent increase for special education tuitions.

Although nothing has been set in stone, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh made some suggestions to the School Committee at its Feb. 10 meeting. The School Committee was slated to meet with the Advisory Committee and Board of Selectmen Wednesday, Feb. 16, to further discuss the cuts, but the meeting was cancelled. Walsh has met with each of the building principals and said cuts have been considered in tiers, eventually arriving at a budget figure which amounts to the 2 percent increase the town is proposing excluding special education costs.

However, Walsh said the trouble with making cuts to a needs-based budget is, "they're all needs."

Walsh has suggested cutting the $50,000 maintenance budget by $40,000. She said although she understands the importance of maintaining the buildings, it is her understanding the town has $120,000 budgeted for building maintenance and perhaps that is a cost that shouldn't be included in the school budget. She said there are certain compulsory measures the schools need to take by law, but transferring some of the costs to the town side should be discussed.
